How To Analyze Yourself, Your Friends, Business Associates, Employers, Employees, Famous People

Handwriting Analysis is one of the most fascinating studies you can imagine. Everyone is interested in knowing more about their friends and people they come in contact with. Thousands of exciting court trials have been decided by the reports of handwriting experts; hundreds of mysteries solved. Business firms often have every employment application analyzed for reliability, honesty, ability, etc., before engaging anyone. This Handwriting Analysis Chart has been Prepared by a Famous Handwriting Expert

Leon York has analyzed thousands of specimens of handwriting. Newspapers and magazines engage him constantly to analyze the writing of famous people. He startled readers with his findings regarding the Lindbergh kidnap ransom notes; and the signatures of little Princess Elizabeth and Rose, the daughters of the King of England. He is on the staff of scores of business firms. Clubs, societies, chambers of commerce hear his lectures and are often amazed at what he finds in just a line or two of writing. The U. S. Departments of Justice and the Treasury often call in these experts to help them run down criminals and counterfeiters.

While we can not guarantee the accuracy of all of the claims made by the experts, we do hope that this booklet

May Help You to Greater Happiness and Success; Improve Yourself; Avoid Mistakes.

Many people say they have been surprised that handwriting analysis revealed many things about friends and others that they would probably not have known otherwise. Thousands have marvelled at how it revealed some of their own innermost traits which they thought were concealed from everyone else. You may find that with some of the helpful suggestions that follow, if they apply to you, you can make yourself more valuable, more likeable, more successful. It may help you to avoid costly mistakes in your relations with others. You may be judging some unfairly, or you may be relying upon a person who, according to the experts, is not worthy of your confidence. Regardless of this, we are sure you will find the following pages fascinating, amusing, entertaining and perhaps instructive. We hope it gives you many hours of enjoyment and diversion, and perhaps unexpected thrills and surprises.

With the Best Wishes of

Form, or General Appearance

analysis.*

Script ornamentated with fancy effects indicates artistic, creative, egotistic and sometimes conceited inclinations, depending upon the amount of unnecessary flourishes. Other details, such as pressure, spacing, slope, size, etc., will modify the analysis in proportion. If the script is severely plain, the writer is given to simplicity, practicality, consideration towards others, as well as himself.

Size of the Writing

*Why should we have a depression
now.*

Large writing denotes several phases of character. A big-hearted person will write with larger script. Usually it is a sign of generosity and benevolence. Vanity can be inferred, also. When we become suddenly rich, our script tends to become larger in proportion to our being liberal-handed. People who write large dislike detail work. They are usually sociable and talkative. Conscientiousness is often one of their most outstanding characteristics. Many persons who write extra large script frequently border on certain types of mental derangement.

as to how much handwriting I

Small writing denotes one who is keenly analytical and a shrewd thinker. They concentrate deeply and want to know all about anything they become interested in or do. A strong personality and a strong mind, generally.

Medium sized handwriting reflects a medium between the two extremes. Such writers combine modesty with ambition, with due regard for others. It usually denotes the hard workers—more of the physical type than the mental or intellectual. These people are peaceful, law abiding, easy, agreeable persons who make good neighbors and splendid associates.

NO HEADACHES FOR TEN YEARS

"More than 20 years ago I started to use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after trials of different remedies for dyspepsia, but did not get much help. I soon found Stuart's a great help. Have not had a headache for more than 10 years and many other afflictions have passed away."

—C. W. C., New York.

Pressure of the Writing

In the muddes
depression (let/er)

Heavy writing indicates self-assurance, domineering traits and assertiveness, which may often result in such folks being disliked. When heavy pressure is combined with larger size script, it denotes conceit, selfishness and a desire to rule.

To find it's hard

Very heavy or muddy looking script denotes those who like good things to eat and drink—the more physical pleasures of life. Extreme cases indicate a tendency to lack of control of the appetites, passions and emotions.

I'm interested in you.

Medium pressure denotes those who are sincere, genuine, dependable, and generally ready to give a hand, extend personal service or effort, and good advice and comfort.

I have been in my present position 9 years

[Signature]

Very fine writing reflects one who is apt to be more interested in spiritual matters, rather than the material things. They are usually people of refinement and good taste, with peaceable, sociable tendencies in general.

Spacing of the Letters

Elizabeth

Broader spacing denotes one who is extremely sociable, a generous spender, and usually one who dislikes being "crowded" anywhere. If other signs emphasize these indications, extravagance may be indicated—something of the "easy-come, easy-go" traits. Such people often do things on impulse; their judgment is apt not to be too sound or practical for this reason. They do not stop to think deeply or reason things out thoroughly before they act, and often lack concentration on important problems. They are very fine people socially, enjoying the friendship of associates and companions, are usually happy and pleasant company, and manage to smile in spite of setbacks.

Mr. Tol:

Being so informed with the necessary

Closely-crowded script denotes one who likes to hold his thoughts close to himself. They are secretive, cautious and reticent, and probably worry too much, even about details that are trivial and unimportant. Hence they may overdo pessimism, suspicion, caution, etc. in their mental attitude, both about themselves and others.

If the spacing is very close, we can infer one who is extremely economizing and careful of all expenditures.

thanks for your interest

Where the spacing is neatly and proportionately done, it indicates a person who is methodical, careful, precise, uses good judgment and is blessed with an admirable mental balance. Such people make fine business men or women, and are usually fine leaders, showing splendid balance between initiative and mental control.

Spacing that is uneven, disarranged and sprawling often indicates a tendency to be untidy, careless, flighty, unstable and not always dependable. Impulsiveness, changeability and nervousness are usually evident here.

Slope or Slant of Writing

There's life there's

Slope that is midway between the vertical and the extremely falling-down, denotes a writer who is friendly, loving, genial, affectionate and trustworthy. They are ever on the go; like to meet people, and are generally keen judges of human nature.

Mr. Tolson
Great deal of my

When the slope is extremely forward, or falling-down, it denotes one who is perhaps too anxious to try to please others, often to the point of being subservient or "easy". They are, however, loyal, energetic, enthusiastic and personally dependable, though sometimes inclined to be somewhat hasty and impulsive.

LIKE THEM FINE

"I have purchased a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and like them fine."—Vern W., Illinois.

Will my health my Will my place of
 Will there be a house

Vertical slope denotes inclinations to be self-centered and not much concerned about being neighborly or helpful. Such people are ever careful of results; they use good judgment and restraint; do not like to be rushed into anything or made to do anything against their inclination. Should guard against being stubborn and obstinate.

be as happy a one, as

Mr. L. E. York
 2641 Wallon St.

Backhand writing usually denotes people who like to have others do things for them. They are generally good executives, not over-industrious, and will not extend any great effort unless personally interested in a thing. Such writers are not always accurate or reliable, when other signs indicate or strengthen the selfish traits.

Style — Whether Rounded or Angular

correspondence

Angular script denotes those who are more analytical than they are trusting; more skeptical than believing. They are usually of the nervous and energetic type if they use the angular script because it is easier and faster to write that way. They are quick mentally as well as physically, and very active.

Did you pages have mercy!

Rounded script indicates those who are more leisurely and love personal ease and comforts. Since they are never in too great a hurry, they exercise cool judgment and a resolute disposition.

NO OTHER LAXATIVE SO PLEASANT

"There is not a laxative I have ever taken that has done me more good than those Calcium Wafers (Laxative Compound) — so pleasant to take and because one can leave them off — reduce the tablets to your satisfaction."

—F. D. H., Minn.

in the business world take care of my

Often you will find a combination of writing that has some of both the rounded and the angular features in it, indicating that they are not very ardent, but merely "average folks," as you might say, with the desire to get along with as little effort as possible.

Connected and Disconnected Writing

try to discuss these points be able to call anytime you can get in

Where the letters are connected normally, it denotes a person of practical, sound judgment, not given to idle theorizing or taking things too much for granted. This is the typical "show-me-type, with good reasoning powers and a cautious, analytical mind.

Shall I make a life

If letters are broken in their continuity, it denotes one who might want to follow hunches or intuition—to take chances, or act upon things without first making sure of everything involved, or possible results. Some of these people are gifted with unusual foresight and follow their inclinations, acting upon things just as they happen to feel at the moment.

I think some of the
have to dip down

Some writing has the letters and words running together, indicating one who is animated, nervous, hasty and anxious for results, sometimes impatient, and inclined to be perhaps too strnog-willed, almost stubborn.

CAN'T PRAISE THEM ENOUGH

" . . . I wish you would tell over the radio just what Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets did for Andrew Drayer. He suffered with stomach acidity and nothing seemed to help him until we heard your ad over the air about these wonderful pills. He cannot praise them enough for what they did for him."—A. and J. D., Pennsylvania.

Slant of the Lines of Writing

Dear Sir

*As a member of the journal
I have been assigned to obtain of a person prominent for some
I would like to have you I due to your genius at*

Where the lines tend to go up hill it denotes a writer who is peppy, optimistic, unafraid and sometimes willful to a marked degree. Many successful writers show a decided up-hill slant to their script, indicative of this determination to express their own ideas without outside interference.

which makes us what we are at any given time.

A handwriting expert interprets and articulates it.

If the lines of the script appear to be falling down on the page, it usually indicates a writer who becomes easily discouraged. They should try to build up more confidence in themselves and also sharpen their initiative powers and learn to "follow-through" more consistently. They often have strong wishes and desires for accomplishment, but do not apply the necessary ambition and perseverance.

Where lines droop very much, we can surmise that actual ill health and general lack of physical vigor is troubling the writer. Lines that go straight across the page show one who is strong physically, usually with considerable strength of character, and the ability to stand up under much strain and exertion. They are usually very steadfast and reliable; honest and trustworthy.

Margins

Where a margin of space is allowed on the left side of the writing, it indicates a person who is "right" in many respects; a person who always likes to do the conventional things; who observes the niceties of life and who is mentally alert, observant of the feelings of others.

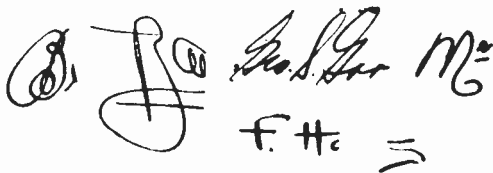

Where there is no margin, and the entire sheet is filled with writing, the person will likely be thrifty, indifferent to criticism, not always formal, and may at times be inclined to be careless or untidy. Other signs would determine to what extent these traits would apply.

Where there is a margin at the top of the page of writing, and then begins to fill out the marginal space as it goes down the page, such a person is governed by motives of thrift and simplicity, yet would also like to conform to the ways and methods followed by most other people.

MIGHTY FINE, THEY SAY

"I find that Stuart's Tablets are mighty fine and I wouldn't be without them."—Mrs. B. M., Chicago, Ill.

Capitals

Capitals excessively ornamented denote love of self, egotism, love of display, vanity and sometimes conceit.

Where the capitals are rather tall and exaggerated, there are signs of pompousness and personal pride in their own reputation, talents and abilities.

Capitals severely plain but not too low show a writer of good taste, democratic spirit, and usually a genial wit.

Capitals emphasized with bold penstrokes (heavy pressure) indicate love of pleasure, leisure, and a preference to avoid personal over-exertion. Such persons are not apt to always continue to work by the sweat of their brow.

Capitals that are small in proportion to the other writing infer a person who is modest, timid and reticent. Cultivation of more self-reliance and stronger belief in their own abilities will often help such people to be very much happier and more successful.

Capitals made in the form of several severely plain, disconnected strokes denote writers who are original, artistic, creative and inventive. They should guard against becoming too critical, impatient, faultfinding and exacting with others.

Ending of Words — Extended Finals

I telephoned day afternoon 1
tiffin regar

Where the last letter ends as if chopped off without the finishing stroke to complete the letter, it denotes one who is saving, cautious, shrewd, calculating, careful. An extreme example of this might indicate miserliness.

dollar as soon

When the final stroke extends outwardly at an angle, it denotes one who is almost always generous, charitable and ready to help; willing to aid and comfort others freely.

My name is
I like five

If there are return "hooks" after or on the final stroke, it is pretty sure to indicate selfishness. Such people are usually the type more willing to receive than give.

• Reserve and Humility  shump

When the final stroke extends straight down below the line of writing, such a person should guard against being perverse, opinionated and stubborn. They are not easily swayed. They often stand in the way of their own happiness because of intolerance and unwillingness to properly value the opinions and ideas of others.

Lions Club meeting

When the finals rise upward above the line of script, the writer is given to study and pursuits of an intellectual nature. This is a splendid trait, if they will mix it with sound, practical thinking and realities.

There are a number of other forms of final endings, but those illustrated are those most frequently found.

Circle Letters Such as d, a, g, o

The circle letters such as D-A-G-O tell a great deal of incidental sidelights that are helpful in judging the inclinations and aptitudes of writers.

life go along

If the letters mentioned are closed tight, and then loop over, they denote a person of extreme caution, suspicion, and possibly even hypocrisy or even falsehood. Such persons are very reserved and uncommunicative; they do not mix well with others; prefer their own company and hence are not as sociable or friendly as they should be.

Where the opened O or A, also the D or G are repeatedly open we can assume that the writer is openmouthed, frank, outspoken. You cannot always trust such persons with valuable information or secrets or matters of extreme importance. They usually do not concentrate deeply, and in some cases have to be reminded that they are inclined to be remiss in their duties and responsibilities. These open letters imply that they let the door too wide open, allowing money, confidences and important things to escape too freely.

you don't know how much I appreciate

At times you find writing which contains some closed and some open letters. Whichever occurs more often will indicate how best to judge the traits of such persons.

shade trees

The small "D" written regularly with double straight stem indicates a person of dignity, reserve, cautious of their conduct.

Please find

Small "D" like this signifies intellectual pursuits and scholarship, with high ideals. These persons are critical, analytical and possessed of good taste and simplicity.

I would

Persons writing small "D" with a fancy curved upper ending stroke are fun loving, fanciful, sometimes flirtatious, and like good company and admiration.

To remain

As with small letter "T", when the final stroke is brought down below the line, it denotes one who is stubborn, strong willed and wants his own way. Apt to be obstinate.

Capital Letters: M, N, V, W

Vain No Wet

When these capital letters are written with the incurve as shown, it indicates sensitiveness, pride, egotism, sometimes being opinionated, depending upon the amount of pressure.

Merry Ned

When started with an indented beginning stroke, the writers are fun loving, cheerful, optimistic, with a sense of humor.

Beginning Strokes of Letters

be brave my lad

Where words begin without usual or normal beginning strokes it reflects a sense of sufficiency, time-saving, and given to being practical rather than conventional.

Little starting hooks or checks show speed, animation, energy.

Where there is a bent, indented longer beginning stroke it denotes love of humor, sociability, love of company.

If that longer stroke is straight (not bent or indented) the writer is apt to be crabbed, cranky, impatient, unfriendly and rather quarrelsome.

Signatures

They are quite important because they reflect to a great extent our feeling of self-importance and material welfare. They are not always reliable, because they are usually written with more care and concentration. When the signature is written the same as in the rest of the writing, it denotes a "regular" person, considerate and neighborly.

If the signature is very much different from the other handwriting, the writer thinks much of his self importance, social position, and material circumstances.

If it is much larger than the regular script, it denotes aggressiveness, sometimes gruffness and aloofness.

A straight line underscored below the signature shows a person sure of himself and his views and statements.

A flourish under the signature leans toward vanity, pretense or affectation, depending on how fancy it is.

Hooks either at the beginning or end of the underscore indicate the "go-getter"—an energetic, active and aggressive individual who will not take "no" for an answer.

Loop Letters: f, g, h, j, k, l, y, z

When the loops on these letters are longer above the line than below the line, the writer is apt to be brainy and interested in things which concern study, thought, decision.

Where such loops are longer below the line (F-G-J) the writer is likely to be peppy, lively, fond of athletics, and would rather be more physically active than engaged in purely mental pursuits. Such folks are usually successful.

igh

Where the lower loops are much shorter in proportion to the rest of the script, the writer is often lacking in vigor and ambition, and may be physically ill or weak.

Thursday

Lower loops made as merely a straight stroke indicate persons of importance. Executives and busy people have little time for details, hence they do not always stop to complete the loop. This sign usually goes with writing that has heavy pressure, also.

anywhere

Where the lower loop is larger than normal, or inflated, the writer is usually quick and lively, and generally an interesting talker.

you give

Writers who turn the lower loop to the right are usually kindly, willing, sympathetic and thoughtful of others.

so far

On the other hand, if the lower loop is reversed, look for one who is languid, inert, indolent, not active.

life

You will often find the letter "g" made to look like the figure 8. That usually signifies a person who is agile, alert, snappy and smiling.

for

When the lower loops are exceedingly long, the person is apt to be meddlesome, "nosey," and prone to exaggeration.

fancy & grab

Should you find a fantastic triangle or hooked sort of lower loop, it indicates a person who is notional, very vain, and wanting to do things the longest way about.

While the letter "b" is not usually regarded as a looped letter, some are written without any loop, indicating them as being brief, quick, animated, sometimes curt. Some writers reverse the "b" loop, indicating one who is sensitive, touchy, argumentative and often self-centered.

The letter "d" is not at all a looped letter, but quite often written with one, when it denotes one who takes offense very easily, given to much thought and reading. The cultured type.

If the "d" loop is extra large the writer will usually be touchy, sensitive, love the elegant and refined.

The person who writes the "d" with one single line will be careful of his conduct, perhaps prudish and usually a stickler for form. They do not like to be criticised.

You will find two kinds of letter "e"—those who use the Latin "e" are generally average, regular folks.

Those who write the Greek "e" frequently, are eager for more learning and ambitious for greater success. When the Greek "e" is used throughout, it is usually an affectation or the desire to "show off."

Those who are in a great hurry dot their "i" anywhere without any thought about it. However, where the dot is placed squarely above the "i" the person will usually be a stickler for detail, accurate, painstaking, exact and clever.

Where the dot is habitually left out, there is thoughtlessness and a desire to get things done with least effort.

The circular dot is not usually a favorable indication and is generally regarded as an affectation.

If the dot is in the form of a dash, it indicates temper and irritability, along with impatience.

If made large or heavy, indications point to a "bossy" nature, and the desire to force the writer's will on others.

When the "i" dots are large and long, there is restlessness and the desire for change or travel.

COULDN'T GET ALONG WITHOUT THEM

"I always keep Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on hand . . . for I am tortured with indigestion and I find them very helpful; in fact I don't think I could get along without them."—Mrs. S. E. M., Indiana.

I am

The long, tall, well-formed "I" shows self respect. When it is elaborately ornamented, it indicates pride, perhaps vanity.

I have

The small capital "I" shows modesty in proportion to size. There are not six writers who make their letter "I" alike!

many

The letter "m" and "n" are often written like the letters "w" and "u". People who do not write very much usually write the "m" and "n" in the normal way. Where these show up in practised, carefully rounded script, the writer is apt to be slower in action, careful, honest, capable, affable.

Where m and n appear like w and u, the writer is likely to be a more advanced type of thinker, able to quickly adapt himself to conditions and to people and surroundings. They are usually able to get what they want when they go after it.

Burkham

The letter "p" is not considered a loop letter, but often written with a loop. If the loop is long and broad, the writer is quite likely to be active, industrious, willing, alert and have a sense of humor.

physical distress, if the body of the script shows weakness and lack of vigor.

Persons who write the letter in the regular way, without a loop, are also "regular," and conform to conventions closely.

analysis

When writing tends to get smaller towards the end of a word, there are indications of tactfulness, sometimes a crafty, "foxy" tendency, depending upon whether it is in angular or rounded script.

or otherwise?

RELIEF FROM VERY FIRST DOSE

"I felt a relief from the first dose. I had such a terrible sickness and nasty, gaggy feeling in my throat for years . . . life was not worth living. Your constipation remedy is also wonderful."—W. A. S., Pennsylvania.

Writing that gets larger toward the end of the word means a desire to get over-enthusiastic about things and perhaps to exaggerate.

Vegetable Charcoal and Magnesium Carbonate

Preferred by many for the way they absorb many times their own bulk of stomach and intestinal gases, and recommended for sweetening breath and absorbing disagreeable odors and gases. Relief is usually prompt and effective. One or two will generally quickly dispell gases, heartburn, water brash, distress and heaviness, distended abdomen, rumblings and gurglings in bowels and intestines, and other common discomforts that often follow even ordinary eating and drinking, and especially after over-indulgence.

STUART'S LAXATIVE COMPOUND

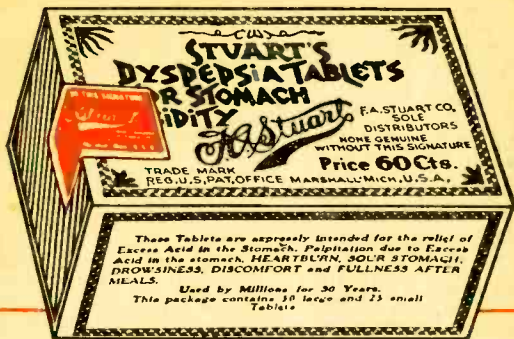

A mild, gentle, effective preparation especially intended for temporary constipation and for the pleasant relief of headache and other discomforts that often accompany a constipated condition. STUART'S LAXATIVE COMPOUND does not shock the system, but encourages the natural movement of the muscles of the intestinal tract. Avoids the need of taking harsh cathartics or purges or sickening salts. Truly effective for adults, yet gentle enough for children. Endorsed by users for years. Insist upon the genuine, always!

Pocket size of 15 tablets, 10 cents.

Economy family size of 100 tablets for 60 cents.
