Quick guide to Yearbook sections

Information in this YEARBOOK is divided into homogeneous sections as described in the boxes at right. Here's how to locate a section rapidly:

Hold the YEARBOOK in your left hand. With your right hand bend the book back so that the black markings on the right edges of the pages appear. If you wish to find a page in the A section, for example, place your right thumb over the black bar to the right of the letter A at upper right on this page and riffle through all pages containing a similar black bar in the same position; at the end of that sequence of marking will appear the first page of the A section. The same procedure can be used to find the beginning of any other section, starting with your thumb on the black bar on this page to the right of the letter of the section you wish to locate.

DO YOU KNOW THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN “SOFTWARE” AND “HARDWARE”?

Software is what a television station provides—news programs, entertainment, ideas, content

Mobile TV Systems: TV coverage capability in a class by itself. Goes anywhere, sees everything. Whether it's two cameras or twelve, CBS Laboratories will design and produce vans for your particular needs.

Cameras for special television needs. The sophisticated Minicam III multi-purpose wireless camera may be used at waist-level, eye-level, or periscope viewing positions.

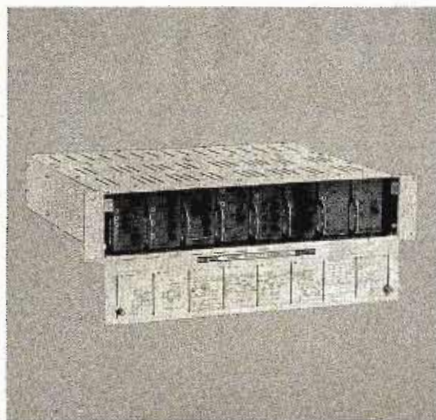

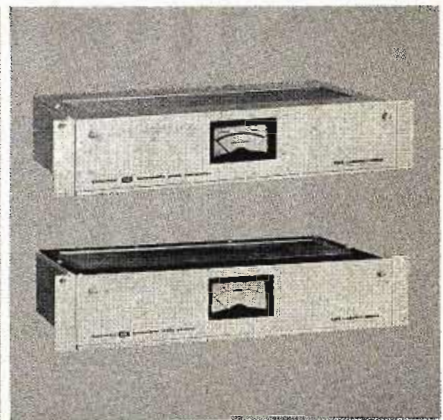

Image Enhancers for color or monochrome TV cameras. Provides both vertical and horizontal aperture equalization — plus "crispening" Made only by CBS Laboratories.

Audimax/Volumax: Provides automatic, hands-off audio level and modulation control — without distortion. Available in AM, FM, and FM stereo.

Hardware is what CBS Laboratories Professional Products designs and produces—the best in broadcast equipment

The greatest television program in the world is no better than the hardware that produces it. And there's no better hardware made than the equipment that bears the label, "CBS Laboratories".

Whether it's precise automatic audio controls, television display systems, video distribution and control equipment, or highly versatile mobile TV systems, these Professional Products will give your software the sound and picture quality it deserves.

And with greater profit. Reason? Not because the equipment is the least expensive. It's not. But because it's the best. That means a one-time investment in quality—and that's the kind that pays off.

It's good business to buy the best answers to equipment problems. So if you are looking for a solution to a problem—or even if you don't think there is a solution—write or call us collect. We're on your side.

Extent of Broadcast Editorializing

Over 60% of AM stations, over 45% of TV's, and over 45% of FM's are now editorializing, at least occasionally, according to results of a nationwide survey for the BROADCASTING YEARBOOK.

The editorializing survey was obtained from the YEARBOOK questionnaire sent to all radio and TV stations. Here are the results:

	AM	FM	TV
Stations editorializing	1,982	179	215
Stations answering editorializing question	3,155	388	444
Percent editorializing	62.8%	46.0%	48.4%
Percent editorializing daily	10.7%	9.3%	11.2%
Percent editorializing weekly	19.2%	8.8%	7.8%
Percent editorializing occasionally	32.9%	27.9%	29.4%

Only FM stations that are independently programed are considered in this survey.

Color takes over American TV

Station and network investment tops $350 million with more than 12 million color receivers in use; more than 12,000 radio stations in 200 countries

The upswing to color television continued to be a dominant feature of the broadcasting picture in 1967, both in the U. S. and abroad.

As the year began a study by BROADCASTING found the three major networks had virtually completed their conversion to color, while stations in most of the top-100 markets and in many smaller communities had also joined in the rush to color. By 1967 the networks had put an estimated $142 million into color equipment and stations had spent $170.4 million, with another $54 million in color gear on order.

By Oct. 1, according to estimates by NBC, the number of U. S. homes with color sets had risen 56% since Oct. 1, 1966, to 12,670,000. NBC's periodic estimates are based on a variety of industry sources and surveys, including reports by manufacturers and distributors. Sales of color sets were expected to reach 5.5 million in 1967, up from 5 million the previous year, and were expected to pass the 6-million mark in 1968, according to estimates by BROADCASTING. Black-and-white set sales continued to surpass color sales although the color-set share of total sales was rising. Figures compiled by the Electronic Industries Association showed that factory sales of color sets rose from 2.6 million in 1965 to 5 million in 1966, while sales of black-and-white sets declined from 8.8 million in 1965 to 7.7 million in 1966. Speculation from industry sources was that color might strongly compete with black-and-white in unit sales in 1967 and could become dominant in 1968 or 1969.

In the area of satellite communications there were few developments in 1967. The only satellite operator continued to be the Communications Satellite Corp., although Comsat faced numerous challengers. Among the challengers was the Ford Foundation, with its proposal for a commercial satellite system benefiting noncommercial TV; the giant American Telephone & Telegraph Corp., whose virtual monopoly on land-line distribution of radio and television programs was threatened by the advent of satellites; and the three television networks, whose aim was to prevent Comsat from attaining a monopoly on domestic satellite ownership and operation. The domestic satellite case was still before the Federal Communications Commission in late 1967.

In a comprehensive message to Congress on Aug. 14, President Johnson raised fundamental questions on the future of domestic satellites and other basic communications problems and assigned a special "task force" to seek the answers. The question of the feasibility of a domestic satellite system was posed along with whether it was advisable to have more than one such system. The President also asked if the electromagnetic spectrum was being used to best advantage, or should there be a redistribution of its frequencies among the many services using it. He also wanted to know whether a revision should be made of the present Communications Act and the Communications Satellite Act.

Named to find answers to these perplexing questions were Eugene V. Rostow, undersecretary of state for political affairs, who became chairman of the 16-man task force, and James D. O'Connell, telecommunications adviser to the President and director of telecommunications management in the Office of Emergency Planning, who was designated vice chairman of the group. Rosel H. Hyde, chairman of the FCC, was named an ex officio member of the task force. The Bureau of the Budget was assigned the task of deciding whether the present administration and regulation of telecommunications by the national government was correct, or whether a revision was necessary.

CATV Growing ■ Although many questions remained concerning the future of community antenna television, the industry continued to grow. According to a Television magazine compilation in March, based on data from the FCC, there are 1,449 CATV systems in the U. S. serving 1,867,408 subscribers in 2,300 communities. Including operators not required to file with the commission, it is estimated unofficially that there are as many as 1,600 systems in operation. Toward the end of 1967, some CATV prognosticators were forecasting 7,500 systems with 30 million subscribers within the next decade. One reason for the growth of CATV becomes apparent upon review of a study conducted for the Advertising Research Foundation in 1967. The report said that "virtually all CATV systems earn a high rate of return on invested capital," and that "as of 1966, only four out of about 1,600 systems were known to have failed."

Broadcasters as a whole were ambivalent in their feelings about CATV. Some opposed it for competitive reasons and some feared a metamorphosis of the industry to a pay-TV system. Others regarded CATV as an opportunity to expand both their service and profits, becoming deeply involved in system ownership and operation.

The prospects of pay television improved in theory in July when a special committee of FCC commissioners recommended that pay TV be approved within broad limitations. The committee recommended pay TV be restricted to communities served by at least five commercial "free" TV outlets, allowing only one pay-TV station in any such community. Pay TV would also be required to carry a certain amount of free programming (from 12 to 28 hours a week), and generally would not be allowed to carry programs available to free television. In October the FCC held an oral argument on its committee's recommendations. There were indications Congress might make the final decision on pay TV, although what that decision might be was still in doubt following hearings of a subcommittee of the House Commerce Committee.

Educational TV ■ Congress did take action during the year in the field of educational television when it passed legislation creating a Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) to administer grants of federal and private funds for educational television program development. The President signed the Public Broadcasting Act of 1967 into law in November. The corporation in large measure was patterned after proposals put forth earlier in the year by a special commission of the Carnegie Corp., a philanthropic foundation. The question of how CPB will be financed was deferred until 1968, when plans for financing the corporation after the first year are due from the White House.

In an attempt to demonstrate the potential of educational television, a Public Broadcast Laboratory was established under a $10-million grant from the Ford Foundation. In November PBL began telecasting a weekly two-hour "live" program on stations of the National Educational Television (NET) network.

Another new venture, a new commercial television network, made a brief appearance in 1967. The United Network, which succeeded the Overmyer Network, began May 1 with a 90-minute late-night variety show from Las Vegas carried by over 100 stations. The network closed after only one month due to financial problems. Despite the problems, there was some indication the owners might attempt to put the network back on the air at a later date.

In September the Kaiser Broadcasting Corp., owner of six UHF television stations, announced plans for another live, interconnected network which it hoped to have in operation by the fall of 1970.

One of the existing networks, ABC, was unsuccessful during the year in its attempt to broaden its financial base by merging with the giant International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. The merger was twice approved by the FCC, but subsequently was twice stalled by the Justice Department. After the commission approved the merger the first time, the Justice Department said that the decision did not take into account adequately questions of public interest. When the FCC approved the merger again, the Justice Department took the case to court. Justice was worried that, among other things, ITT's worldwide business interests might influence ABC's news reporting. In October arguments on the case were heard at the U. S. Court of Appeals in Washington. A court decision on the matter was expected by Dec. 31, the termination date of the merger agreement, although the decision could be delayed even further by mutual agreement.

New Concept ■ Whereas ABC hoped to strengthen its competitive position through the merger, it also attempted to achieve the same result through the introduction of a radical new concept for its radio network. ABC announced it would divide its radio network into four program services instead of one, effective Jan. 1, 1968. Each service was designed to fit the type of format employed by ABC's local affiliates: the American Information Network, geared for "talk" and "middle-of-the-road" stations; the American Contemporary Network, tailored to the needs of stations featuring contemporary, or "rock-and-roll" music; the American Personality/Entertainment Network, for stations combining news, popular music and features such as ABC Radio's Breakfast Club program; and the American FM Network, offering news, public-affairs and special-features services to FM radio stations. Each network would feed an average 5 to 15 minutes of programming per hour while longer programs would be fed at night for taping and subsequent rebroadcast. ABC Radio, with about 400 affiliates in its existing single-network service, hoped eventually to have 800 to 1,000 affiliates under the new four-network system.

Substantial changes in every area of Canadian broadcasting were anticipated following the introduction by State Secretary Judy LaMarsh in October of a complex, 34-page bill in the Canadian House of Commons. The legislation would create a Canadian Radio Commission to regulate broadcasting in place of the Board of Broadcast Governors and would reorganize the top management structure of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. It would also give the CBC the preferred position in the mixed public-private broadcasting structure in Canada. Under the legislation the radio commission would be empowered to regulate CATV for the first time and would assume the power previously held by the cabinet to issue radio and television station licenses. The new commission would have five full-time members and 10 part-time members and would replace a BBG composed of three full-time and 12 part-time members. Miss LaMarsh said she expected a separate bill covering CBC financing to be introduced in Commons before the end of the fiscal year ending March 31, 1968.

A report issued by the CBC showed that costs for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1967, rose $20.8 million, up from $133.4 million in 1965-66 to $154.2 million in 1966-67. Major reasons for the increase in costs, according to the CBC, were the introduction of color programming and the use of special centennial-year programming.

Throughout the world, television and radio continued to expand onward and upward. U. S. Information Agency figures compiled in 1964 estimated that there were 162 million television sets and over 500 million radio sets in use in the world. By late 1967 private broadcasting industry sources estimated about 209 million television sets and 560 million radio sets were in use.

Television sets in the United States accounted for more than one-third, or nearly 75 million, of the total. Japan and the U.S.S.R. each had about 20 million. According to reports received by BROADCASTING and BROADCASTING YEARBOOK, the United Kingdom has 17 million, West Germany 13.4 million, France 8.5 million, Italy 7.4 million, Canada 5.5 million, Poland 2.5 million and Australia 2.3 million.

In 1967 there were about 5,450 TV stations on the air or under construction in over 100 countries. Western Europe led in the number of television stations, with about 2,000; the Far East had 1,100, the U. S. 985, Eastern Europe 950 and South America 160.

Radio in 200 countries ■ There were some 12,250 radio stations serving more than 200 countries in the world, including relay and "booster" stations used to extend service to remote areas. About half of these stations, or 6,575, were in the U. S. In addition, toward the end of 1967 nearly half of the world's 560 million radio sets, or 267 million, were to be found in the U. S.

Color television spread throughout the world during 1967. The British Broadcasting Corp. launched color programming in Great Britain on July 1 when it carried live pickups of Wimbledon tennis championship matches.

On the Continent, color programming began in West Germany in August 1967 with four hours of such programming a week. Fewer than 1,000 color sets were in operation for the inauguration of color in France on Oct. 1.

Color was also introduced into the Soviet Union Oct. 1.

In Scandinavia, Denmark and Finland both were to begin transmissions in color before the end of 1967.

Color programs were introduced in Canada in late 1966 on both the publicly operated Canadian Broadcasting Corp. and the privately owned CTV network, but color "officially" began in the Dominion in 1967. Telesistema Mexicano S.A., a major television network, began color programming in Mexico in the spring of 1966, but by October only three of the network's 32 stations were transmitting in color.

Regulation slows CATV growth

1968 may decide future course of cable systems; high court will determine jurisdiction; copyright will be decided; broadcasters own 30% of CATV's

Cable television continued to be a major component of the broadcasting scene in 1967—and will remain one of TV's singular concerns in 1968. A trio of subjects continue to excite both the CATV industry and, by relation, the broadcasting industry. These are federal regulation, copyright, and origination.

The first two are problems; the last is what many cable operators see as the wave of the future.

Regulation by the FCC, established early in 1966, has had a depressing effect on CATV's growth. No question about that. CATV's booming climb to new records for systems and subscribers, steadily upward for the previous 10 years, subsided to extremely low levels in 1967. In that year, only 65 new CATV systems started, and only 665,000 new customers were added to the roster of paying subscribers.*

As the year ended, it was estimated that there were 1,870 cable systems in operation, serving 3,165,000 customers.*

CATV took off on its upward bound movement in 1963, when 200 new systems began operating. It peaked in 1966, when 350 new cable operations came into being. And, it was in that year also that the highest number of subscribers was added—900,000.*

The year of decision for CATV truly could be 1968. In that period, it's anticipated that the U. S. Supreme Court will rule on the FCC's legal authority to regulate CATV. At the same time, the court will decide whether or not CATV systems must pay royalties for the copyrighted TV programs they pick up and transmit to their customers.

This is the United Artists v. Fortnightly case, where two lower courts have held that CATV's are engaged in "public performance for profit" and hence liable for copyright infringement.

FCC Power ■ The Supreme Court case on FCC jurisdiction involves a number of CATV systems in San Diego. As is usual in communications litigation, the case itself turns on an interpretation of a provision of the Communications Act of 1934 having to do with the authority of the FCC to issue stop orders. The commission, acting on complaints by San Diego television broadcasters, ordered the San Diego cable systems to cease expanding until after a hearing could be held on the broadcasters' objections to the importation of Los Angeles TV programs into that lower California port city. A federal appeals court on the West Coast held that the commission was without legal power to issue such an order against CATV; the provision, it said, applies only to licensees of the FCC. CATV systems are not licensed by the FCC; only regulated.

Interestingly enough, following the hearing, an FCC examiner issued a recommendation that the restrictions on the San Diego cable systems be lifted; he found no evidence that cable was damaging the San Diego broadcasters.

What makes the Supreme Court case even more complex is that the right of the FCC to regulate CATV was affirmed flat out by a District of Columbia circuit court in a case involving a Toledo, Ohio, CATV system.

Parallel to the San Diego and Toledo cases was litigation in the Seventh Circuit appeals court, brought by a group of CATV systems challenging the basic authority of the FCC to impose rules on cable operators. Argument was held in this case and a decision was awaited at the end of 1967, although there was the expectation that that court will delay ruling until it learns what the Supreme Court has done.

On the copyright front, 1968 is expected to be the year that Congress finally adopts a new copyright law and a major concern is whether or not anything is said about CATV. The House version of the new copyright bill—the symbol of CATV quality!

The Ameco "Flying A" stands for advanced products and services used in the most modern cable television systems today.

Quality products through more than 14 years of practical experience and scientific knowledge in CATV. Quality service through years of building cable TV systems to serve tomorrow's customers.

We first introduced solid-state to CATV when others were still tube-type infants.

We built the first all-transistorized system before anyone else even thought of producing solid-state equipment.

And now, we set the CATV pace again with our newest solid-state advancement — the "Chan-neleer" heterodyne headend!

When you need Quality CATV — think of the Ameco symbol of Quality. It works for you!

first complete revision of copyright law since 1907—does not say anything about CATV. This section in the proposed House bill was deleted ostensibly because of a conflict between the House Judiciary and the House Commerce committees, but behind the scenes it seems to have resulted from some heavy and fast lobbying by both cable TV and broadcaster sources. The section treated CATV on a sliding scale—from complete exemption for those systems that do nothing more than carry local TV stations, to full-scale, copyright liability for those cable systems importing TV programs from distant TV stations.

The Senate began considering the copyright bill in 1967; it is expected to report its version out in 1968. The Senate bill, as it stood at the end of 1967, contained the disputed CATV section. Whether it will still be contained in the Senate bill was uncertain at the year's end.

Direct Dealing Meanwhile, an ad hoc committee of the CATV industry began meeting in New York with copyright holders, principally motion picture producers and distributors, early in the fall of 1967. An accommodation is expected in 1968 which will take care of the copyright situation of the past, or at any rate up to the date when a new copyright law comes into being.

At the same time, a second group of cable operators, again unofficial and informally constituted, began meeting in 1967 with a similar group of broadcasters in an attempt to evolve what diplomats call a modus vivendi between the two industries. After a handful of meetings during the year, "progress" was reported by both groups. Precisely what this means has been unstated, although one result has been an agreement

CATV: its history, dimensions and potential

About 18 months ago, two Motorola Inc. engineers presented an in depth study of the cable TV industry for the edification of their company and the electronics industry as a whole.

The report, written by R. E. Berndt and G. T. Simmons, traced the history of CATV to the year 1966, and, using standard projection formulas, estimated its five-year future from that year.

As they have a way of doing, unfortunately, events have tempered the sanguinity of the authors—particularly in their estimates for 1967 and the resulting projections for the succeeding four years. Nevertheless, the trends that are indicative in this document, one of the most impressive in CATV's library, make it worth while as a landmark.

For some of the findings, see pages 16 and 18.

to seek a test of CATV's impact on TV broadcasting in some ideal city—like Philadelphia or Goshen, Ind. The FCC turned down the proposal for Philadelphia once, but it has been importuned to reconsider.

Leading the CATV representation in both the copyright and the broadcaster negotiations is Alfred R. Stern, president in addition a multiple CATV operator.

Although broadcasters account for more than 30% ownership in CATV, there is a hard-core group of broadcasters who are continuing to press a campaign to put CATV in its place; the place being as a clear and unequivocal supplement to regular TV.

This attitude has its genesis not in CATV's original concept—to bring customers good, clean, clear local TV signals—but to CATV's potential threat to the station's role as the purveyor of broadcast entertainment and information. In a word, origination of programs by CATV systems. Origination is seen as the first step in what could be a progression of activities that eventuates CATV into a wired-broadcaster.

Already more than 100 CATV systems are engaged in originating complete program schedules—and in some cases even selling advertising to underwrite the costs. Most CATV systems, however, originate to a degree: the programs are services dealing with time, weather, news. One of the more recent services is the display of stock market reports. Others that have been mentioned, and in some cases even recommended, are such nonbroadcast services as burglar alarms, meter reading, marketing. And, of course, there's pay TV.

This possibility is no fantasy of the broadcasters, either. Last fall, at the regional meetings of the National Cable Television Association, its national chairman, Jack Crosby of Gencoe Inc., called on cable owners to lead "great new advances in telecommunications." And, he added: "Individually and collectively we must organize and finance programs designed to keep pace with rapidly advancing technologies, with the insatiable demand for new electronic services, and with the ever-changing styles and trends in home amusement and home educational facilities."

of the multi-CATV group, Television Communications Corp., New York. And leading the broadcasters in the CATV-broadcaster dialogue is George C. Hatch, Salt Lake City broadcaster and in its long-standing feud with the telephone companies. The key here is the growing practice of common carrier telecommunications firms to offer to lease facilities to cable TV franchise holders, as against permitting CATV businessmen to string cable on telephone poles, the original and still largely the most widely used method of wiring a community—although on the horizon is a growing drift by municipalities to force utilities to place their plants underground.

What makes the lease-back practice so ominous to the CATV industry is that as it grows it means that the ownership of the nuts and bolts of CATV, the hardware, is gone. The CATV operator becomes nothing more than a licensee selling a service—but with nothing tangible to sell when he wants to.

To combat this, the CATV industry has asked the FCC to require each telephone company entering cable TV to secure a certificate of necessity from the commission.

Also ranking cable operators are the recent boosts in charges for pole use. This has not become unduly burdensome, yet, but CATV observers already foresee the trend, and they're not happy about it.

And, increasingly, the telephone companies are engaging in the ownership of cable systems. Independent telephone corporations, like General Telephone & Electronics, United Utilities and Continental Utilities, are entering CATV as owners and operators in greater numbers, principally in those communities where they own telephone companies.

This the CATV industry cannot protest on principle—it would be a denial of free entry—but given the trauma they otherwise suffer at telephone company activities, the move sends chills down the back of old-line cable operators.

One other dark cloud looms on CATV's horizon; this is the threat of state public utility legislation. For years, this threat has waxed and waned as cable forces marshaled to beat it back. As of the end of 1967, there were only two states that have put CATV under PUC control: Connecticut and Nevada.

This dark side of CATV's future isn't the complete story. There are sunny spots. The latest is bottomed on hard, cold financial activity, to wit, the increasing trend toward mergers among existing cable entities. This first occurred two years ago when a group of individual cable operators joined together to form Gencoe Inc. In 1967, Gencoe became a subsidiary of Livingston Oil Co., a publicly held, listed company.

Toward the end of 1967, two of CATV's major groups joined together and at the same time registered for a public offering. These were Community Cablecasting Corp. and United Cablevision Inc., forming Cypress Communications Corp., with management ownership involving such financial institutions as Hornblower, Weeks-Hemphill, Noyes and Electronics Capital Corp.

Also bright for CATV is the growing interest of the networks. CBS has a substantial interest in a Canadian firm with large CATV holdings in that country, and through the parent company, a system in San Francisco. NBC owns its system in Kingston, N. Y.

Technically, the greatest promise for CATV is the experiment performed by Theta Corp. in New York, where a broadband, microwave, short haul development using 18 gc was successfully proven. Theta is jointly owned by Teleprompter Corp. and Hughes Aircraft. Should the FCC approve this technique, it's quite possible that CATV may lose its "cable" nomenclature; the advantages of using wireless, for big cities as well as for rural areas are obvious.

THE RADIO AND TELEVISION AUDIENCES

Radio and television were in more U. S. homes than ever before as 1968 approached.

■ Television.—A total of 56.0 million homes, or 94.5% of all U. S. homes (excluding Alaska and Hawaii), were TV-equipped as of September 1967, according to the A. C. Nielsen Co. The American Research Bureau estimated the total would be 56,374,100 homes (excluding Alaska) as of Jan. 1, 1968.

■ Color TV.—Homes equipped with color TV sets totaled 12,670,000 as of Oct. 1, 1967, a gain of 56.9% in 12 months, according to estimates by NBC.

■ Radio.—The Radio Advertising Bureau estimated that

58.8 million U. S. homes, or about 98%, were radio-equipped in 1967.

■ Radio Sets.—The number of working-order radio sets in the U. S. would be 267 million as of Jan. 1, 1968, according to preliminary industry estimates. The estimates anticipated this distribution: 192 million in homes, 65 million in automobiles, 10 million in public places. The new total would represent a gain of nine million, or 3.5%, over the 258 million estimated for Jan. 1, 1967.

■ Viewing and Listening.—The extent to which radio and television sets were used is indicated in numerous ways in the tables that follow. The television figures were furnished by the Nielsen company and its Nielsen Television Index (NTI). The radio data came from RAB, NBC and other sources as noted.

CUMULATIVE AUDIENCES: RADIO AND TV

Cumulative reach of radio is compared with that of television in the following figures from NBC Radio's 1965 Cumulative Radio Audience Method (CRAM) study, made public in 1966. Although the study was conducted primarily to test new research methodology, NBC said it considered these estimates "approximate" but "conservative" benchmarks.

Number (and %) of Different U.S. Adults Reached (18 Years of Age and Over)

	In One Day	In Seven Days
Radio	92,100,000 (75.1%)	111,000,000 (90.5%)
Television *	80,900,000 (65.9%)	106,500,000 (86.8%)

* TV percentages based on a special Nielsen Television Index tabulation covering in-home viewing only, adjusted to reflect (1) all U. S. individuals 18 years of age and over from both TV and non-TV households, and (2) April TV set usage patterns. NBC's CRAM report said this radio-TV comparison "does not imply that television and radio are equal in impact or effectiveness" but "does suggest that radio's broad reach makes the medium an ideal choice for backing up television advertising."

"What good does advertising do?"

Advertising Sells Good Works (as well as goods and services)

Have you noticed how often, when an important public cause is at stake, people turn to a good salesman for leadership? Successful businessmen have given uncountable man-hours to America's schools, churches and charities, and have led in solving major national problems. For its part, advertising—good salesman that it is—has provided the means to communicate such causes to the American people.

For 25 years ads like these have been prepared by advertising agencies who volunteer their services. Radio and television give time on the air; space is donated by newspapers and magazines. Last year alone, for example, business publications like this one gave more than a million dollars' worth of space in the public interest through The Advertising Council of which the American business press is a part.

25 years of advertising contributed for the public good

MINUTES OF TV VIEWING AND RADIO LISTENING BY TV VIEWERS

Amount of time that adult viewers (over 18 years of age) spend daily with the broadcast media, by day part and for the day as a whole, is shown in the following tables. In each case the viewers are classified in five groups according to how much time they spend with TV, from the 20% who watch most (at top) in descending order to the 20% who watch least (bottom). TV dominates the 6 p.m. to midnight period, but radio has an edge in all other day parts, with the biggest advantage among lighter viewing groups. Data, the most recent available in this form, was prepared for Radio Advertising Bureau by R. H. Bruskin Associates, independent research firm, based on nationwide interviewing conducted in July 1964.

The Most Trusted Name in Electronics

Peaks and Valleys— Great for Cable TV

Peaks and valleys in the terrain usually indicate a need for a CATV system. In the uniformity of a CATV cable, they indicate the need for better cable.

Times Alumifoam® (the trade name for our seamless aluminum tube sheathed coaxial cable) flattens out the topography in your return-loss sweep generator with a calm uniformity that's making believers out of everyone in the CATV business. We can guarantee a 30 db worst point for this cable and back it to the hilt. That means first-quality cable every time, and smooth functioning

Terrible in a CATV Cable

transmission right from the start. No costly ship-backs. No costly re-installation. There are fewer splices, fewer trouble points, less maintenance and less labor costs with Alumifoam because it's made in continuous seamless lengths up to ½ mile. Because it's seamless, it's waterproof and vapor-proof. And Alumifoam's long life is a real bonus—continuous high-performance quality for years and years. Be sure of the cable in your Cable TV. an award we wish we hadn't won

Ever seen what a tornado can do to a town? We did. On April 21st, the worst twister in Illinois history ripped through several communities outside Chicago. And we reported it. With movie cameras in color. With helicopters. With reporters wired for sound.

Now, they say our coverage was the best spot television news reporting of the year. Who are they? The Radio Television News Directors Association.

Sure, we're glad to have our work commended by our fellow professionals. But we can't forget the tragedy we witnessed. And we wish none of it had ever happened.

But if you report news, like WGN Television does, you're there when it happens and you tell it like it is. Even if it hurts.

DISTINCTIVELY DETROIT

MEADOW BROOK MUSIC FESTIVAL. Held on the beautiful campus of Oakland University and featuring the Detroit Symphony Orchestra with renowned guest soloists such as Van Cliburn, Meadow Brook is acknowledged as one of the most noteworthy musical events in the United States.

Just as Detroiters regard this highly acclaimed concert series as distinctive of the metropolitan area, so they have regarded The WWJ Stations as distinctively Detroit for over 47 years. Why? Because of programming that reflects the city's own interest in local news, sports, entertainment, public affairs and community service. And, because of WWJ's home-ownership by The Detroit News. When you ask a Detroiters which radio and TV stations are distinctively Detroit, he'll instinctively tell you "WWJ."

Can programming Designed for Milwaukee find happiness in some other city ?

Can a bird dog fly? Same difference. Our programming is designed exclusively for Milwaukee! Take our women's programming for instance. The hostesses are area personalities who know what Milwaukee women like. And their ratings prove it. Or try our sportscasting. More than any competing station. Or look at our adventure series. It's hosted by a local boy who made good. Now his weekly arm-chair safaris reach more Milwaukee adults than all competing programs combined! We could go on. We could talk about our top-rated news, weather forecasting, 1967 Peabody Award, and how our well-rounded programming — Designed for Milwaukee — reaches more area homes per week than any other station.* For the complete story on WTMJ-TV, contact our representatives: Harrington, Righter & Parsons in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Atlanta, Boston, St. Louis and Los Angeles.

*A. R. B.—Television Audience Report, March, 1967; subject to qualifications listed in said report.

TV Allocations, State, City

Note: UHF and VHF TV allocations have been made by the FCC to the following cities. A plus or minus after a channel indicates that a station occupying the channel must operate with its carrier frequencies offset 10 kilocycles above or below, respectively, the normal carrier frequencies. The offset indicators are not shown for UHF assignments, which were the subject of a rulemaking adopted June 4, 1965. The designators were to be added in a later order, but had not been published by time the Yearbook went to press. Meanwhile, the appropriate designators are shown on construction permits and licenses issued for UHF stations.

Asterisks (*) indicate channels reserved for noncommercial use. (As of Oct. 1, 1967)

The Braille Institute is $15,679 richer, thanks to KHJ's young marrieds.

We're involved in community affairs. Our listeners get involved, too. In projects like our annual KHJ Appreciation Concerts, to raise money for worthy causes. KHJ produces the concerts. KHJ's young married listeners pitch in with ticket donations. Last year, $15,679, the entire concert proceeds, went to the Braille Institute. So far this year, we've raised $8,000 for the Motown Scholarship for Musical Excellence endowed at UCLA through the United Negro College Fund. It's another way KHJ works with and for the community.

BEELINE[®] COUNTRY . . . AWFULLY BIG IN POPULATION INCREASES

. . . and BEELINE RADIO is a proven way to reach this important market

Heard about the population explosion in Beeline Country? Last year, the total population of our 47-county western market increased almost 6% . . . from 2,981,700 to 3,148,300 . . . as opposed to a U.S. population increase of only 1%. Take advantage of this big boom by advertising your product or service on Beeline Radio. At the same time, you will be covering a market with an effective buying income of over $8 billion. And, a market whose combined farm income is greater than any one of 46 states — $2.2 billion. It can be all yours on Beeline Radio. So don't turn a deaf ear . . . include the four Beeline stations in your next media schedule. They are the key to California's Inland Valley and Western Nevada.
