Program controls: touchy issue on FCC agenda today

For 16,000,000 people Triangle was their first source of information on the 1960 Democratic Convention. Utilizing an Eyewitness Team and a “hot line” from Los Angeles, Triangle Stations interrupted programs to air nearly 1,500 reports and 200 special shows. For television 70,000 feet of unedited film was supplied to six stations—convention coverage without precedent in local programming.

For Triangleland delegates and visitors to Los Angeles, Triangle was their first means of communication with home. Reporters and cameramen worked around the clock to tell the story of key delegations from California, Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania.

Triangle will record similar achievements at the Republican National Convention in Chicago this week.

More paper work = Broadcasters for first time will be required during this year's campaign to keep record of political broadcasts. FCC has prepared several-page questionnaire to be sent to all licensees in week or two. Requested also will be narrative report on stations' policies on political broadcasting. Move implements suggestion by Sen. A.S. Mike Monroney (D-Okla.) at Senate hearings last May on amendment of Sec. 315. FCC may schedule preview session for Washington communications lawyers and station representatives, with H.H. Goldin, FCC economics chief who drew up document, as briefing officer.

Shortcut = House Rules Committee will be bypassed by leadership in putting to House its Senate-passed resolution (SJ Res 207) suspending Sec. 315 for this year's presidential and vice presidential candidates. Normally, legislation of this kind goes to House Commerce Committee for action and then requires clearance from Rules Committee, bottleneck for such major legislation in past. Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.) has kept SJ Res 207 on his desk, however, and will send it directly to floor—tentatively scheduled for debate Aug. 22. Commerce Committee will hold informal meeting Aug. 16, day after House recess ends, to formulate recommendations for floor consideration.

Triple threat = Those 40-second nighttime station breaks that ABC-TV has promised its affiliates (Broadcasting, June 27) despite they won't include license to use them for triple-spotting. Affiliates will be asked to indicate affirmatively that they don't intend to use extra 10 seconds for commercial abuses. Fear of triple-spotting is one big reason network advertisers are fighting so hard against lengthening of 30-second breaks on any network (see page 29). ABC goes along with station arguments that increased operating costs make station rate rises inevitable unless new sources of income are found and that advertisers thus can be spared additional spot costs if they accept 40-second breaks.

New rep = If certain of CBS-TV's affiliated stations, represented by network spot sales organization, complete present negotiations (which seems likely) new rep firm named Television Spot Sales will be organized, staffed by several members of present CBS unit, operating in conjunction with but separate from Branham Co. Stations regarded as favorable to plan are Washington Post outlets—WTOP-TV Washington and WJXT (TV) Jacksonville—WTBV (TV) Charlotte and long-time Branham-repped KRLD-TV Dallas. Unit would be headed by Arthur C. Elliott, eastern sales manager of CBS TV Spot Sales.

Tentative plan contemplates Branham providing office space and accounting, along with initial financing. Other stations helped by CBS TV Spot Sales already have made new arrangements stemming from FCC's order of Oct. 30, 1959, ordering separation of networks from representation of affiliated tv stations that are either common-owned and operated category. Several NBC affiliates, along with network, are opposing order (Broadcasting, July 4) on grounds of illegality.

Law at work = There's no question losers in Miami ch. 10 and Boston ch. 5 "ex parte" cases are going to use every legal avenue to attack FCC's decisions, although none will publicly state position at this time. One approach, however, has been subject of public and private discussion. This is view that commission is in error in issuing decisions in both cases. Both are under jurisdiction of Court of Appeals in Washington, holders of this viewpoint contend, and argue that commission cannot issue decisions until court remands to permit this.

Political problem = Symptoms of softness in spot television market—particularly in new orders—have had some stations and reps concerned, but majority of reps report marked gains in activity in past couple of weeks and feel confident upward trend will continue. "As our peaks get higher," said one, "our valleys seem lower." Some reps, describing situation as spotty with big variations market to market, saw parallel to 1956 presidential election season, attributing slackness to general advertiser reluctance to commit big budgets during uncertainty over political outcome and, more immediately, hesitancy to have new spot campaigns disrupted by political pre-emptions. With networks offering presidential nominees big gobs of free time, there was speculation that largest share of political money would be spent in spot, but how much would be placed nationally rather than locally was another question.

Bartley or Ford = Who will be chairman of FCC if Democrats win in November? With Lyndon B. Johnson on ticket as vice presidential candidate, expectation is he will urge appointment of Commissioner Robert T. Bartley, fellow Texan and nephew of Speaker Sam Rayburn. Mr. Bartley has been member of FCC since March 6, 1952, and before that served as executive assistant to Speaker Rayburn. His broadcast experience included vice presidency of Yankee Network.

If GOP wins in November, assuming Nixon nomination, incumbent Chairman Fred W. Ford would be more firmly entrenched than ever. There's thought that he might move to even higher administration post. He is solid with Attorney General William P. Rogers, who is close adviser to Vice President Nixon. Anomaly is that FCC's new, tough regulatory policy would continue under either official since Messrs. Ford and Bartley see eye-to-eye on issue of broadcaster responsibility.

Change in PCP = CBS Radio and its affiliates association are understood to have made agreement to plan for refinements of network's Program Consolidation Plan, adhering closely to proposals made by affiliates group. Preliminary sessions already have been held with Arthur Hull Hayes, CBS Radio president, with prospect that meeting of affiliates group may be called early next month.

While details of plan were not disclosed, it's believed to embrace more emphasis on news, lengthening of network news programs, elimination of daytime serials, reduction in network option time. Members of affiliates committee are John S. Hayes, chairman, WTOP Washington; E.K. Harnenbauer, KCMO Kansas City; Larry Haeg, WCCO Minneapolis and Michael R. Hanna, WHCU Ithaca, N.Y.

Full circle = History repeats with appointment of J. Leonard Reinsch, executive director of Cox stations as communications consultant for Kennedy-Johnson ticket (story page 76). Senator Kennedy, it's learned authoritatively, contacted James M. Cox Jr., president of Cox newspapers and broadcast operations, to request Mr. Reinsch's services for duration of campaign. Sixteen years earlier, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, running for his fourth term, asked James M. Cox Sr. for Mr. Reinsch's services as radio director for presidential campaign.

NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVES: THE KATZ AGENCY
BROADCASTING, July 25, 1960
It's time for TV's 'agonizing reappraisal': The movies didn't kill vaudeville. It died of self-poisoning by inertia, smugness and self-indulgence. Similarly, radio didn't kill the movies, nor did TV kill radio. Harry G. Ommerle, senior vice president, Sullivan, Stauffer, Colwell & Bayles, New York, refuses to believe the popular cliches. But he does feel it's time for TV to carefully re-examine itself for signs of the same old symptoms.

It's this week's MONDAY MEMO on page 18.

How buyers rate the networks: Key agency executives evaluate ABC-TV, CBS-TV and NBC-TV according to their personal views and preferences in Broadcasting Survey of biggest network spenders. Page 27.

Top network advertisers Jan.-May: Most product categories were up, but foods advertisers, the biggest buyers, show a very slight drop. Page 34.

TV commercials cleaner now: That's the word from code board's subcommittee on personal products advertising, though it sees work still to be done in bra-and-girdle and motion picture categories. Page 40.

Performers gird for negotiations: Radio-TV performers work out wage and working conditions demands for upcoming network negotiations in AFTRA convention. Delegates vote to join with Screen Actors Guild in negotiating and administering contracts for TV commercials—whether live, taped or filmed—and for TV taped entertainment programs. Page 46.

FCC and programming: A special commission meeting today will consider two separate rulemaking proposals dealing with federal jurisdiction over programming. Alternate course of action submitted following charges of censorship over first proposal. Page 58.

FTC to take hiatus: As payola complaints near hundred mark, FTC plans a breather to let the industry catch up with the law. Page 60.

Full steam ahead: FCC is up to full seven-member force as Charles King is sworn in. Page 62.

The post-'48 market: More Hollywood companies are planning to make post-'48 films available to TV. Page 72.

Income up, profit down: That's the story at RCA. Profit decline laid to heavy investment in electronic data computing equipment. Page 74.

* Yes! That's right! Baton Rouge is the 4th largest market in the states of Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi . . . the area known as the Gulf South. Ranking just below Dallas-Ft. Worth, Houston and New Orleans, the Baton Rouge market served by television station WBRZ has a population of 1,561,000, with retail sales of $1,285,000,000—too big a market to be overlooked on any list. TOP NAB POST
Won’t rush to fill in spite of pressure

Despite pressures for faster action in choosing new president of NAB, selection committee won’t be pushed to hasty decision.

That was word of Clair R. McCollough, Steinman stations, chairman of NAB Policy Committee, in speech last Friday to 63 broadcasters participating in NAB Harvard management seminar. Mr. McCollough said presidential selection committee, headed by C. Howard Lane, KOIN-AM-FM-TV Portland, Ore., still had “long” list of candidates under consideration. “I do not know when the work of the committee will be completed,” Mr. McCollough said.

NAB presidency has been vacant since death of Harold E. Fellows last March.

Psychological Warfare — At final session of two-week Harvard seminar (see earlier story page 48), broadcasters in attendance adopted resolution asking NAB to study way for broadcasters to help supplement America’s effort in psychological war with Russia which, seminar participants said, U.S. is losing.

Mr. McCollough and Charles H. Tower, NAB tv vice president, promised seminar they would start work on project at once.

Better conventions is role of politicos

Robert Sarnoff, NBC chairman, thinks it’s up to political parties, not to television broadcasters, to cut “drab preliminaries” and unessential activities from political conventions. In letter to radio-tv editors, Mr. Sarnoff said television has done imaginative and meaningful job of convention coverage despite dull stretches of convention inactivity.

But dullness is fault of convention apparatus, he said. As broadcaster, Mr. Sarnoff has “healthy respect for prime evening time on three national television networks,” and he said he found it hard to understand why parties frittered away peak hours on “drab preliminaries” and put off some of most important and exciting business “until only the hardiest viewers are awake.”

Despite experience with television coverage of conventions in 1948, 1952 and 1956 “politicians have barely made the first step toward using the medium effectively,” Mr. Sarnoff said.

His observations last week were in conflict with those he made few years ago. At that time he suggested networks might be in position to streamline convention coverage by rotating coverage among themselves and eliminating live pickups of unimportant activities.

MIA MI CH. 10
FCC tells court its new order is final

FCC told U.S. Court of Appeals Friday that its July 14 decision in Miami ch. 10 case—in which it revoked 1957 grant to National Airlines and disqualified all applicants except L.B. Wilson to which it made grant (BROADCASTING, July 18)—is final order and thus supersedes all pending appeals in court.

If its July 14 decision is appealed, commission said, then pending appeals should be held in abeyance until after court resolves most recent litigation. If July 14 order is not appealed, or if court after appeal upholds FCC, pending appeals become moot, commission said.

Commission two weeks ago revoked 1957 ch. 10 grant held by WPST-TV in Miami and gave channel to L.B. Wilson Inc. It said revocation order was effective Sept. 15. In assigning grant to L.B. Wilson, commission said it would give that applicant license of only four months’ duration after construction. This is predicated on hopes of FCC commissioners that other applicants would apply in competition with L.B. Wilson when short-term license runs out.

‘Ex Parte’ Issue = Miami ch. 10 case is in court because of WKAT Miami appeal against FCC grant in 1957 to National Airlines. In final order July 14 commission found National Airlines, WKAT and North Dade Television Inc. disqualified because of off-record conversations with FCC commissioners. Court had remanded case to FCC to look into allegations of ex parte representations, but retained jurisdiction.

Earlier in week FCC reported to same court action in Boston ch. 5 ex parte case which it held not to be final action. Commission vacated grant to Boston Herald-Traveller after finding off-record contacts had been made by newspaper (WHDH Inc.) and Massachusetts Bay Telecasters Inc., but not serious enough to disqualify them (see page 62). It continued WHDH-TV on air under temporary authority, and ordered further proceedings.

La. survey law

Radio and tv rating services which operate in state of Louisiana will be required to have their employees register with state, according to new law which has been signed by Gov. Jimmie Davis.

Law requires employees of rating firms to register with state if companies operate in Louisiana. Original bill included stringent registration fees, but this was deleted before final passage.

Wood appointed

No executive changes are spelled out for WGN Inc. (WGN-AM-TV Chicago) in appointment of J. Howard Wood as president-publisher of Chicago Tribune at board meeting of Tribune Co. Friday. He succeeds Chester Campbell who died two weeks ago. Mr. Wood remains president of WGN Inc., with Ward L. Quaal continuing as vice president and general manager of Tribune broadcast properties. Mr. Wood’s newspaper position will correspond to that of F.M. (Jack) Flynn, president-publisher of...
New York Daily News and president of Tribune Co.'s WPIX (TV) New York. Mr. Quail earlier this year signed long-term contract with WGN Inc.

Nielsen in Japan

Nielsen Television Index service will be extended to Tokyo and Osaka in Japan. A.C. Nielsen Co., Chicago, said last Friday it has signed five-year contract with Nihon Television Corp., Tokyo. NTI service already is provided in United Kingdom and Canada as well as U.S. Service in Japan will be available to all stations, advertisers, agencies and others.

Signal Corps is host to FCC in Ariz. visit

Six of seven members of FCC may be a bit travel-weary when they hold special meeting today (Monday) on program inquiry (see page 58), Commissioners left Washington Thursday (July 21) for inspection of Army Signal Corps proving grounds at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and were due to return to Washington Saturday night. FCC and Signal Corp studied mutual problems in frequency interference and commissioners inspected newly installed Electronic Environmental Test Facility, which measures interference caused by electronic equipment.

Trip to Arizona was made in World War II vintage airplane and took 10½ hours each way, plus 50-mile bus ride in Arizona desert. Making journey were Frederick W. Ford (chairman), Rosel H. Hyde, Robert T. Bartley, Robert E. Lee, John S. Cross and Charles H. King.

Business briefly

Westinghouse buys — Westinghouse Electric Corp. has purchased new filmed tv series starring Nanette Fabray, ending long search by advertiser for program to fill its recently acquired Friday 8:30-9 p.m. period on NBC-TV that starts in early January. New series is owned by advertiser. Westinghouse’s series on elections ends on CBS-TV in November, then advertiser resumes with new Fabray show on NBC-TV Jan. 6. McCann-Erickson, N.Y., is agency.

(Jello-O), White Plains, N.Y., will sponsor championship game of 13th annual Little League world series Aug. 27 on ABC-TV, first live telecast of event to be viewed nationwide. Avon’s fall call — Avon Products Inc. (cosmetics), N.Y., active in seasonal tv spot use, resumes activity in 150 markets from end of August to early December. Varied schedules of daytime and early evening minutes and 20’s are planned for full line of cosmetics. Agency: Monroe F. Dreher Inc., N.Y.

The Pennsylvania Associated Press Broadcasters recently honored WRCV and WRCV-TV with six awards for outstanding news operations — the largest number won by any radio and television news department in the Commonwealth. These citations are particularly meaningful, coming as they do from a "jury" of professional broadcasters. And from the people of Greater Philadelphia comes further recognition of the superior news service being rendered by both of these stations. WRCV-TV's 11 PM News and Weather programs, for instance, attract the largest viewing audience in Philadelphia, according to Nielsen.*

*NSI Jan-April, 1960

award First Place for Distinguished Contributions to Freedom of Information. For reporting from Trenton, New Jersey, on the July 1959 incident when one WRCV-TV newsreel camera was smashed while filming a disturbance during the last steel strike.

award Second Place for Outstanding Radio Reporting. For Tom Pettit's dramatic on-the-scene reporting of an eccentric elderly lady who barricaded herself in her home and held off authorities with a shotgun for several hours.

award Special membership citation for Outstanding Membership Cooperation. For many news contributions made to The Associated Press. Specifically for providing A.P. members with an exclusive interview with the sole survivor of a commercial airline disaster near Williamsport, Penna.
WRCV & WRCV-TV

First Place for Outstanding News Operation. For its "overall news operation," station WRCV-TV won the coveted first place award. This is the highest award given by the Pennsylvania Associated Press Broadcasters.

Second Place for Outstanding Reporting. For the WRCV-TV overall coverage of the long steel strike, 15 were "fed" to major NBC network news shows. This operation gave WRCV-TV more local originations than any network affiliate.

First Place for Outstanding Coverage of a Special Event. For the special programming WRCV Radio broadcast during the Congressional hearing conducted in Philadelphia by Congresswoman K. Granahan.

Absinthe Frappé

...Old New Orleans Favorite

WWL-TV... new New Orleans Favorite

Easy to make:
Fill 10-oz. tumbler with finely crushed ice. Pour in a dash of simple syrup, a dash of anisette and 1½ jiggers of any absinthe substitute, such as Herbsaint. Drip water over ice until tumbler is filled.

Voià—frappe! If you prefer it served as a cocktail, remove ice.

Romper Room, WWL-TV's standout morning show, delivers the audience at the lowest cost-per-thousand of any kid show in the New Orleans market—even lower than afternoon kid shows.

It makes sound sales sense to catch the kids in the morning before mom goes to shop—not in the late afternoon, when she has already completed her day's shopping. ARB (April, 1960) shows Romper Room leading all competition with a 9 rating.

It’s time for tv’s ‘agonizing reappraisal’

A character I know and love had the following thoughts about television while on the jet to Hollywood. His thoughts may be slightly exaggerated—but, to my way of thinking, only slightly.

“The movies killed vaudeville!”
“Radio killed the movies!”
“Television killed radio!” (and the movies again).

How many times have you heard these historical pronouncements from assorted pundits in show business or on its fringe? Often enough, I’d guess, since they are generally accepted as the facts of life.

Well, I’d like to stand up and be counted. I don’t believe a word of these cliches.

The movies did not kill vaudeville. Vaudeville simply committed suicide. It died the slow way, the hard way, simply by absorbing its own poisons of inertia, smugness and self-indulgence.

From the stars on down, the process was the same. Put together an act, rehearse it in the smaller towns, get it down pat and then—the big time. Tour the same big cities over and over, play that act before the same audiences again and again. But change it? Get some new material the customers haven’t seen before? Take those chances? Never!

Slow Death = The result was inevitable. Slowly, but relentlessly, public apathy grew and grew. And, when a new form of entertainment—the movies—came along, they naturally flocked to it. But vaudeville had already virtually become a corpse. The movies were simply a last-minute adversary administering the coup de grace to an inert form.

Radio vs. the movies?
The plot’s the same. Only the protagonists and the gimmicks change. Again it was a case of death by self-poisoning.

Make fewer pictures, but better pictures?
“Nonsense!” said the producers. “We’ve got the formula that pays off. Let’s stick with it, boys, and keep pouring them out of the same old mold.”

“Story values? Never heard of ‘em! If one star won’t do the business, give them two stars, three stars, even six stars. Load the picture so they can’t stay away. We can afford it, can’t we?”
You know what happened.

A diagnosis: Not homicide, but suicide by the same old poisons.

Tv vs. Radio = The case of television vs. radio?
Here, too, the defendant is, at worst, guilty only of being an accessory after the fact. The same evil poisons were present, if only an autopsy could have been taken. The coroner would have found an added starter—a lethal little bug called the transcription (and, subsequently, tape).

“Do my show live? Have to be in the same studio at the same time, week after week? Are you kidding? I can record it when I want to—here in Hollywood or in New York—and not lose up my picture assignments, my personal appearances, or even my fishing plans.

No problem. And I can do two or three in advance and take it easy for a while. Audience reaction? That’s a cinch.

We’ve got it on records—little chuckles, slow builds and boff laughs—we’ve got them all.”

“Oh, and one more important thing. We can do away with fluffs. If I goof or my guest comic lays an egg with a joke or two, or my singer—God forbid—hits a clinker, we just take them out and do that part of the tape over. As I said before—‘No Problems!’”

True enough. All too true. But with the advent of this convenience, this “make-sureness,” the life and breath went out of radio. The sense of immediacy disappeared. The listening audience lost the thrill of eavesdropping on something exciting, something funny, something interesting that was happening then and now.

And, losing these things, it lost to a large degree, its interest.

Finding: Death by suffocation due to virus—tape virus.

Tv’s Future = What’s happening to television today? Only a few short years ago, television was an infant. Now it is an economic giant. But it was a lustrous, vital, fighting infant that demanded your attention and your affection. It fell on its face a few times, to be sure. But you had to admire it for daring to run and trying to climb high and fast when it really should have been content to take things easy, to crawl before it walked.

And television was live! What you saw on your home screen was happening at that moment and you vicariously were an active part of it. Hell, you were a participant! And, it made no difference if the submarine on Studio One wasn’t quite as real as the one in the U-boat movie you saw last week. There were many things pictures could do better. Chases, for example, on horseback or in cars. And so on. But somehow television was more fun. You got more “kick” out of it.

Today, more than 80% of television product is on tape or film.

Is it to be another case of suicide? This time by the same poisons plus that antibiotic-proof germ—economics?

I hate to say it, but unless we take a good hard look at just what’s happening, unless we in the industry have the courage to make what has been described as an “agonizing reappraisal,” it may well be that, “Here we go again.”

P.S. From now on, I’m taking the train.

Hard sell or humor?
EDITOR: Many points Mr. Barasch covers in his MONDAY MEMO rebuttal on tv commercial humor are good sense [Kenneth S. Barasch wrote "Hard sell, not humor, should win tv awards," page 22, July 4, in reply to Mr. Diamant's "How well does humor sell on tv?," page 22, June 27]. But the basic problem is something more than a matter of taste.

The solely "fast, fast, fast" approach he seems to be recommending may sow a tv viewer whirlwind. Mr. Barasch believes strongly in the hard sell, pays obeisance twice to the "real-life situations and diagrams" of the Dristan, Rolaids and Anacin commercials and ends by stating "the trend is away from humor in advertising."

It is to violently disagree—and mention such past and present humorous super-salesmen of the hard smart sell as Luckies' marching cigarettes, Ajax pixies, Muriel's sexy cigar, Bardahl's private eye, Alka-Seltzer's Speedy, Jello's busy housewife, Piel's Bert & Harry, Seven-Up's woodpecker, Maypo's kids, Maxwell House's percolator, and many more.

No one argues that the only proper yardstick for all advertising efforts is sales figures. But why must every poor soul who wins an art directors' award always be ready to defend himself against the inference that he really cares nothing about selling the product?— Lincoln Diamant, Vice President in Charge of Tv-Radio, Daniel & Charles Inc., New York.

Telethons for charity
EDITOR: We have read with interest the article in the July 4 issue, page 65, "Is a charity telethon worth it?" Based on rather wide experience, our answer to the question posed is an unqualified "yes." That the telethon for the March of Dimes in Washington, D.C., was financially unsuccessful can be attributed solely to lack of sound planning, not the least of which was the belief that the running time of the show could be a great deal less than normal without having any significant effect on the final total of pledges phoned in.

Statistics prove unequivocally that the application of a formula involving minimum fees, maximum air time and publicity invariably means excellent results for the charity involved and amazing good will for the station.

To this I would add, of course, The National Foundation’s responsibility to see that the formula is applied, something we failed to do in this instance.

Condemnation of telethons because of one failure out of the many successful ones the broadcast industry has so generously directed for the March of Dimes is, I believe, not only completely unfounded but quite unfair to station executives. Just last January, for example; Cleveland raised $125,000 with a 16% expense ratio; St. Louis, $75,000 on 22%; Madison, Wis., $13,000 on 13.8%; Sacramento, $65,000 on 26%; and last September Flint, Mich., raised $79,000 on 20.8%.

Telethons can be a great vehicle if both the station and the charity exercise prudence. The March of Dimes pledges it will exercise such prudence.—George P. Voss, Vice President for Public Relations, The National Foundation, New York.

Louisville: $1.1 million

EDITOR: Was tremendously interested in your account of the telethon catastrophe on WTTG (TV) Washington. It is this sort of stupid experience that justifiably has given telethons a bad name.

We have done them for the last eight years and there is another side to it. The first two were for cerebral palsy. This cause we abandoned because we felt that a mass medium should not be dedicated to a problem which, at best, represents marginal medicine when it comes to children.

At the same time we recognized that TV did have a tremendous capacity for raising money and so we established our own “WHAS Crusade for Children.” We persuaded the ministers on our Moral Side of the News panel to assume the burden of allocating the funds and in the succeeding six years we have raised almost $1.1 million.—Victor A. Shollis, Vice President and Director, WHAS-AM-TV Louisville, Ky.

EDITOR: May I commend you on “An evolution in star contracts,” a most informative and thought provoking article (page 27, July 4). HOW AGENCIES RATE THE NETWORKS

Tv's major buyers candidly appraise the long & short suits of each

The biggest buyers in network television have their own personal opinions of the networks with which they do business—but you could never tell what their attitudes are from what they buy.

Their quest for the program-period-price combination that is best for their clients often cuts violently across their private evaluations of the networks—and the network officials—with whom they spend (or don't spend) millions of dollars a year.

The chasm that frequently exists between what they feel and what they buy was pointed out last week in a Broadcasting survey of agency executives who control two-thirds of all network television billings. The survey, granting anonymity in order to be assured of candid answers, brought replies from top television officials in virtually all of the top 25 television agencies. The agencies represented in the survey accounted for $329 million, or 67%, of network tv billings in 1959.

The findings showed, with inevitable deviations, a fairly uniform “image” for each of the three networks on questions of quality, integrity, initiative and audience appeal.

If buyers invested their money according to program “quality,” management reliability and integrity, they would buy CBS.

If mass appeal and low cost-per-thousand were the criterion, they would buy ABC.

If they were looking for originality, flexibility and initiative in a network they would buy NBC.

But in buying by any one of these sets of standards they would have to disregard other elements which, at least in their own minds, keep any one of the three networks from being ideal to do business with.

CBS-TV, for instance, is rated a low second to ABC-TV in cost-per-thousand values, is sometimes considered stuffy and with some agency executives seems to be losing some of the respect and esteem which, nevertheless, still put it high in that category.

There is a feeling that NBC juggles its brass too much—that an air of instability comes from frequent realignments of top executives—and that its ratings and cost-per-thousand are dragging.

ABC is accused of being hard to pin down on a deal—“you'd better have a lawyer along.” to paraphrase one executive—and of having trouble delivering as many markets and as much audience as it promises.

None of the networks escaped strong indictments from a number of agency executives—for lack of creativity, especially, and for their increasing control of programming. Not many agency men failed to criticize on both scores, and some linked the two charges in a cause-and-effect relationship.

There was divided opinion as to which network is easiest to deal with—as well as on the unrelated question of which is easiest to make a deal with—and there was some feeling that both individually and as a group they’re becoming harder to get along with. “High-handed” was the adjective sometimes used to describe this attitude, which sometimes was ascribed to developments stemming out of the quiz scandals and to the near-sold-out status of prime network time.

On one point there was almost unanimous agreement: that the fact that it’s on one network does not give a commercial greater “acceptability” among viewers than it would have on either of the other networks. There was less, but still substantial, agreement that there are fewer off-card deals now than there used to be, and that when they occur they’re more apt to involve reductions in program costs than in time charges.

Here is an extensive sampling of the opinions expressed in the survey:

Agency Man No. 1 * A vice president and radio-tv director points to CBS as the network his agency preferred to do business with because there “seems to be a higher caliber of integrity in their dealings.” He says that CBS officials were “just as sharp” as others but seem to “inspire confidence.”

With respect to program quality, he ranks them: CBS, NBC, ABC. Rating-wise, he places ABC on top, followed by CBS and NBC, and in terms of cost-per-thousand, the ranking is ABC-NBC-CBS.

In general, he declares, he is not satisfied with the product the networks have been offering in the past few years because they rely on the programming created by “a few outside production houses,” which leaves little opportunity for choice. Agencies, he claims, should have “more of a say” in programming. His respect for networks, except CBS, has diminished in recent years because, he asserts, they have become “high-handed since they are in control of progamming.” Networks, he says, have become less creative because “there is little need to be creative.”

In terms of programming and sales management, he ranks CBS at the top, though he respects ABC’s “aggressive salesmanship.” He takes a dim view, however, of some of ABC’s gambits, claiming that network often promised more than it could deliver in terms of audience and markets. He commented: “Even when dealing with Ollie Treyz (ABC-TV president) it’s a good idea to have a lawyer present.” Their salesman may “promise you one thing; a top-level executive something else, and Treyz still something else.”

He characterizes NBC as having “an amorphous quality.” Its programming and salesmanship, he says that even though he often, he notes, that this tends to create an uncertainty in negotiating with NBC.

He says there is “a stiffening” of the rate card, but observes that in past years ABC was not loath to make a deal. He says, however, that certain bargains still can be made today—it might mean fewer markets or that a radio campaign would be thrown in, but the rate card usually is upheld.

Agency Man No. 2  ■ Another vice president and radio-TV director declines to express a preference for the network he “liked to do business with,” insisting he finds them all “acceptable.” In terms of quality programming, he tabs CBS number one, followed by NBC and ABC in that order. For ratings and cost-per-thousand, he lists them this way: ABC, NBC, CBS. This agency places most of its business with CBS.

He is dissatisfied with much of the programming the networks offer, pointing out the agency has “too little say, because we don’t have much choice on programs or time slots.” The programming control assumed by the networks, he adds, has made for a little less creativity—they’re using a ‘copy-cat’ formula.” His respect for the networks, he says, has not changed materially, though he says they have become “more dictatorial” as an outgrowth of the quiz scandals. He notes that even though his particular agency wanted to request a certain show in a certain time slot, the network decided to throw it out and offered him another program which the agency found unacceptable.

Though this executive feels that CBS has “the edge” in terms of sales and programming personnel, he prefers to negotiate with ABC. He observes: “At ABC, we can deal directly with Ollie Treyz and work out a suitable arrangement. This does not mean that we are not negotiating an up-and-up deal.”

He says he has no evidence that “illegal deals” are worked out at any of the networks, though negotiation for a time-and-production package can be rugged. His agency places most of its business on CBS, whose “overall image is the best,” and ABC, which “delivers a mass audience.”

Agency Man No. 3  ■ At another agency the vice president and media director calls CBS “the overall No. 1 network. It has a larger audience in its prime time.” He explains: “It seems to me that CBS is the most professional of the three. It is more candid than the others and is most willing to keep all parties in a deal—our sales people, our programming people, our media people—apprised of what is going on. CBS seems to make our job more pleasant. The other two often are shocking in their amateurism.” This agency spends more money at CBS.

He characterizes program quality of the networks this way: “CBS is at the top; NBC is the most experimental; ABC hits the lowest common denominator but delivers an audience.” He contends there is a three-way battle for ratings. Of cost-per-thousand, he says: “CBS is still the best overall because it delivers audiences most often where you want them; ABC is the most efficient; NBC can offer good programs and good time slots. One word of caution about ABC—it promises a lot but sometimes cannot deliver these promises.”

His respect for ABC has increased, he says. He points out that ABC has programmed much “junk” and a substantial part of its schedule is “still junk;” but nevertheless ABC today “is a serious contender, and no one can dispute that.” On the whole, his respect for networks generally has diminished because of diminishing creativity on their part. He is adamant on one point that disputes many of his agency counterparts: the ad agency does not belong in the programming business.

In terms of personnel, this executive places CBS on top, followed by NBC and ABC. He also says that at ABC one has to be careful to make the deal with the top man—Mr. Treyz—or “you can’t be sure of a firm deal.” Though rate cards are firm, he says, an agency can bargain in the areas of program costs and discount structures.

Another way to bargain cited by this executive: “We bought one-half of a network show. Nobody else wanted to buy the other half. The network came to us and made an attractive offer to buy the other half too. Though we had some feeling we were stuck with a ‘dog’ since nobody else wanted it, we bought it because the price was right.”

Agency Man No. 4  ■ Another agency radio-TV director picks NBC as the network he prefers to do business with because NBC is the “most flexible, imaginative of all—not cut and dried.” He ranks NBC, too, as the spearhead of “program quality,” followed by CBS and ABC. This agency places a larger percentage of its business on NBC.

He is satisfied with the product offered by the networks, but acknowledges that the problem is most complex. The volume of production offered by networks is large and unless there is a change in concept, whereby the networks would be responsible for half of the present output, he envisions no program improvement. He adds: “I don’t know whether a change, from an advertising point of view, is advisable.”

He ventured that he does not have the same respect for CBS that he had in the past. That network’s actions during the quiz controversy, resulting in tighter controls by the network, helped shape his new attitude toward CBS. He also singled out “the way CBS fired Lou Cowan” (ex-president of CBS-TV).

This official rates ABC the “most difficult” to pin down when negotiating for a program. He claims that two executives at ABC, for example, would have different versions of a deal that is being negotiated. In the final analysis, he says, an agency man might have to “go to Ollie Treyz.”

Agency Man No. 5  ■ A media vice president, who said his agency places its largest share of business with ABC and NBC second, prefers to do business with CBS because, he feels, CBS personnel seem to have an edge in competency and cooperation. For program quality he ranks CBS first and NBC second, but his rankings in terms of both ratings and cost per thousand put ABC on top and CBS second.

For certain products appealing to the mass audience this executive is satisfied with the networks’ program offerings, but he adds that there are not enough programs that are of high enough quality or low enough cost to be submitted to the “corporate image” type of purchaser. His respect, or liking, for the networks has changed in recent years: Only one of the three, ABC, is now harder to do business with—the other two are easier, he says. He believes the networks are less creative at present, but that this is not entirely the networks' fault, because creative ventures (Wide Wide World for one) in the past have been mainly sustainers at high cost to the networks.

No one network has an edge in terms of management, he says. He finds that the networks generally stick to their rate cards, not network "deals" more than the others. He gets equal "right treatment" from the networks. He thinks ABC offers more of a "sellers market" attitude, but that this varies with each season and with the top network adopting the attitude.

Agency Man No. 6 • ABC's new competitive strength and the all-network issue of program control are exerting a strong influence on the shopping and thinking of a vice president-television director of an agency with an interest in a dozen shows.

The network image changes each year and always comes down to what-have-you-done-for-me lately, in this agency man's view. He adds that ABC wins the popularity stakes this summer, although that network and NBC get about equal shares of his client's money, with CBS trailing, a pattern that at one time was the reverse.

ABC is the least complicated of the three. You deal with two people, Ollie Treyz or Tom Moore [programming vp], for management decisions, bypassing the boards and elaborate organizational "folderol" of the others, he explains.

But this time last year, this network buyer would have named CBS as his favorite to do business with, citing efficiency and knowledge of client problems. He still puts CBS first in program quality and ratings, NBC No. 2 in programs, and ABC No. 2 in ratings.

Although the ABC plan of selling nighttime minutes has been criticized (the others are copying it, he adds), there's no diminution of commercial effectiveness so far as he can see.

There is an adequate selection of programs generally available, this buyer feels, although he finds networks generally are harder to deal with now than in the past because of changing supply and demand. What particularly worries him is program control, which he says simply means financial participation in a great many instances. He thinks it's foolish to exclude the advertiser and short-sighted to push the customers around.

In what he calls the last remaining area of network creativity, public affairs and live specials, he thinks CBS has the best record. He says ABC heretofore has demonstrated least of what columnists call "responsibility," but is beginning to develop in this area.

On the management side, CBS has been best over a period of years, he says. But you can't deny the effectiveness of the two-man ABC set-up, he adds, although he doesn't know how long Messrs. Treyz and Moore can continue to spread themselves that thin.

"Dealing" on ratecards also disappeared, in his view. There are deals now, but they are mostly on programs costs, for example CBS' Aquanauts, ABC's Hong Kong and NBC's Dan Raven.

Agency Man No. 7 • A network invariably loses face with an agency when it changes too many of its executives' faces. That's one important criterion used by a top radio-TV agency official in naming the network with which he prefers to do business. He prefers CBS-TV, though it happens his agency bills most with NBC-TV and then second with CBS-TV. He ranks CBS-TV on top because of a strong image (though he admits there have been some sudden changes on its executive level).

NBC-TV is known to him as the network that periodically undergoes upheaval, and ABC-TV as the one that often has trouble clearing stations.

But he also picks for program quality and ratings but points out that NBC-TV would get a better shake in the ratings picture if specials were counted on the nighttime scoreboard. He has no preference as to type of product provided by the networks though he deplors the trend to film—"there's no reason to have a network when it supplies only film programs; the idea of a network is to originate live programs for stations." CBS-TV, he adds, probably "does more about this than the other two networks," though much of what it's doing is "longhair."

The case, or conversely the difficulty, in fact should increase commercial effectiveness through the added selling time available for one of the messages.

They also point out that networks themselves have increased the number of tv commercials through the introduction and expansion of participation or spot-carrier selling within network programs. The extra 10 seconds needed to make a 40-second break, they insist, could be provided by shortening network promotional material on each side by five seconds. Some—but not all—advocates say 40-second breaks are the only alternative to rate increases.

Networks generally resist the 40-second idea on the ground that commercial effectiveness would be diluted by either more or longer commercials, and network advertisers as a group take the same position. There also is a less openly mentioned fear: that the extra time would not always be used for just two local spots but would tempt stations to indulge in more triple-spotting.

A longer pause for station identification?

A determined drive was reported last week to be building up among affiliates of all three tv networks in an effort to get nighttime station breaks expanded from 30 seconds to 40.

What luck they might have was still a moot question. The bid for 40-second breaks—to increase stations' national spot and local business potential by accommodating two 20's or a 10-and-30 combination—already has been taken to ABC-TV and NBC-TV by their respective affiliates boards, and ABC-TV has said it would provide one 40-second break each night, beginning in the fall (Broadcasting, June 27). At NBC, which agreed to consider the 40-second proposal, there were indications that three or four might be allowed each week (Closed Circuit, June 27).

CBS-TV authorities say they have not felt any real pressure from affiliates on this score—that perhaps 10 or 15 have recommended such a lengthening from time to time over the past three months.

Among stations, however, reports were widespread that the drive was gaining momentum and would be pressed at all three networks—including ABC-TV, where the push apparently would be for more than the seven 40-second spots per week already planned. Some advocates insisted that all nighttime breaks should eventually be 40 seconds in length.

Reps Have Stake • The campaign is known to have the support of a number of leading station representatives, although they indicated that they had abandoned any active role on the ground that the drive was now being pushed through the respective affiliates boards.

Stations and their reps argue that the 10-second expansion of current breaks would not diminish the effectiveness of commercials—after all, they point out, the number of commercials need be increased—and an agency has in dealing with a network now, compared to former years, depends mostly on personal contacts—"it's important whether or not one has a mutual respect."

The networks are less creative now than in the past, he feels, but "there now appears to be a great need expressed for creativity from the networks. I detect a 'comeback drive.'" The networks, he feels, now are coming out of a "buy film" period.

Agency Man No. 8: A tv department head who also is a programming expert says ABC-TV ranks first in programs while the other networks are tops in the dramatic or special fields.

The ABC-TV "image", however, he finds to be in flux. Where once it was "entertainment, per se," the image is changing in that the network has been "awakening in the public service area heretofore dominated by an NBC or CBS." In short, he says, ABC is creating "a more overall network image."

As to which network has the edge: "It's anybody's ball game" and "no one network is easy to work with." (This agency bills most at ABC, second at CBS.) The most marked effect in networking today, he finds to be the entry of film studios giving agencies "large inventories from which to pick." As a network customer, "we find the agency is no longer only a buyer but also the catalyst which must help develop a new tv idea." The networks, he notes, are purchasing more and acting more as suppliers rather than developing programs themselves. But, he cautions, there's an apparent "network resurgence" coming about and the networks are "now going back into the program business."

This executive finds "deals are always being made" but one network is no more guilty than another, though the size or strength of the network could make a difference "in what can be worked out."

Agency Man No. 9: An account man at another top agency says: "I'd rather do business with CBS-TV because the network is more realistic—that is, it will deliver—in terms of pricing and in values." In program quality, he ranks CBS-TV first, NBC-TV second and ABC-TV third. In terms of ratings, he makes it CBS-TV, ABC-TV and then NBC-TV.

He feels his commercials get more acceptability when they are on CBS-TV only because of the higher caliber station the network has on the average—"you obtain greater commercial acceptability through stations, not networks."

As an account man, he finds a general satisfaction with what product the networks offer though he is explicit in noting a lack in recent years in pioneering new programming and an absence of new program forms.

He says it's easier for the agency to do business with the networks now compared to years past, basically for two reasons: (1) the fading of must-buy lists of stations in favor of dollar-volume requirements and (2) the relinquishment by the networks of the 52-week, firm order. Networks, he finds, are by and large less creative today than in past years (he defies the naming of a single flaw that's unique "actively promoted on the networks in the last three years.")

In terms of the people running the network, he votes for CBS-TV, and as for which network will deal more he nominates NBC-TV. This agency has heavy billing on all three networks but particularly on CBS-TV and NBC-TV. Which network has more of a "sellers' market" attitude? CBS-TV, followed by ABC-TV with NBC-TV the network most actively operating in a climate of a buyers' market."

Detroit agencies plan Aug. 1 merger

Two Detroit ad agencies will merge effective Aug. 1. Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance and Ross Roy Inc., both headquartered in the Motor City, will become Ross Roy-BSF&D Inc.

A joint announcement by the two agencies predicted an annual billing of about $25 million for the new firm.

Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance has had a reported billing of $9 million for the last two years in all medium. Ross Roy, which formerly handled a major share of Chrysler Corp. advertising, had 1959 billings reported at $14,4.

President of the new company will be Walter C. Ayers, now president of BSF&D. Ross Roy will serve as chairman of the merger group.

Agency Man No. 10: One media director likes all networks the same—the situation changes as rapidly as their personnel, he says. If a network happens to be rich, it's hard to do business with. If hungry, it's easier. He judges CBS first on program quality and says the ratings race is close between CBS and ABC, although CBS is on top at the moment. ABC wins on cost-per-thousand because of lower rates, but he thinks this situation is evening out.

Creatively, he feels, the networks have been stirred up a little by government pressure. They're putting more time, effort and money into what will make them look better in Washington and more advertisers want to sponsor these shows.

Agency Man No. 11: A senior, seasoned broadcast veteran quickly assembled his rankings of the networks and then raked all of them over the coals.

This agency man selects ABC-TV as "the easiest to do business with" and more inclined to "listen to your point of view, maybe because it is younger."

Ranked in terms of ratings in the coming season: (1) CBS, (2) ABC and (3) NBC. This will be true in the relative shares of audience, he thinks, with NBC-TV obtaining the best balance of programming (including public service). In this area he predicts NBC-TV would take over the leadership which CBS-TV has maintained for the past five years—the Democratic convention coverage, he felt, already has dramatized this new trend. In cost-per-thousand ABC is lowest, then CBS-TV and NBC-TV.

The tv executive's blast at the networks came in answer to questions of whether he is satisfied with the type of network product he is able to buy and whether he might suggest changes. He's not satisfied with the product and hurl's two distinct charges:

(1) The networks, he complains, have failed to achieve a balance in entertainment programming. They've had neither judgment nor perhaps courage to "inject elements of participation, of live drama and of variety" in programs.

(2) In scheduling programs they are influenced by the network ownership of those shows, he charges.

He goes on to picture a more difficult climate for agencies in doing business with networks "only because of their ownership and interests in more proprieties, of a strong editorial judgment favoring the owned property."

The networks, he contends, are at their "nadir in creativity in the past 10 years," claiming nearly every network to be "staffed with editors but not one chief or key executive officer who could be positioned or identified with program creation or development."

He ranks the people who run the in-

WHAT TV SPECIALS DID FOR SINCLAIR

NBC-TV has a new persuasion tool to sell the special slots next season. It is a "Special Report" documenting effectiveness of one special on two audiences, the viewer at large and the dealer.

"Special Report" is on Music From Shubert Alley and the job the show did for Sinclair Friday, Nov. 13, 1959, 10-11 p.m. Significant gains are shown for Sinclair in attitudes of viewers over those held by non-viewers. Dealer attitudes about Sinclair's use of television were found enthusiastic. The study was conducted by R.H. Bruskin Assoc. and released last week by Thomas E. Coffin, director of research for NBC-TV.

Viewer Education - More specifically, these are some of the findings of the consumer phase.

Brand awareness: 41% of viewers spontaneously mentioned the sponsor's brand when asked about the product category, gasoline, whereas only 27% of non-viewers named Sinclair as a brand of gasoline, giving the sponsor a 52% gain.

Slogan and trademark association: Association of the sponsor's trademark was 88% higher among viewers. Similarly, viewers correctly identifying two slogans chalked up 88% and 375% pluralities over non-viewers.

Brand rating: 73% more viewers than non-viewers placed Sinclair in the group of best gasolines.

Favorable opinion: 30% of viewers said they had recently seen or heard something that made them feel more favorable toward the sponsor and his products, against 11% of non-viewers.

Company image: Five questions covered this, and on the average, 29% more viewers than non-viewers had a favorable image of the company.

Dealer Phase - These are study highlights, demonstrating influence of the tv special on Sinclair dealers.

Attitude toward media: 8 of every 10 dealers selected tv as the most effective national medium for selling their products.

Awareness of effective advertising: Of dealers who saw the show, 86% reported they had recently been exposed to effective advertising for their company, while only 22% of the non-viewing dealers said this.

Effect on consumers: 88% of the viewing dealers said Music From Shubert Alley made people feel more favorable to Sinclair and the same percentage thought it made people more interested in buying the product.

Special requests: More than 9 of 10 dealers wanted Sinclair to put on more specials.

The consumer sample was made up of 1,010 telephone interviews with men and women in 23 cities in the Central and Mountain Time Zones, so located because of the late clock-time of the show, 10-11 p.m. EST. Interviews took place right after show sign-off. The 1,010 broke down into 187 viewers, or 18.5% and 823 non-viewers, 81.5%.

A total of 208 Sinclair dealers were questioned by telephone the morning after the show, with 132 or 63.5% reporting they saw it.

The interviews are summarized and graphed in NBC's 24-page "Special Report."

Agency Man No. 12 - A strong agency negotiator says he has no preferences among the networks in doing business. In ranking for program quality, he places CBS-TV first followed by ABC-TV and then NBC-TV. In ratings it is CBS-TV again with ABC-TV and NBC-TV "about even."

He's not satisfied with the type of product he can buy on the networks, and as a top customer of the networks he would suggest they change the program pattern, achieving greater bal-solve trouble spots. He thinks probably NBC-TV is the easiest to make deals with because it has lagged behind the others in selling for 1960-61.

There are deals on the networks all the time, he asserts, "if you have the program the network wants, it will offer all kinds of deals" or if the network holds a period it cannot sell it similarly will be amenable to offers. Most of these deals are made through talent contributions (the network picks up part or all of the cost). ABC-TV probably ranks second to NBC-TV in this regard as he sizes it.

Which network treats the agency "right"? It's all a law of supply and demand: "If you are a potential big customer you are a big hero." Agencies, he finds are treated quite well in general. As to the "sellers market": CBS-TV is toughest, ABC-TV not much and NBC's even less so.

In its billing, this executive's agency piles most chips on CBS-TV, next on ABC-TV and third on NBC-TV.

Agency Man No. 13 = A tv-radio vice president whose clients' money goes to CBS and NBC in about equal shares and says CBS first on program quality ("balance") and ratings. He rates ABC and NBC about evenly behind CBS in show quality and places NBC third in ratings. The networks read alphabetically, ABC, CBS, NBC, on cost-per-thousand.

He's fairly happy with programs offered, although he regrets that under increased network control it's hard to take the program initiative. Networks are less creative than formerly, acting as purchasers rather than creators, according to this view.

He feels ABC is fairly easy to do business with because "you wind up doing business with Ollie Treyz." He's "reachable." NBC, he feels, is having programming difficulties and also seems to be behind in the sales parade, while CBS is in a top-dog position and can negotiate more than others with a prospective buyer. He thinks ABC and CBS have the edge in management.

Networks manifest a "sellers market" attitude, but in his view this doesn't mean customers are being treated unfairly. His one-two-three ranking in this regard (in order of independence): CBS, ABC and NBC.

Expectations for this season: He hopes the specials will be more special. He looks forward to pay television, a medium to which he says, advertisers would like to gain access.

Agency Man No. 14 = The broadcast business manager of a New York agency, a man with some few millions to spread around the networks, refuses to talk generally about those he does business with. His money is about evenly split between ABC and NBC, and CBS gets a much smaller share.

Pressed, he will admit that his agency is in a better trading position with ABC, although he concedes management laurels to CBS, which always has been the leader by a "Harvard yardstick," he thinks.

There are areas where this spokesman is dissatisfied with two or all three networks. One aspect that has distressed him is the magazine concept of participation selling, and he says the trend soon will be back to individual sponsorship. Sponsors will get this by spending more money, because they need the identification and prestige of sponsorship, and they'll continue in TV because they need it as a trade vehicle, he asserts.

All the networks are selling the country's economy short by not gearing for client's marketing needs, in one official's opinion. Marketing research should be added to the standard audience research networks offer. Another marketing minus-factor this adman deplores is out of networks' hands. That is the spectrum problem involving a number of markets being limited to two networks, handicapping ABC and advertisers.)

Networks nowadays are delivering less creative material than in other years, he says, but they are on the threshold of tremendous creative improvement, this agencyman predicts, a trend accelerated by government pressure. Creativity, he maintains, has been suffering because networks are preoccupied with selling.

CBS takes the number-one management rating in his book because of a close-knit organization team that seems to respond to the same signals. At the other networks he senses a degree of disorganization resulting variously from growing pains and/or interdependence on a larger corporation and the intricacies of this kind of financial situation.

"CBS sticks to its ratecard, says this buyer, but it is possible to get incentives from the others in the form of extra commercials or program concessions, depending always on the season and the network's SRO condition. The speaker thinks it time that networks did something about flexible discounts, a rate factor that fluctuates "emotionally," being offered and then withdrawn at any time and devised on complicated structures subject to widely different interpretations. This, he says, reminds him of a few years ago in spot radio.

While ABC is easy to get along with, this spokesman finds CBS still a little on the stuffy side. NBC, he feels, has been forced out of this position by ABC competition.

This agencyman pinpoints daytime TV as an area of deficiency. The CBS schedule shows planning, he thinks, while the other networks lack stability.

Agency Man No. 15 A radio-tv director with an agency that places the largest share of its business with CBS first and ABC second says CBS is more cooperative, gives more direct answers and offers better follow-through on the servicing end.

His ranking of the networks in terms of program quality: CBS, NBC, ABC; in terms of ratings and cost-per-thousand, CBS, ABC, NBC.

He is not satisfied with the type of product made available by the networks, but as a customer he would not suggest any changes.

His respect or liking of the networks has not changed in recent years although he says they are harder to do business with because today's is very definitely a seller's market and the networks are acting accordingly. He believes the networks are less creative, with all programming geared toward gaining big audience. He says CBS has an edge in terms of the people who are running it; CBS will "deal" more than the others in offering distress merchandise for reduced program costs.

Agency Man No. 16 Another agency man prefers "from a technical standpoint" to do business with CBS but "from an over-all facilities standpoint" with NBC. CBS, NBC and ABC are in the one-two-three positions in his assessment of program quality, but he adds that ABC is all on film and it's much easier to judge in the live area. This man's agency bills pretty evenly among the three networks.

Screenings beginning last Christmas showed a terrible sameness in new shows, he reports, but he also feels that agencies must share the blame. Sometimes when they've been venturesome in buying, they've lived to regret it. The viewer, in his book, is perhaps most responsible of all. He thinks CBS has the most balanced programming.

Speaking from a production point of view, this spokesman has a good word for each of the networks.

Network creativity has lessened not only because of the need to play it safe, he says, but also because of "ugly and rather senseless" congressional investigations. Moreover, with increasing demands on network time and facilities, there is less time to experiment.

CBS gets his vote for management. NBC has got rid of more good people than anybody ever is going to have again, he contends.

Any steady, large advertiser can do better than the rate card at the networks, this executive contends, but he says ABC will deal more.

Agency Man No. 17 — The executive producer of a smaller New York agency has a personal feeling that ABC is the "nicest" network, the most cooperative to do business with, but he goes on to quote Leo Durocher: "Nice guys finish last." CBS has all his shop's money at the moment and NBC will have customary daytime-late night participation allocations in the fall.

For management, anybody gets his vote except NBC, He cites red tape and a history of bad experiences here, with little grievances turning into big grievances. A lot of "little Lord High Executives" complicate the situation, in his opinion.

Networks have done great things in programming but not enough. Specials too often grab the glory on the award show, while bread-and-butter fare, a Danny Thomas Show that does a good job the year around, loses out.

Agency Man No. 18 — The agency media director calls NBC the "most cooperative" and, therefore, the network that he personally preferred to do business with. But as for program quality, he rates CBS on top, trailed by NBC and ABC in that order. He observes: "If I had complete latitude in picking a program and the time slot, I would pick CBS as the network to carry the show." The agency, he notes, its billing almost evenly between CBS and NBC, uses ABC on an infrequent basis.

He believes networks have become "less creative" with respect to popular programs but "more creative" in special events and documentaries.

Asked which network has "the edge" in terms of people running it, he replied: "ABC. Only because it has Ollie Treyz, who practically runs both the programming and the sales side of that network."

It is his opinion that all networks make "some kind of deal." He points to the segmentation type of sponsorship, which permits many advertisers to buy into a particular show, as a cause of "dealing." He says he has known cases of a participation offered to one advertiser at one price and to another at a substantially lower price. This is true at all networks, he adds.

Agency Man No. 19 — Speaking for an agency that will place most if its money next season on ABC-TV, an executive rates CBS-TV as the network he prefers to do business with, as tops in ratings and of program quality and one which has an edge in terms of people running it. ABC-TV ranks high with him as the network with the lowest cost-per-thousand, the one with which a "deal" can be made more readily. He also finds ABC-TV, however, to have the least "built-in" acceptability and identity for commercials because of spot carrier programming and local breaks within hour-long shows.

Agency Man No. 20 & 21 — A radio-TV director says he is not satisfied with the programs offered by any of the networks, and in dealing with network personnel allows only that he gets sore less with CBS than with the others. In terms of talented people, CBS has it all over the other two, he says, with ABC coming in second and NBC last.

A media director at the same agency says that for program quality—meaning development of new shows and formats—ABC is on top followed by CBS and NBC. He also notes the kind of treatment you get at the networks is in direct proportion to the size of your billings.

Winchell negotiates

Hazel Bishop and ABC-TV last week were negotiating for a new Walter Winchell news program that would be aired 10:30-11 p.m. on Sundays beginning Oct. 2 and then becoming a 15-minute program on Nov. 27 (11-11:15 p.m.) when the Churchill series starts at 10:30. Mr. Winchell has appeared on ABC-TV in the filmed The Walter Winchell File and is narrator of The Untouchables also on that network. In 1955 he left newcasting in a dispute with ABC, filing a $7 million suit against the network which he withdrew two years later.

THE SPONSOR'S LONG REACH
Drama shows victims of agencies' whims; Subject matter, casting scored by panel

Advertisers—particularly the agencies which represent them—have been charged with tampering in the writing of scripts and in casting of dramatic tv shows.

The accusations came from a group discussion conducted by the Fund for the Republic. The Fund today (July 25) released 31 pages of excerpts from the discussion entitled "The Relation of the Writer to Television." Participants included a representative threesome associated with the Fund, three top tv dramatists—playwrights Robert A. Aurthur, Rod Serling and Irve Tunic—tv critic Marya Mannes, and Evelyn Burkey, executive director, Writers' Guild of America.

Most of the attack centered on the advertising agency, where the participants alleged instances of interference in the production of a drama.

Among the various situations and/or types of "censorship" said to have occurred: The casting of Negro Sidney Poitier in the lead of a play, "A Man Is Ten Feet Tall," on Philco Playhouse drew sponsor interference because of fear of arousing the wrath of the south. Basis of the complaint was: tv sets are sold in the south and a controversial casting could hurt sales.

Controversy in Theme ▪ A story of the Emmett Till case (kidnapped and murdered in Mississippi) was not permitted by either the Theatre Guild or sponsor U.S. Steel (U.S. Steel Hour) until the action of the play was relocated in New England and all references which could be taken as being below the Mason-Dixon Line were eliminated. Mr. Serling, the author of the play, asserted the agency for U.S. Steel and the Guild went far as to remove "any reference to Coca-Cola and removed bottles of Coca-Cola from the set because they said that was a southern drink."

Mr. Tunick charged that "there is provincialism and an isolation about Madison Ave. that enters into all of this," noting the casting difficulties he had with a play for Armstrong Circle Theatre dealing with the discovery of the Dead Sea scrolls.

Mr. Serling noted that the first thing cut in a play that runs too long "is the play and the second thing is the theatre feature film are not suitable for the family viewing audience."

Code authorities, it was learned, also have solicited the cooperation of the Motion Picture Assn. of America in work on this problem.

Session with SRA Group ▪ The subcommittee's meeting, held Tuesday and Wednesday in New York, included a get-acquainted luncheon with Station Representatives Assn.'s Television Trade Practices Committee.

Stockton Helfrich, who becomes director of the New York office of television code affairs when it opens late next month, was among the code officials at both the subcommittee sessions and the luncheon with the SRA group. Others included Messrs. Hartenbower and Kelley; subcommittee member George Whitney of KFMB-TV San Diego; NAB Television Vice President Charles H. Tower, Television Code Affairs Director Edward H. Bronson; Assistant Director Harry Ward, and NAB Chief Counsel Douglas Anello.

Lawrence Webb, SRA managing director, headed the SRA delegation at the luncheon. Tv Trade Practices committee members on hand were Ed Shurick, Blair-Tv, chairman, and Walter Nilsen, Katz Agency; Lloyd Griffin, Peters, Griffin, Woodward; Richard Foote, Blair Television Association; Thomas White, Avery-Knodel; Jack White, Harrington, Righter & Parsons; James O'Grady, Young Television Corp., and Robert Dudley of Robert Meeker Assoc. representing Charles Standard of Meeker.

PERSONAL TV ADS IMPROVED
NAB praises most but singles out sinners

"Amazing improvement in good taste and acceptability" of personal products commercials on television was noted last week by the NAB Code Review Board subcommittee in charge of this area—but it thought some commercials for bras, girdles and theatrical motion pictures are still inclined to go too far (Current Orcur, July 18).

Gaines Kelley of WFMY-TV Greensboro, N.C., chairman of the subcommittee on personal products advertising, reported after a two-day meeting and review of current commercials in this category, that the task had been much more encouraging than the "prettygrim experience" of a similar review last April.

E. K. Hartenbower, KCMO-TV Kansas City, chairman of the code board, issued the caution about commercials in the bra-and-girdle category and those promoting motion picture theatre features. Of the former group he said: "Some commercials in this classification need revision, and there appears to be a tendency on the part of some advertisers and agencies to go beyond the limits of acceptable good taste. Our code staff has been instructed to discuss specific commercials with the proper agencies and arrange to modify some of these objectionable techniques."

Mr. Hartenbower also said the board is "seeking to have movie distributors use more care in the material selected for television display. Some theatre promotional commercials have been totally unacceptable. Scenes involving sex, violence and horror clipped from a

Teen girl data

Radio, television and records take a lot of time out of the average teen girl's life, as reported by Seventeen magazine in a new study, "The Teen-Age Girl: 1960." The average among the country's 9.75 million teen girls spend 2 hours and 13 minutes daily with radio, 2 hours and 12 minutes daily listening to records, 59.3 minutes daily watching television on the five weekdays and 1 hour and 23 minutes daily watching television on weekends. Of the girls, 53.4% own portable radios, 35.8% table models and 23.8% clock radios. On radio, 76.2% favor disc jockey shows.

The world's biggest radio telescope

This is an artist's concept of the world's biggest radio telescope. This giant telescope will use radio waves to locate objects that are billions of light years out in space. The dish-shaped mirror will be 600 feet in diameter—about the size of Yankee Stadium. It will be the biggest movable radio telescope the world has ever known.

As you'd imagine, it is going to take a lot of material to build an instrument this size. The American Bridge Division of United States Steel, as a major subcontractor, is fabricating and erecting 20,000 tons of structural steel for the framework alone. The U.S. Navy, through the prime contractor, is supervising the entire job. When it's completed, there'll be a power plant, office buildings and personnel facilities for a permanent 500-man crew. The site is near Sugar Grove, West Virginia.

United States Steel produces many materials that are essential for construction: structural carbon steel; high strength steels; alloy steels; stainless steels; steel piling; steel drainage products; cements; slag; reinforcing bars; welded wire fabric; wire rope; steel fence; electrical cable; and other allied products.

The most important building projects in our nation depend on steel.

DAYTIME NETWORK TV IMPACT

Audiences are growing, costs are dropping, new promotional study by TvB discovers

The television networks today (July 25) received a promotional assist from the Television Bureau of Advertising: A new presentation that points up the effectiveness of network TV during the week and in the daytime.

TvB is telling the advertising world that cost per thousand homes reached by programs in these periods has gone down 13.4% in the past five years. In figures scooped up by the bureau: average net time and talent cost by telecast of the average network quarter-hour program in the January-February period this year came to $16,300. But in 1958 the comparative average was $19,600, and in 1956 it was $15,400.

In the meantime, homes watching the average minute of weekday daytime TV this year totaled over 8.8 million compared with 5.6 million homes watching the same minute in 1955.

The bureau came up with still more statistics:

Fact Sheet. TvB found, for example, that more than half (32) of all new network advertisers (59) in 1959 were in the daytime; 72 advertisers in daytime network tv in January of this year came from 18 different product categories; tv homes increased 46% between 1955-60 but the number of tv homes watching daytime tv went up 57% in that period.

Daytime home viewing hours this year hit 106.2 million a day, the average tv home spending 2 hours 21 minutes watching daytime tv every day, the TvB statistics continue. The average network weekday daytime program today reaches 3,489,000 homes against 3,254,000 homes reached in 1956 despite the fact that there are three networks now programming weekdays against but two in 1956.

Taking this still further along the statistical road, TvB noted that the average daytime network program reached 12.2% more homes in first quarter 1960 (3,648,000 homes per telecast) than in the same period last year; that advertisers invested $171.2 million plus in gross time billings in weekday network tv in 1959 or $25 million more than in 1958, $65 million more than in 1955.

TvB boasts that last year 57.8% of all network commercial minutes were weekday daytime compared with 48.7% in 1956, or an increase “in share of 18.7%.” Top daytime user: Procter & Gamble. It spent more than $29 million in gross time billings for weekday daytime TV last year and in April 1960 used 100 commercial messages per week in daytime network.

‘Oscar’ awards show seeks new sponsor

After three years of acting as sponsor of its own “Oscar” awards broadcasts on the NBC radio and TV networks, the Motion Picture Assn. of America has tossed in the sponge and regretfully will open the 1961 broadcast to commercial sponsorship.

In making the announcement, B.B. Kahne, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, said “It is regrettable that our show—which consistently enjoys the largest world-wide listening and viewing audience of any comparable program—will not continue to be sponsored by the industry,” Mr. Kahne commented.

The annual “Oscar” awards show has been a tv-radio simulcast for eight years, starting in 1953, and all eight have been on NBC. The first five were made with commercial sponsorship.
Profile of a fast growing agency

John W. Shaw Adv., which has tripled its overall billings and personnel in the past six years, is gradually inching up to within striking distance of the nation's top 50 agencies in radio-tv billings.

Started in 1947, the agency recently moved into its own building at 200 E. Ohio St., Chicago. Shaw claims a stable of blue-chip accounts, and billings of about $9 million, with an estimated 50.7% in broadcast advertising.

On the fringe of the country's top 100 agencies last year, John W. Shaw last week boasted it would make the select circle by year's end—and rank ninth among Chicago-headquartered agencies. It also has managed to build up new affiliate groups in the Midwest, while espousing a unified marketing committee operation.

Shaw's clients currently include Monarch Foods Div. of Consolidated Foods Corp., M.K. Goetz Brewing Co., Horlicks Corp., Mercury Records Corp., John Morrell & Co., Dormeyer Corp. and Quaker Oats Co. (Quaker & Aunt Jemima Corn Goods, Aunt Jemima Easy Mixes and Corn Meal Mix, and specialty products), plus others. (Only the past fortnight, it lost the $1 million Kemper Insurance account [several groups] to another fast-growing Chicago-based agency, Clinton E. Frank.)

Shaw attributes its success to these factors: (1) making entities out of non-entity products; (2) increasing sales and profits of "already successful products"; (3) reversing downward sales curves of others; and (4) developing and introducing new products. A case in point: Shaw took Quaker's corn goods division and helped develop, introduce and market Aunt Jemima Easy-Mixes. Result: Quaker boosted Shaw's budget from $150,000 to $2 million.

Another: Though it's since departed, Shaw helped Kemper Insurance Companies double premium volume (sales) from $100 to $218 million, with the client increasing its national advertising budget from $200,000 to $1 million.

Broadcast Emphasis - Much of its success is undeniably due to emphasis on broadcast advertising—and key personnel. Reporting to Richard L. Rogers, media director and account executive are the time (June Kemper, Marie Lehan, Marilyn McDermott, Isabel McCauley) and space buyers. Radio-tv director is H. Lydon.

Top echelon includes Mr. Shaw, nearly 30-year veteran of advertising. In the mid-'30s he became merchandising director, and account executive at Campbell-Mithun, Minneapolis. He later served as general sales manager of Purity Bakeries Corp.; plans account executive at Henri, Hurst & McDonald; account supervisor at Leo Burnett Co. and co-owner of Shaw-LeVally Inc., Chicago. The actual impetus for the Shaw agency came with the formation of Shaw-LeVally, built around Lumbermens Mutual Div. of Kemper Insurance and Household Finance Corp. They parted company and formed their own agencies in 1947. Also at top level at Shaw are William C. Pullman, vice president and assistant to president, and David E. Guerrant, executive vice president and director of the marketing and executive committees.

Last week the agency proudly noted after getting straightened out on the top two of five floors in the newly-built W. J. Shaw Bldg., that it had only eight people and $800,000 by 1948 but had increased both ever since. The latest tally—$9 million billings and 72 people as against $3,197,000 and 25 people in 1954, plus three affiliate agencies—Aves, Shaw & Ring, Grand Rapids and Chicago (which handles WOOD-AM-TV Grand Rapids, Mich.); Grabin-Shaw Inc., Milwaukee, and Shaw-Hagues (which specializes in pharmaceutical advertising), Chicago. The agency also has an office in Los Angeles.

As with many aggressive and creative agencies, Shaw also has its own working credo (quoted from an architect): "Make no little plans: they have no magic to stir men's blood and probably themselves will not be realized."

AFTRA TO PUT BITE ON NETWORKS

Union may ask for scales based on eight-hour working day

Shirt-sleeved radio and tv performers, minus their usual glamour, buckled down last week in Washington to draw up a list of demands for new pay scales and better working conditions.

Some of the possible changes could drastically revise the industry's method of doing business with the entertainers.

Late last week delegates to the 23rd annual convention of American Federation of Television-Radio Artists were hard at work hacking out a plan for soon-to-come negotiations with the networks.

The present two-year contract between AFTRA and the networks expires Nov. 15. Negotiations customarily begin 60 days before then.

Late last week, artists were caucusing by specialties, striving to nail down recommendations. Among performing groups meeting together in separate units were announcers, actors, singers, dancers, sportscasters and specialty acts.

The final, official pay and working conditions program was scheduled to be voted by the full convention late Saturday.

More than 160 delegates, representing 15,000 AFTRA members, were in attendance.

Among its first major actions, voted Thursday afternoon, was the acceptance by AFTRA of an offer by the Screen Actors Guild for the establishment of joint negotiating and administration in live, tape and film tv commercials and taped tv entertainment programs.

The AFTRA delegates also agreed to explore the possibility of setting up reciprocal membership arrangements with SAG in these two fields and of establishing a cross-crediting system in these same two areas for respective AFTRA and SAG pension and welfare benefits.

Higher Scale Seen - There was general agreement among delegates that higher payments would be requested in the forthcoming negotiations.

The most significant change would come about if suggestions to change the basis of the entire wage scale were adopted.

The present wage scale is on a per-program basis.

The proposed revision is a wage scale tied to a full working day.

As a corollary of this, there were suggestions that rehearsal time be condensed to a working day format. Instead of permitting four days of two-hour rehearsals, the advocates of this new look would require a full, single eight-hour rehearsal day.

Scale Demands - Among the items where rate increases may be sought are those involving residual payments, rates for foreign replays, and changes in "wild spot" pay scales.

The present tv residuals formula calls for 75% of scale for the first repeat, and down to 5% of the original rate for the eighth and all additional replays. There have been recommendations that residuals for replays beyond the eighth be spelled out.

Repeats of American shows in foreign areas have been tied to estimated 1958 sets and tv activity; another look at overseas tv is advised. Replays for foreign countries begin with 20% of scale for Great Britain, 10% for Europe, and 5% for Africa, Southwest Asia and Latin America (excluding Caribbean islands). Full overall foreign repeats can be had by paying the original performers 45% of the payments they received when they performed in the original program.

Changes in the "wild spot" rates for recorded tv commercials have been suggested to peg them on a per-city basis. Wild spots are commercials recorded for a 13-week national spot campaign. Under the present agreement the rate is based on the number of cities in which the announcement will be used. There is no mention of repeat use. If the rate for these spots is revised to tie them on a per-city basis, the major cities likely would be weighted to require a higher performers' scale than the smaller markets.

Joint AFTRA-SAG Area - In its action Thursday night accepting the counter-offer by SAG to join forces in tv commercials and taped entertainment programs, the convention followed the recommendation of its national board. The board by a 70 to 10 vote Wednesday evening voted to recommend acceptance of the SAG offer.

AFTRA officials emphasized that they still believe total merger between the two unions is desirable and feasible.
They explained that the acceptance of the SAG offer might be a first step in that direction. AFTRA offered to merge with SAG two years ago, but ran into opposition on the part of SAG leaders. About a year ago both unions agreed to have the matter studied by an impartial labor expert.

This was done by David L. Cole, who submitted his report last January. He found it both desirable and feasible for the merger to be accomplished and listed various methods of accomplishing unification.

SAG Opposition ■ SAG spokesmen have continued their opposition and last week sent out ballots to 12,000 film actors on the subject. Accompanying the ballots was a letter from the SAG board urging a "nay" vote.

"It is the guild board's considered judgment that the Cole plan—with its complicated, cumbersome and intricate system of local boards, divisional boards, national boards and conventions—is unworkable," SAG officers said.

They claimed that the merger would endanger the motion picture actor's control over his working conditions, put his bargaining rights under the control of non-film actors, and remove the national executive council too far from the motion picture field.

Power would be concentrated, they said, in the hands of an executive because working actors could not man the "top heavy" structure; film actors' dues would be increased over what they pay now and motion picture actors would lose their present autonomy in governing themselves. SAG officials recommended a "yes" vote for the joint efforts in the tv commercial field and in the tv taped entertainment area.

SAG represents all film actors, whether the film is for theatrical exhibition or for television use.

AFTRA Slide ■ AFTRA's position is that the performer today ranges the gamut of the entertainment media—motion picture theatre exhibition to tv to night clubs. Donald Conaway, AFTRA executive secretary, said last week, that film actors now earn more from tv programs and commercial endeavors than they do from theatrical production.

He declared that the advent of tv tape was the catalyst that made amalgamation between AFTRA and SAG imperative. AFTRA claims jurisdiction over all video tape or other tv recording devices.

In 1958, AFTRA petitioned the National Labor Relations Board to order an election among film actors to determine if they desired to be represented by SAG or AFTRA in tv commercial video tape work. NLRB has not yet rendered a decision.

Among other highlights of the early days of the five-day AFTRA convention:

■ Mr. Conaway announced that AFTRA would oppose a provision in the pending minimum wage law (HR 12,677) exempting from its $1.25 minimum hourly wage requirement broadcast stations in communities of 100,000 or less population.

■ AFTRA collected $2,544,953 in all categories of rates for 16,610 members for the fiscal year ending April 30. More than $1 million came from Los Angeles, $1.3 million from New York and a low of $775 from Columbus-Dayton, Ohio. More than $46,000 excess of income over expenses was reported. AFTRA's net worth is $628,000.

■ Among the 111 contracts negotiated last year, eight were new. These were with WJRT (TV) Flint, Mich.; KWIZ Santa Ana, Calif.; WEEP Pittsburgh; KV1 Seattle; KTNT-AM-FM-TV Tacoma; WNBV-AM-FM-TV Binghamton, N.Y., and WCAO and WMAR-TV both Baltimore, Md.

■ AFTRA board authorized 13 strikes last year. Of these, seven took place and were settled; four were settled before strike action and two are still pending.

■ AFTRA's pension and welfare fund now covers 6,343 performers. A performer must earn $1,000 or more per year to be covered by the fund which is based solely on employer contributions.

■ Kenneth Groot, New York local executive secretary, was named eastern regional director.

Scheduled to be heard were reports on pay tv, automation and other new techniques in radio and tv, programming trends, and a vote on a resolution to delete specialty acts from performer categories. New officers also were to be elected.

WTOP announcers settle after 3 days

Eighteen radio-tv announcers of WTOP-AM-FM-TV Washington returned to work July 20 after settlement of a dispute with management. The group, represented by American Federation of Television & Radio Artists, walked out July 15.

A settlement was reached July 18 by John S. Hayes, president of the Washington Post stations, and Evelyn Freyman, executive secretary of the AFTRA local. Negotiators met with James A. Holden, federal mediator.

The stations operated with supervisory and executive personnel. Picket lines had been stationed in front of the stations and the Washington Post. Mrs. Freyman indicated the picket line was intended only to notify the public of the union’s grievances, which centered around job security and taped station breaks.

Mr. Hayes said the tv station retained the right to record station-break announcements in advance and did not yield on a demand that the contract mention individual employees in a job security clause. A severance pay clause was included in the contract.

HARVARD SEMINARS NAB session to be permanent procedure

A permanent training procedure for top broadcast management, providing executive instruction for the industry on a regular basis, will develop out of the NAB seminar concluded last week at Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in Boston. At a “commencement” for the second annual NAB seminar at Harvard, Clair R. McCollough, Steinman Stations and head of NAB’s interim Policy Committee, said NAB had committed the association to a third class next year.

“Thereafter we shall try to select the eventual pattern which will meet executive training needs on a regular and long-haul basis,” he said.

Discussing industry problems, Mr. McCollough defined the two key issues this way: “Responsibility and freedom—responsibility which falls upon each broadcaster to constructively serve his community as well as himself; freedom from the ever-present specter of government control of the substance of our service.”

A three-point program is ready as broadcasting prepares to fight back against charges based on the misdeeds of the few, he said. “First we are taking steps to clean our house,” he said. “Second, we will tell as vividly as we can the tremendous story of broadcasting. Finally we are acting to preserve unimpaired our essential freedom.”

The 63 students attending the seminar participated in 6:15 a.m.-to-midnight study, discussion and classroom sessions. William P. Gormley Jr., assistant dean in charge of advanced management at Harvard, was administrator. Dr. J. Sterling Livingston of the school directed academic work and took part in classroom sessions. Charles H. Tower, NAB tv vice president, handled organization of the project for NAB. Broadcast executives in the seminar were:

Access case appealed

The right to take pictures on streets and sidewalks adjacent to Fulton County courthouse, Atlanta, is asserted by Atlanta Newspapers Inc. (WSB-AM-FM-TV) Atlanta in an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. Appeal papers and transcript of the case have been filed with the court.

A ban in such photography was imposed by Superior Court Judge Durwood Pye, the order being upheld by the Georgia Supreme Court. The appellant argues that Judge Pye’s ban constitutes abridgement of freedom of the press. The Constitution, it is declared, gives a newspaper the same right to gather news as to publish it.

Three win RFE award

Three broadcast stations have been named winners of a nationwide competition to promote the 1960 Radio Faces Europe Truth Message program. The three, KBIG Catalina Island, Calif., WAMS Wilmington, Del., and KGL0-TV Mason City, Iowa, were chosen as those stations which made the best promotional effort to enlist public participation in the Truth message program.

An inspection tour of RFE’s European headquarters in Munich and the shortwave transmitter site near Lisbon will be awarded a representative from each station.
No Signs of Deterioration After Seven Years On-Air

Larry Larson—Acting Chief Engineer at KSTP-TV, St. Paul says:

"Seven RCA-5762s were placed in service in our aural transmitter in January, 1953. Five of them are still in service after 47,600 hours. One tube was removed at 37,620 hours, and another after 45,481 hours. The five originals still in service show no signs of deterioration, and look like they've got a good many more hours in them. These tubes have been working mighty hard at KSTP-TV. I think this is outstanding tube performance."

Such extremely long life is exceptional, but many TV broadcasters are discovering, like KSTP-TV, that proper care of their RCA-5762s can help to extend tube life well beyond normal expectancy. And this means substantial reductions in transmitter downtime as well as lower cost per tube hour of operation.

Your RCA Distributor of broadcast tubes is the man to call whenever you need tubes for broadcasting or telecasting operations. He'll always give you prompt, efficient service.

VOA GRASS ROOTS
27 radio stations
provide USIA shows

The story of America, from its “grass roots” level, is being aired overseas through the cooperation of American broadcasters. The U.S. Information Agency announced that 18 radio stations have already produced, or have in production, “local scene” documentaries for overseas broadcast by the Voice of America. Nine more stations have programs in the planning stage.

The cooperative arrangement between American radio stations and the VOA “is designed to project an effective and positive picture of the U.S. to the rest of the world,” Henry Loomis, VOA director, said. The purpose of the project is to give overseas listeners an “on-the-scene” view of American life.

These contributions from the radio industry are in addition to many existing shows which VOA has been acquiring from domestic stations and networks for overseas broadcasts.

John Wiggins, director of the project for VOA, lists the following programs which have already been broadcast or are being readied:

“The Story of a Valley,” a half-hour program on the 50th anniversary of Harlingen, Tex. produced by KWHK Shreveport, La., was broadcast April 26.

A 30-minute program on the Central California Valley Water Project, prepared by KFRE Fresno, Calif., was broadcast June 13.

“Fourth of July, 1960,” a half-hour program by WFLI Philadelphia, was scheduled by both the Voice and Radio Ceylon for that day.

“Portrait of New England,” a one-hour program which was broadcast by WGB Boston, on June 3, will be aired by VOA in two half-hour installations in August.

WJR Detroit, and Wayne State U., provided complete coverage of the Third Annual McGregor Conference, the so-called “Detroit Adventure.”

WMT Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has done the “Amana Story” in two half-hour programs and photographs for promotion of the broadcasts have been sent to USIA overseas posts.

WBAP Fort Worth, has in production a documentary entitled, “Do Texans brag?”, which features prominent Texas writers.

WBT Charlotte, N.C., is working on five half-hour programs projecting the Southeastern States.

WDSU New Orleans, is readying a documentary on the Port of New Orleans.

WKRS Waukegan, Ill., will offer the Voice’s overseas audiences documentaries on the skyrocketing American demand for outboard motors. The Evinrude-Johnson factory is in Waukegan.

KING Seattle, Wash., has begun four programs on the Puget Sound area.

WFPS Atlantic City, N.J., will do a series of man-in-the-street interviews on the boardwalk which will give listeners in the Soviet orbit a chance to compare our workers’ vacations with their own.

WHLI Hemipstead, L.I., is working on a documentary of a typical community-service radio station in a large but non-metropolitan market, and a documentary on Nassau County, L.I.

KEX Portland, Ore., is beginning a comprehensive documentary on the Pacific Northwest.

WIBW Topeka, is producing a documentary on the State of Kansas.

WDTR (FM) Detroit and the Detroit Board of Education has in production a half-hour documentary illustrating the operation of educational radio, including examples of classroom radio.

WMBD Peoria, Ili., has in the developmental stage a documentary on “Peoria, Railway Center.”

WBFL Binghamton N.Y., is developing a half-hour documentary on the American shoe industry, as exemplified by the Endicott-Johnson factories.

Radio stations with special VOA “Grass Roots” programs indicated for production this fall are: KMOX St. Louis, Mo.; WOW Omaha, Neb.; KSL Salt Lake City, Utah; WNYC New York City; KVOS Bellingham, Wash.; WMJ Milwaukee, Wis.; KLIK Jefferson City, Mo.; WBUD Trenton, N.J., and KSTP Minneapolis, Minn.

AB-PT profit up 45% over first-half 1959

American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres Inc. chalked up record net operating profits during the first six months of 1960 and the second quarter of the year, Lonard H. Goldenson, AB-PT president, reported last Friday (July 22).

Net operating profit for the first six months of 1960 was reported at $5,653,000, or $1.35 a share, said to be an increase of 45% over the $3,886,000, or 90 cents a share, for the corresponding period of 1959. For the second quarter, estimated net operating profit was listed at $2,317,000, or 55 cents a share, as against $1,573,000, or 36 cents a share, reported last year.

Mr. Goldenson stated that the ABC broadcasting division “continued the improvement shown earlier this year,” and added that for the second quarter, ABC-TV showed “a larger increase in gross time billings than that of the other networks—an increase of approximately 30% over the same three months of last year.”

Code membership urged by Cliff Gill

Members of the Southern California Broadcasters Assn. were urged Thursday (July 21) to take out “business interruption insurance” by subscribing to the NAB Radio Code, now open to all radio broadcasters, not only NAB members.

Cliff Gill, owner of KEZY Anaheim, Calif., chairman of the Radio Code Board, told his fellow SCBA members that “not since the days of the Blue Book” has broadcasting faced such a hostile attitude from persons high in government. The FCC under Chairman Frederick Ford, is “taking a much tougher attitude than at any time since the New Deal,” he stated.

Warning that the amendment to the law empowering suspension of station licenses is much more than an idle threat and could well become a reality, Mr. Gill declared that only a definite showing that the broadcasters are strongly behind their own industry

Media reports

KBCO ed rules - Commercials at KBCO(FM) San Francisco are programmed at quarter-hours only, included in the station breaks following 12½ minutes of uninterrupted musical or feature programming and are limited to eight minutes per hour, Orville C. Schumacher, general manager, has announced. KBCO is also following the example set by Western FM Sales, Los Angeles station representative (BROADCASTING, July 11), and is allowing 20% commission to agencies instead of the traditional 15%.

New MBS stations - Mutual reported last week that nine new affiliates joined during July. They are KDUB Lubbock, Tex.; WEEP Pittsburgh; WHBO Tampa, Fla.; KJHO Shreveport, La.; KOKK Keokuk, Iowa; WGEA Geneva, Ala.; WPTX Lexington Park, Md.; WMSR Manchester, Tenn., and WEAT West Palm Beach, Fla.

Upstate friends - Three upstate New York stations got together to insure a Buffalo showing of the July 10 Meet the Press (with Senators Kennedy, Symington and Johnson). When it became certain that WGR-TV, because of previous commitments, would not be able to air the show, it gave permission to that city's etv station WNEED-TV to go ahead. WNEED-TV, because of cost problems, was unable to bring the show into Buffalo over special telephone transmission lines. WSYR-TV Syracuse came to the rescue by videotaping the Meet the Press segment to be shown in Buffalo the following day. WNEED-TV is New York State's only etv station.

Video tape for L.A. - New studios for KCOP (TV) Los Angeles, to be completed within the next month, will house two separate video tape recording installations, a new, fully-equipped mobile video tape unit and three special effects systems for the station's commercial video tape department. Facilities for KCOP are now undergoing major construction and remodeling at the Hollywood headquarters of the broadcast division of the NAFI Corp., 915 N. La Brea.

Cutback - Cascade Television will cut down the number of personnel employed by its KLEW-TV Lewiston, Idaho, effective Aug. 1, and almost all programs will originate from its KIMA-TV Yakima, Wash., of which KLEW-TV is a satellite. Ben Shropshire, manager of the Lewiston station, will maintain offices at Cascade's KEPR-TV Pasco, Wash., where all Lewiston advertising will be filmed and produced. The KLEW-TV staff will be cut from 15 to 5 men, who, as a technical and engineering staff, Cascade will retain at least five of those cut in the reduction in other capacities within the parent company, it was reported.

PGW expansion - Peters, Griffin, Woodward Inc., station rep firm, has increased the office space of its New York headquarters at 250 Park Ave. The entire 18th floor and part of the 16th floor are now in use as PGW's central offices. Extensive alterations have been completed on the 16th floor for the radio division, which has a complete operating unit of its own. The tv division will expand into additional office space on the 18th floor.

Big sound policy - WAMP Pittsburgh has announced a new music policy which emphasizes records with "full orchestration" and excludes small jazz combos, rock 'n roll and instrumental solos. Vocal numbers will be kept to a maximum of two per half hour. Talk will be kept to a minimum with no interruption between records and time, temperature, name of selections and commercials being the only announcements sanctioned.

Co-op venture - Cooperation between catv and etv has paid off in Alabama. Muscle Shoals Tvs Cable Corp. (Kelrod Electronics) installed a micro-wave and additional cable on its service to program telecasts of the Alabama etv network. To promote the move of the cable company, the etv office prepared numerous articles and stories for publication in two daily newspapers and two weeklies published in the northwestern section of the state. To insure that the articles were published, Muscle Shoals bought quarter-page ads in the publications.

Colorful WGN-TV

WGN-TV Chicago will boost its color programming schedule to nearly 33 hours this coming week, primarily because of a substantial number of baseball telecasts. The Chicago Tribune station will carry 25 hours of color on CUBS coverage alone, starting yesterday (July 24), plus regular tilt fare, bringing the color total to a new station high.

WBC MAKES OWN NEWS NETWORK

Daily leased voice wire interconnects all of group's stations

Establishment of a daily leased-wire telephone interconnection among all Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. stations to augment news programming was announced last week by WBC. After the Republican convention, the principal origination point will be Washington.

This new step in the continuing expansion of independent news coverage by the multiple-station radio-tv group was taken following successful use of the voice-wire facility for WBC's extensive coverage of the Democratic convention in Los Angeles. It will play a major role in WBC news activity in Chicago this week during the Republican convention. A 20-man WBC news staff will supply news in depth, commentary and discussion, and facilitate inter-station networking of live, taped and film programs for both radio and tv.

The new leased voice wire will be operated two hours daily, seven days a week. It will be used one hour in the morning and another hour in the late afternoon. After the Chicago convention, the wire will be fed chiefly by the WBC news bureau in Washington, where WBC's European coverage will also be inserted, but in the event of spot news breaks in the area of any of the WBC outlets, the origination of the feed can be shifted. Jim Snyder heads WBC's Washington bureau.

WBC's news staff has quadrupled in the last few years as permanent bureaus have been set up not only in Washington but also in London and the Far East.

Interconnected by the new voice news line are these WBC outlets: WBZ-AM-TV Boston, WJZ-TV Baltimore, KDKA-AM-TV Pittsburgh, KYW-AM-TV Cleveland, WOWO Fort Wayne, WIND Chicago, KEX Portland, Ore., and KPIX (TV) San Francisco.

Chicago Repeat • At Chicago, as at Los Angeles, WBC newsmen are assigned to state delegations from their own station areas.

Richard Pack, WBC vice president-programming, said, "This adds a dimension and expert insight into news not possible unless the reporter is totally familiar with state leaders and delegations." WBC claimed a series of important news exclusives and beats at Los Angeles, including "firsts that made news for newspapers." Mike Wallace is credited by WBC with an exclusive interview with Sen. Jack Kennedy, breaking news of his civil rights views. Much of this specialized service was fed to two correspondent stations—WNTA New York and WWDC Washington—as well as the WBC group.

In what is called a "massive news-in-depth" thesis, WBC takes the position that first-class news sells. Advertiser response to the convention coverage and election night service was good. KYW was bought by Thorofare Markets, WOWO by First Federal Bank and KYW by Miller's beer.

Sponsor Interest • "We live in a contemporary world," said Bink Dannenbaum, WBC sales vice president, "the advertiser knows this, which perhaps is the reason sponsors are more enthusiastic than ever before about news and public service programming." The tv portions of WBC's political coverage were not for sale as they are integrated into existing programs.

WBC likes to recall such "beats" as the first U.S. telecast of Sputnik I, later made available to networks and other media; exclusive interview with the Dalai Lama after his escape from Tibet; interview with Prime Minister Nehru of India; interviews with East German government officials; coverage of the Lebanon crisis when a WJZ-TV newscast was claimed to have landed ahead of the Marines.

A WBZ-TV news team recently covered 20,000 miles in Africa. Betty Adams, newswoman, and Richard Smilgis, camera, brought back 10,000 ft. of film for a series on the Dark Continent. At the same time another team, Mel Bernstein and Phil Galligan, was doing a documentary in Korea.

Here's the way the Chicago convention team will work: Mr. Snyder will cover the Pennsylvania delegation and Vice President Nixon; Mike Wallace from New York will cover the New York state delegation and Gov. Rockefeller as well as handle interviews; Jerry Landay, WBZ-TV news director, will handle New England; Ann Corrick, Washington, will follow the Maryland delegation and Sen. Everett Dirksen; John Bell, WIND, will cover Illinois delegates; Sid Davis, Oregon and California; Hal Cessna, Indiana delegation, and Gary Franklin, the Ohio delegation.

Getting Ready • WBC coverage of the primaries began in March when WBZ provided a news team for the New Hampshire voting. Similarly Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio and District of Columbia primaries were reported. The campaign will be reported through whistle-stopping tours, with local WBC stations assisting.

Months of planning have gone into election night coverage. Each station will have its own information center, fed from polling places by stringers, mobile units and the New York WBC headquarters which will coordinate efforts of the London and Washington news bureaus.

Separated from the news operation is WBC's editorial programming policy. The radio and tv on-the-air editorials are usually delivered by the local WBC vice president or area vice president. A wide range of topics is covered. The only requirement—editorials must deal with something significant.

Syndication • In a concurrent development, WBC has gone into the syndication business in a preliminary way. American Civil War, a tv documentary, is being syndicated to a large number of stations through Trans-Lux. Washington Viewpoint, on radio, is carried by WNYC New York and WWDC. American Forum of the Air has been carried by WNEW-TV New York and WTTG (TV) Washington.

Does all this news activity pay? "Yes, it pays," said Donald H. McGannon, WBC president. "First, the commercial status of our news programming is strengthened and they are more constantly sponsored. Second, we further recoup costs by the improved acceptance of our stations in their markets."

As to syndication, he said, "Frankly, we want to develop our own station service to our satisfaction before entering syndication seriously. When we're satisfied, we may expand. Currently our syndication provides greater circulation for public service programming, where there is nothing basically competitive."

THAT PROGRAM CONTROL ISSUE

It rears its head again at special FCC meeting today

Two documents of vital interest to licensees and the programming of their stations will be before the FCC at a special meeting called for 10 a.m. today (Monday).

One, which maintains that the commission should pass on programming judgments of broadcasters, was submitted four weeks ago under FCC edict by the Network Study Staff (Closed Circuit, July 4). It has been called outright censorship in some quarters.

The second proposal is more limited in scope and draws a well-defined distinction between the commission's lack of authority to control individual programming and areas where the FCC can and should exert proper regulation over licensees and certain network functions. It was submitted at a special FCC meeting July 14.

The second course of action was offered following early discussions—and severe criticism in some corners—of the Network Study Staff document, prepared under the direction of Chief Ashbrook P. Bryant. It encompasses over 300 pages and reportedly recommends that stringent controls be exerted in certain areas of programming.

Major Agreement * One area in which both documents agree, and where Chairman Frederick W. Ford already has given his public endorsement, would completely revise the programming sections of applications for new facilities and renewals. It has been proposed that applicants and licensees be required to give a detailed, narrative account of programming plans. This would entail (1) a description of each program, (2) steps taken to determine the broadcast needs of the community served, (3) what has been done and will be done to fulfill these needs.

Any licensee who does not live up to the promises made—does not have an adequate explanation—can expect a rapid and decisive crackdown by the commission, it was reported.

The two documents are said to differ on whether the commission can require certain types and amounts of programming in specified hours. Yes, says the Bryant proposal, while the second paper takes the position that this would be censorship and therefore a subject guaranteed broadcast freedom by the First Amendment.

This view places emphasis on the freedom of speech constitutional provision as applicable to broadcast stations as well as street corner orators. It also specifies that whether a program is commercial or sustaining is of no concern to the commission and has no bearing on the "public service" output of the station.

Both documents have been submitted in the form of proposed rulemaking and are a continuation of the commission's broad inquiry into programming practices in general. Mr. Bryant's office was instructed last May to propose new rules to meet the changing needs of broadcasting (Broadcasting, May 9).

Commission Thinking * It was reported that a majority of the commissioners are leaning toward the less-restricting second proposal although the final rulemaking order probably will contain portions of both. A spokesman said last week that it is doubtful if any action will be taken prior to the August FCC recess, which begins next week. Another line of thought holds that rulemaking should be issued as soon as possible, assuming the seven commissioners can come to agreement this week.

The subject under present FCC consideration had its genesis with the Barrow Report issued on tv network practices three years ago. An overall inquiry into programming was begun early last year and two rounds of hearings have been held. The latest included 19 days of testimony before the commission en banc covering two months and nearly 100 witnesses last December-January. A new phase will begin Oct. 5 in Los Angeles (see box, this page).

FCC seeks committee for N.Y. uhf study

An industry advisory committee to study the problems inherent in the FCC's New York uhf study has been urged by the commission. The FCC set July 29 as a conference date in which "interested persons" may discuss with the commission the formulation of the committee and plans for the project.

The conference will be held in the New Post Office Building, Room 7134, in Washington at 10:00 a.m.

The commission specifically called upon the NAB, the Electronic Industries Assn., the Assn. of Maximum Service Telecasters, the Institute of Radio Engineers, the Joint Technical Ad-

With the blessings of Congress in the form of $2 million (after $250,000 had been lopped off by the House), the FCC is set to construct two superpower uhf tv transmitters in New York to test uhf operations in urban areas. Current plans call for one uhf transmitter to be installed on the Empire State Building with the second located within approximately 15 miles of the first on a separate channel to study any improvement which might be obtained with the simultaneous broadcasting of a single program by two stations on two different frequencies.

The project, long championed by FCC Commissioner Robert E. Lee (Broadcasting, April 25), will be under the direction of the FCC's Chief Engineer Edward W. Allen. Mr. Allen's office will handle all contracts relating to the project.

The best offer so far received by the FCC came in a $446,000 lease deal from General Electric for the two transmitters. RCA was reported to have wanted $668,000 for outright purchase of its equipment.

FTC TO TAKE A PAYOLA HIATUS

Will allow industry to 'catch up' with law

The first phase of the Federal Trade Commission's attack on the multi-million-dollar payola racket is about to end, it was learned last week.

There have been 98 complaints issued against record manufacturers and distributors since the trade unit leaped into the payola scandal last December. Less than half-dozen more FTC citations are expected to be issued in the next few weeks.

The FTC has entered into consent judgments with 57 firms, all of whom have agreed to give up the practice. A handful of companies have denied the accusations of under-the-counter payments to disc jockeys and other radio-tv personnel—or have claimed that payola is not illegal.

The amount of money involved in the "push" money practice cannot be totaled, an FTC spokesman said last week. He explained that the FTC investigation dug up only one or two instances in each case, just sufficient to "make a case out of the facts". All specific instances was not attempted, he said, since only one or two specific complaints were sufficient to meet legal requirements.

Industry sources are also unable to pinpoint the total take on payola. One of the reasons is that the practice took on so many forms—in addition to cold cash. Among these were payoffs that were based on percent of sales and gifts in merchandise or entertainment that cannot be easily segregated from legitimate business expenses.

When the next batch of payola complaints is issued, the FTC intends to suspend further investigations to let the industry catch up to the law prohibiting behind-the-scenes payments.

The industry will be watched, however, and if FTC sleuths learn that payola has begun cropping up again, a second major crackdown will be instituted.

This hiatus period was announced some months ago by FTC Chairman Carl W. Kintner. Mr. Kintner warned then that if the payola racket recurred, the FTC would redouble its crackdown.

The FTC jumped into the payola crusade early in December 1959 following the outcry against television quiz scandals. The first move came when FTC officials met with network executives in Washington at which radio and tv advertising were discussed. It was then that Mr. Kintner disclosed that his agency was investigating payola in radio and television.

Latest Complaints = Last week, two complaints were issued against major record manufacturer Capitol Records Distributing Corp., Hollywood, Calif., and Schwartz Brothers Inc., Washington, D.C.

The FTC charged that both companies paid off disc jockeys, station personnel and stations themselves in efforts to have their phonograph records played on the air without the knowledge of the public.

The FTC also announced last week the signing of consent orders with seven record makers and distributors. The agreements are for settlement purposes and do not imply any acknowledgment of guilt. Signing consent judgment:

Denying charges filed June 3 that it engaged in payola was the Joseph M. Zamolski Co., Baltimore-Washington record distributor. The firm denied any knowledge of payola and asked dismissal of the complaint.

WSAY'S Rochester protest dismissed

An attempt to rehash the long time controversy centering on the participation of the late Frieda Hennock, former FCC commissioner in the Rochester, N.Y., ch. 10 share-time grant of 1953, was quashed last week by the FCC.

The commission dismissed the protest of WSAY Rochester, losing applicant in the 1953 grant, and upheld its license renewals of WVET-TV and WHEC-TV which share time on ch. 10.

WSAY had protested that a letter received by Rep. John E. Moss (D.-Calif.) from FCC Chairman Frederick Ford "shows that the renewals were improperly issued and . . . not in the public interest." Mr. Ford said in the letter that Miss Hennock was considered "not participating" in the 1953 vote.

WSAY declared that if she had been intermittently absent from the meeting room and not wholly absent, the affirmative 1953 vote of three members of the FCC was not the affirmative vote of the majority present (BROADCASTING, July 4).

Dual stock interests charged in Seattle

Alleged "dual stock interests" have caused the FCC to set for hearings the renewal applications of two Seattle broadcast facilities.

The commission advised KING-AM-FM-TV (King Broadcasting Co.) and KIRO-AM-FM-TV (Queen City Broadcasting Co.) that Mrs. A. Scott Bullitt, president and majority owner of King, is a director and stockholder of the Pacific National Bank of Seattle, which holds in trust 11,000 shares of common stock of Queen City.

The commission said that it appears that the bank and its directors hold interests in stations which provide the same broadcast services to substantially the same area.

Guterma conviction is upheld in appeal

The U.S. Court of Appeals in New York last week unanimously upheld the conviction of Alexander L. Guterma, former president of the Mutual Broadcasting System, for conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government and for failing to file financial reports of the F.L. Jacobs Co. with the Securities & Exchange Commission.

Mr. Guterma was convicted and sentenced to four years and 11 months in prison. He was also fined $160,000, but the appeals court reduced this by

Seventh seat filled at the FCC

Charles Henry King, Republican of Michigan, was sworn in last Tuesday (July 19) as the seventh member of the FCC. Commissioner King succeeds John C. Doerfer who resigned March 21. Barrington Senate rejection of his name, Mr. King will serve until June 30, 1961.

On leave as dean of the Detroit College of Law, Commissioner King received a recess appointment from President Eisenhower July 13. His appointment reestablishes the 4-3 FCC Republican majority.

The new commissioner was sworn in by Homer Ferguson, judge of the Military Court of Appeals and former Republican senator from Michigan. When Mr. King first began teaching at Detroit Law College in 1935 it was as a substitute for the then Professor Ferguson.

President Eisenhower first sent Mr. King's name to the Senate as a nominee for the FCC June 27, shortly before Congress recessed for the political conventions (BROADCASTING, July 4). With the recess announced that same week there was some speculation whether Mr. King could receive a "recess" appointment during the congressional "recess." At the time a White House spokesman speculated that he would not be placed on the FCC until after the final adjournment of Congress, which will resume Aug. 8.

Legal Precedent — However, on the basis of two 1948 rulings that a White House appointee could be paid in such instances if he is not confirmed by the Senate, Mr. King was given the appointment.

There is a provision in the U.S. Code which states that a recess appointee cannot be paid if the vacancy existed for more than 30 days before the adjournment of Congress or if the name had been pending without action for more than 30 days. The 1948 rulings by the comptroller general, handed down on a judge'ship appointment by President Truman, stated that such a congressional session after a recess would not prohibit payment if no Senate action is taken.

Commissioner King is a 1933 LL.B. graduate of the law college he now heads and received a master of law degree from the U. of Michigan in 1940. He is 53 years old.

$40,000. The court also upheld the conviction of Robert J. Everleigh, a business associate of Mr. Guterma, who was sentenced to two years, 11 months term for his part in the fraud.

Both men were convicted on Jan. 27 after a seven-week trial in federal court in New York (BROADCASTING, Feb. 1).

In a separate action, Mr. Guterma last week asked the U.S. District Court in Washington to permit him to reinstate his plea of not guilty to charges that he failed to register as a foreign agent. Last May Mr. Guterma and Hal Roach Jr., associated with Mr. Guterma in the operation of MBS, changed their innocent pleas to no defense.

Mr. Guterma said he wanted to withdraw his nolo contendere plea because of the remarks made by federal Judge Joseph R. Jackson when he sentenced Mr. Roach to a $500 fine. Judge Jackson told Mr. Roach he was "more sinned against than sinning" and referred to his "unfortunate association" with Mr. Guterma.

The charges are that Mr. Guterma failed to register as an agent of the Dominican Republic when he obtained $750,000 with the understanding that he would arrange to have broadcast on MBS news favorable to that country.

MBS is no longer under the ownership of the Guterma interests; it is now principally owned by Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Corp.

Boston ch. 5 action explained to court

The FCC told the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington last week that it did not consider its action in the Boston ch. 5 case a final action since further proceedings were scheduled. Since that is so, the commission said, it was not submitting a final report to the court, but only advising it of what it did.

The commission two weeks ago vacated the 1957 grant of Boston's ch. 5 to the Boston Herald-Traveler (WHDH) and ordered further hearings to determine who should receive the Boston vhf channel (BROADCASTING, July 18). The Boston order also tagged as "adverse" the activities of WHDH and Massachusetts Bay Telecasters Inc., but did not disqualify these two applicants. There are four applicants in the Boston case.

The FCC was understood to be preparing a final report to the court on the Miami ch. 10 case. The commission, also a fortnight ago, revoked the 1957 grant to National Airlines' WPST-TV and disqualified it and two other applicants. The grant was made to the fourth, untainted applicant, L. B. Wilson Inc.

The court of appeals retained jurisdiction in both cases when it remanded them in 1958 for further proceedings to determine charges of off-the-record representations to FCC commissioners. In the Boston case it was charged that then FCC Chairman George McConaughy was approached; in the Miami situation, that former FCC Commissioner Richard C. Mack was contacted.

Pope brothers indicted

Fortune Pope, president of Progress Broadcasting Corp. (WHOM-AM-FM New York, WDOT Burlington, Vt.), was indicted by a federal grand jury in New York last week for violations of the Securities & Exchange Act of 1934. The 12-count indictment grew out of allegations that Mr. Pope and his brother, Anthony Pope (also indicted) diverted assets of the publicly-owned Colonial Sand & Stone Co. to seven other companies wholly owned by the Pope company. The charges are reminiscent of those under which Alexander Guterma, former owner of the Mutual Broadcasting System, was convicted earlier this year. Mr. Pope will be arraigned on the charges Wednesday (July 27).
Montana telecasters lose catv decision

Telecasters lost a round in their fight against community tv systems last week.

A petition for rulemaking filed by KXLF-TV Butte and KXLI-TV Helena, both Montana, to ban microwave relay grants which would carry metropolitan area tv signals to small town catv systems in conflict with local tv stations was denied by the FCC.

While the petition was denied without prejudice to any future action the commission may determine necessary, Commissioners Rosel H. Hyde and T. A. M. Craven dissented.

Currently being studied by the commission is a proposal to place microwave owned by the catv systems they service under common carrier regulation.

The original petition (Broadcasting, April 11) was based on the grounds that the microwaving of tv signals from larger to smaller cities for distribution by catv was destructive to local tv broadcasting.

The petitioners asked that Part 21 of the FCC's rules be revised to ban microwave grants (1) to systems which carry a program already being carried by the single, local tv station and (2) which would "adversely affect" existing local single tv operation.

In another rulemaking action involving microwave frequencies, the commission adopted interim technical standards governing the granting of applications for the use of microwave frequencies above 952 mc. These standards apply to private communication systems in the safety and special radio service and become effective Jan. 1. They do not apply to present users unless harmful interference results from their operation.

NLRB actions

Community antenna tv systems are a mere adjunct to the tv receiving set or an auxiliary service and are not communications systems, according to a ruling by National Labor Relations Board. Thus catv units are not subject to board jurisdictional standards for communications systems, the board held in dismissing a petition by International Hod Carriers Building & Common Laborers Union of America against Warren (Pa.) Television Corp.

In another action, NLRB certified Assn. Puertorriquena de Artistas, independent union, as bargaining unit for all performing and non-performing employees of WKAQ-AM-TV San Juan, Puerto Rico.

All present ~ For the first time in four months the FCC last week was up to full strength as a seventh commissioner, Charles H. King, was sworn in to succeed John C. Doerfer, who resigned March 21. As now constituted, the FCC consists of (seated, l-r) Rosel H. Hyde, Frederick W. Ford and Robert T. Bartley and (standing, l-r) John S. Cross, Robert E. Lee, T.A.M. Craven and the newest member, Mr. King. Commissioner King, who has no practical experience in broadcasting, attended his first commission meeting last Wednesday but did not participate. "I am a little too new for me to stick my neck out," he said, but he promised to begin voting on those cases for which he is eligible soon after the August recess that begins next week.

Final decision given on ch. 9 Baton Rouge

Modern Broadcasting Co., sole remaining applicant for ch. 9 in Baton Rouge, received the tv grant last week in an FCC final decision.

Last June, FCC Hearing Examiner Walther W. Guenther issued an initial decision to Modern despite overlap with WDSU-TV New Orleans (whose president, Edgar B. Stern owns 67% of Modern). The examiner said that Modern will operate independently of WDSU-TV and its programming will be unaffected by the interrelated ownership (Broadcasting, June 20).

Community Broadcasting Co. (WBR Baton Rouge) co-applicant for the ch. 9 facility agreed to drop out of the proceeding last March. Under terms of the agreement, Modern agreed to reimburse Community $23,000 for out-of-pocket expenses and granted an option allowing Community to purchase 20% of Modern.

The highlight of the comparative proceeding was a reversal by the U.S. Court of Appeals of an FCC grant to Modern's ch. 28 WAFB-TV Baton Rouge, to operate temporarily on ch. 9 pending the outcome of the proceeding (Broadcasting, Feb. 15).
YOUR NATION OF LIGHT...

40% of all the electricity in the world is used in the U.S., most of it supplied by

One of America's wonders to foreign visitors is the abundance of electricity we put to work in our homes, on our farms, in our jobs.

We use more light and power than the next six nations together—three times as much as the Russians—and we keep on using more all the time. On the average, you use twice as much in your home as you did just ten years ago and pay 16% less for it per kilowatt-hour.

The independent electric light and power companies that turn out over ¾ of America’s electricity have doubled their supply every ten years, and are building now to double it again in the next ten. And because they and their million of owners will put up the money for the new plants and lines you won't be taxed to pay for them.

These hundreds of companies are ready and able to supply all the low-price electricity people can conceivably need.

ONE 'GUILTLESS' IN CH. 7 CASE

FCC General Counsel wants others out

Three of the four original applicants for Miami ch. 7 should be "absolutely disqualified" and the January 1956 grant to Biscayne TV Corp. (WCKT [TV]) is invalid and should be set aside, the FCC's general counsel's office recommended last week.

Only Sunbeam TV Corp. was found guiltless in proposed findings filed by commission attorneys Edgar Holtz, associate general counsel, James Brennan and Joel Rosenbloom. They also found that former FCC Commissioner Richard A. Mack should have disqualified himself from voting in the case.

The document was filed following a rehearing of the case last month in Philadelphia (BROADCASTING, June 20) before Hearing Examiner Horace Stern. The case was returned to the commission by the courts because of ex parte contacts made by and on behalf of applicants for ch. 7.

In addition to Biscayne, the FCC counsel recommended that East Coast TV Corp. and South Florida TV Corp. also should be disqualified from eligibility to receive further consideration for ch. 7. At the very least, it was stated, the three applicants should receive comparative demerits in any future consideration of the case.

The proposed findings noted that close personal friends of Floridian Mack privately approached the commissioner—Miles Draper for East Coast, Ben Fuqua for Biscayne and Perrine Palmer for South Florida—at the request and/or with the knowledge of the three applicants. Commissioner Mack, who voted for Biscayne, made no effort to reject or cut off these communications and in the case of Mr. Fuqua "it is apparent, on the contrary, that he considered them . . ." the commission counsel stated.

"These facts render it self-evident that Mr. Mack could not participate in either of the commission decisions (the original grant and second vote after a court remand) . . . with any semblance of . . . impartiality. His participation . . . requires that they now be set aside and reconsidered."

Also hit were personal contacts with Mr. Mack and other commissioners by several Biscayne principals, including James Cox, Daniel Mahoney, Niles Trammell and John Knight. Their success in impressing Mr. Mack resulted in "substantial unfairness to Biscayne's opponents," the proposed findings state.

Mr. Trammell, president of Biscayne, owns 15% and the separate newspaper interests of Miami Herald and Miami Daily News, each own 42 1/4%.

Jack C. Stein, president of South Florida, and stockholder Leo Adeeb were criticized for seeking out Mr. Palmer and Thurman Whiteside, as friends of Mr. Mack. South Florida paid attorney Whiteside $5,000, one-fourth of which went to Mr. Palmer.

The president of East Coast, Richard Mead, drew the FCC counsel's wrath for authorizing the off-the-record employment of Mr. Draper, who was paid $5,000 and wrote several ex parte letters to Mr. Mack. Also, it was charged, Mr. Mead "personally sought to influence the commission's decision by extra-judicial means."

Sunbeam, which came through the hearings with a clean record, is headed by President Sidney D. Ansin, 10% owner, and Vice President General Manager Edwin M. Spence, former NAB secretary and general manager of WBAL Baltimore and WWDC Washington. Mr. Ansin's two sons, Edmund and Ronald, each own 11.3%, and 10% owners include Catchings Therrel, A. H. McClain and Harold Zinz.

The proposed findings by the general counsel's office did not mention the recent FCC Miami ch. 10 decision in which three of four applicants were disqualified for ex parte contacts (BROADCASTING, July 18). Findings of the four applicants in the case are due today (Monday) following a one-week extension granted last week by Judge Stern.

Third company Wolper Inc. and Sterling TV Co. have announced the formation of a third company, Wolper-Sterling Productions. The new company will produce 12-hour-long specials and a half-hour TV series for a major network. The hour-long shows will be in both the public affairs and entertainment fields. Three previously announced TV projects by Wolper Inc. (including Race for Space—Part 2) will become part of the newly-formed company. Wolper won an Emmy award nomination for its first version of Race for Space. The two firms will operate independently and will join forces only for the currently scheduled specials and series. almost on a free pass,” Mr. Arnaz said.

New Directors Argyle Nelson, vice president in charge of production, and Milton Rudin, outside legal counsel, were elected to the Desilu board of directors. The board which was increased from five to seven by the vote of the meeting, at which 70% of the 1,155,940 shares of stock held by 9,800 stockholders were represented. Continuing as directors are: President Arnaz; Lucille Ball Arnaz, vice president; Martin Leeds, executive vice president; Edwin E. Holly, secretary-treasurer, and Charles Schwartz, senior partner of Bache & Co., New York investment firm.

Desilu intends to continue the policy of quarterly cash dividends on common stock totaling 60 cents a share a year, Mr. Arnaz said. In answer to questions about stock sales by the company's officers, he reaffirmed statements made at the time of his divorce by Lucille Ball that neither he nor she intends to dispose of any of their Desilu holdings, including 565,000 shares of Class B common (48.9% of total stock outstanding) on which no dividends have been declared.

Answering questions about the rise of the stock to $29 shortly after it had been put on the American Stock Exchange in Nov. 1958 and its subsequent drifting downward to slightly more than $11 (it closed at 11 1/4 June 18, day preceding the meeting), Mr. Schwartz explained that the company had nothing to do with the market price, which is a matter of supply and demand. Because Desilu was a glamor stock and in limited supply, he said, a lot of “free riders” bought in at the outset and ran the price up from the $10 at which it was put on the market to nearly $30, then sold it to take a fast profit and the price declined.

Immediately following the stockholders meeting the board of directors declared a quarterly cash dividend of 15 cents per share on its common stock payable August 26. No dividend was declared on Class B common stock, all of which is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Arnaz.

Hartford Phonevision attacks pay tv critics

Hartford Phonevision Co., the RKO General group which has applied to the FCC for a pay-TV grant, last week answered some of its critics.

Specifically, the Hartford organization, in a letter to the commission, answered the charges of two organizations, composed primarily of motion picture exhibitors, which had previously asked the commission to hold a full evidentiary hearing before an examiner concerning the application (Broadcasting, July 18). Hartford Phonevision had asked that its application for pay TV over WHCT (TV) Hartford be designated for a hearing before the commission.

In its rebuttal, Hartford makes note of the fact that the Joint Committee Against Toll TV, a national organization has tried to delay subscription TV through lobbying efforts in Congress as well as by numerous petitions and comments filed with the commission. It further notes that the Connecticut Committee Against Pay TV, which joined with the Joint Committee in petitioning the commission for a full evidentiary hearing, is identified as an organization composed of Connecticut residents who are opposed to pay TV in their state.

The RKO General group stated that neither group had disclosed a legally recognizable interest and, under commission procedures, fall within the categories of groups which the commission has consistently excluded from proceedings as lacking standing as parties in interest.

Hartford Phonevision further stated that the commission, on March 23, 1959, issued its Third Report on pay tv and said that it was prepared to give consideration to such applications for trial pay tv as might be submitted in conformity with certain terms and conditions. Hartford concluded that under the terms and conditions of the Third Report, pay tv is in the public interest and that its application was filed with the terms of that report clearly in mind.

All that is left for the commission to determine, the Hartford group claimed, is whether its application does, in fact, meet the terms, conditions and objectives set forth in the Third Report.

POST-'48 FILMS ON HORIZON

Warner Bros. lead being followed by other Hollywood companies—Fox, UA, Columbia

The post-'48 pot is beginning to boil. On the heels of the announcement that more than 110 Warner Bros. features will be released shortly (BROADCASTING, July 18) reports circulated last week that 20th Century-Fox is releasing 26 of its post-'48 films through National Telefilm Assoc.; United Artists Associated is marketing a new package of 24 UA features and Screen Gems is close to a decision on selling post-'48 Columbia motion pictures.

Though NTA has made no official disclosure, the company is known to have offered a list of 50 post-'48 features to stations, of which 26 are from Fox. The latter include "Viva Zapata," "Down To The Sea In Ships," "The Gunfighter" and "Twelve O'Clock High." The balance of the group are from Lippert Productions and a few independents.

SG officials would only report that its sales executives have been sounding out stations on their attitude toward the post-'48 features. They would not comment if and when these films would be released to tv, but it is thought that Columbia will wait at least a month, when the bloom will have worn off the Warner offer, before marketing their product.

Creative Telefilm & Artists Ltd., Toronto, which announced almost two weeks ago that it had received the tv rights to Warner's post-'48 features, originally had discussed holding a press conference last week to reveal additional details of its transaction. A spokesman said last week that a news conference will be held this week instead.

UA product has been offered to tv stations for some time. Paramount Pictures, which sold its pre-1948 library to MCA, has not come to any conclusion on its post-'48 films but along with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is reported to be exploring pay television.

NTA'S ABOUT FACE

Returns to New York after brief coast stay

National Telefilm Assoc., which moved its headquarters from New York to Beverly Hills last fall, is retracing its steps. The company announced last week that headquarters will be re-established in New York within 90 days.

Ely A. Landau, NTA board chairman, revealed that sales, promotion, publicity, advertising and sales service headquarters will be in New York. Mr. Landau, who remained in New York during the entire period, will be joined there by Oliver A. Unger, NTA president. Mr. Unger said the move was made because "current tv sales conditions make it imperative that greater emphasis be placed on New York City as the center of both national and regional sales efforts."

NTA moved its headquarters to Bev-service in New York. It is as yet the only cumulative count of convention viewing limited to the number of different homes that tuned in at some time. The unduplicated homes total came to 94.5% of the 4,750,000 tv homes in New York. ARB's records also showed that 68.6% of the tv homes tuned to CBS-TV coverage at least once; 72.3% to NBC-TV and 35.5% to ABC. Viewing of less than three minutes duration was not counted.

There are no directly comparable figures for viewing of the 1956 Democratic convention and no way to tell whether the New York figures are typical of, or higher or lower than, the national average for 1960. Four years ago the national average was placed at 88.3%, but that was a national instead of a local study. Convention sessions and tv coverage were not confined to nighttime hours and the measurement was by a different rating service, the A.C. Nielsen Co.

POLITICAL TV

167.5 million total saw Democratic meet

Total television audience of the Democratic political convention approached 167.5 million viewers over the sessions' five-night span.

These figures represent a totaling of the average tune-in per night, assuming 2.2 viewers per set. They break down to an average of 15,224,000 homes and 33,493,000 viewers per minute per night, but do not distinguish between homes and viewers who tuned to the convention on only one night and those who tuned on two or more nights. Nor do they take into account viewing done past 11 p.m. New York time.

The only cumulative figures available last week to show the total number of different homes that watched some part of the week's proceedings were limited to the audience in New York.

Although no fully comparable 1960- vs. 1956 audience figures will be available until A.C. Nielsen Co. issues its report a few weeks hence, it has been estimated that the Democratic convention audience was 30% bigger this year than four years ago (CLOSED CIRCUIT, July 18).

Last week's estimates were based on "instant ratings" provided by American Research Bureau's new Arbitron national service. These showed that the peak audience came on Wednesday night (July 13, when the ballot for presidential nominees was done) and that the next highest tune-in was on Friday night (July 15) when Sens. John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson made their acceptance speeches.

night’s windup proceedings showed no changes in audience patterns found earlier in the week, when NBC took a clear lead in ratings, followed by CBS and ABC in that order (Broadcasting, July 18). There was some indication, however, that independent stations did not pick up as much extra audience during the acceptance speeches as during some periods earlier in the week when, at times, almost as many people were watching entertainment programs as were watching the convention proceedings.

From 9:30 until the 11 o’clock closing, the Friday-night convention coverage held from 61 to 64% of all TV viewers (but from 9 to 9:30 that same night more than 63% of all viewers were watching something else); according to the multi-city Arbitron.

Here, night by night, are the national Arbitron figures on convention tune-in per average minute (in terms of homes):

Monday—13,026,000
Tuesday—13,121,000
Wednesday—17,314,000
Thursday—16,208,000
Friday—16,451,000

Dial switching high, Schwerin study finds

Viewers with all three networks to choose from, in almost half the cases elected to switch around for their Democratic convention viewing.

At least as was the case in New York, as reported last week by Schwerin Research Corp. on the basis of interviews with 485 men and women who said they'd watched some of the convention on TV.

The study found that while 52% tuned in one network and stuck to it (25% NBC, 23% CBS, 4% ABC), more than one-third (36%) divided their viewing between two networks (mostly NBC and CBS) and 12% moved among all three.

NBC’s coverage was preferred by 39% of those who watched on more than one network, CBS’ by 36% and ABC’s by 3%, while the rest said they had no opinion as to which was best. Men preferred CBS (43% to 35% for NBC) while women favored NBC 43% to 29% for CBS). Newsmen Walter Cronkite (CBS), Chet Huntley (NBC) and David Brinkley (NBC) were ranked in that order for “excellence” by men viewers; women thought the order should be Huntley, Brinkley and Cronkite, and both men and women put Edward R. Murrow (CBS) and places in the “excellent” category according to Schwerin.

DESLU STATUS

Writers’ strike caused first quarter loss

The late start in production of fall programs, caused by the five-month writers strike, will result in a net loss for the first quarter of the current fiscal year for Desilu Productions (May-July 1960). President Desi Arnaz told the company’s annual stockholders’ meeting last Tuesday (July 19) that the second and third quarters should be better than the corresponding periods last year. He added that despite the strike, the full fiscal year should be comparable to the last one, when the company grossed $23.4 million and netted $811,500, equal to 70 cents a share.

Breaking away from his prepared statement, Mr. Arnaz said “at the worst, we’ll do as well as we did last year.” He noted that this estimate does not include the possible major use or sale of residual product. “We are constantly surveying the market potentials for our inventory and it is our considered opinion,” he reported, “that we continue to withhold from sale the major portion of our inventory and instead to follow a pattern of periodic usage based upon opportunities as they present themselves.”

Renewals of The Untouchables and the Ann Sothern Show and the addition of two new series, Guestward Hol! and Harrigan and Son, will increase the backlog of residual series to approximately 1,014 half-hours of production, he said.

Desilu is planning to establish an international subsidiary to handle foreign operations, Mr. Arnaz said, commenting that most of the Desilu shows are now in some phase of foreign distribution. The new company will probably go into production in England, he said, as this would increase the quota of Desilu shows permitted to be used on the air there and so would increase the company’s sales in the British market.

Desilu, in addition to its own production, is also providing service and facilities to independent producers of theatrical and industrial films on a cost-plus-fee basis. Lucille Ball Arnaz, who attended the stockholders meeting briefly as vice president of the company, is currently starring with Bob Hope in “The Facts of Life,” being produced at Desilu by Norman Panama and Melvin Frank. Desilu is also making an investment in a Broadway show to star Lucy, getting the rights to an original cast album and to a tv spectacular in addition to the usual percentage. “So we will get into the play

KERO-TV seeks show cause suspension

The FCC has put the cart before the horse in its proposed rulemaking to make Bakersfield, Calif., all uhf.

This was the view expressed last week by KERO-TV which has been issued a show cause order to tell why its license should not be modified to specify operation on chs. 23 or 45 instead of 10 in Bakersfield.

KERO-TV asked the commission to suspend the show cause order because it is “premature.” The station said that a show cause order should be issued after the FCC receives comments on its proposed rule-making. Until it knows why, “if at all,” Bakersfield must be deintermixed to all uhf operations, KERO-TV said, it can give no “informed response” to the FCC show cause order.

The proposed rulemaking which would make Bakersfield all uhf is a companion piece to comments invited last March which looked toward the deintermixture of the adjoining Fresno tv market in the San Joaquin Valley.

Under the Bakersfield proposed rulemaking, the commission proposed alternative assignments for the city’s three operating tv facilities, only one of which (KEROM) is vhf (BROADCASTING, June 27).

All-star cast

Members of Congress, the FCC and the FTC have been “teamed up” to participate in a series of 13 half-hour radio programs probing the moral state of the broadcast industry.

Titled An Ethnic for Broadcasting, the shows are being produced by Michigan State U., with the aid of the National Educational Television and Radio Center and will be available to commercial stations.

Participating in the series are FCC Chairman Frederick W. Ford, former Chairman John C. Doerfer, FTC Chairman Earl Kintner; Rep. Oren Harris; Sens. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) and Philip Hart (D-Mich.). Among broadcasters participating are David Brinkley, Mike Wallace and David Susskind.
Radio-tv executives and newsmen, flanked by tons of their electronic gear, moved into Chicago's International Amphitheatre and loop hotels last week to get set for a repeat of "the big show."

Only a minor flurry of excitement over a bid by CBS for extra camera positions—which was settled by the three networks through "amicable" discussion—appeared to highlight the otherwise routine preparation for the exhaustive coverage of this week's Republican convention, expected to be much less volatile than that of the Democrats in Los Angeles.

The GOP planners appeared determined to give the home viewer a more orderly and more "sincere" convention as the result of a reported "avalanche" of mail from TV viewers who complained about the way the Democrats "staged" their convention. Jaren L. Jones, vice chairman of the GOP arrangements committee, said the flood of letter-writers "indicted the insincere nominations of favorite sons" in Los Angeles. "They were violently opposed to long seconding speeches. They objected strenuously to staged demonstrations and lack of attention and attendance by delegates," he said.

The 'GOP Look' ■ The GOP official said the Republicans will put on a streamlined, business-like convention in which the length of speeches and demonstrations will be strictly limited. "Our approach," he added, "was to put on a better show," but original plans to mix in a large amount of entertainment to enliven the proceedings has been more or less scrapped. Political observers and newsmen appeared agreed as of late Thursday that the only major excitement in view for the four-day event was the bid of New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller in competition with that of the party favorite, Vice President Richard Nixon.

The vice presidents of the three major TV networks—Thomas F. Velotta, ABC special projects, John Day, CBS News, and William R. McAndrew, NBC News—were quick last week to repudiate a report by a local newspaper columnist that disagreement over camera positions threatened the TV pool operation (NBC is handling the video pool; CBS, audio). Mr. Day said the story, carried by the Chicago Sun-Times, apparently stemmed from a friendly discussion Wednesday in which CBS sought placement of two cameras in the convention hall balcony to pick up its floor interviewers.

"We found our television booth was too small to accommodate Howard K. Smith and the two cameras," he said. As a result CBS sought the two balcony positions, but was told this would violate the national committee's coverage plan. "It was settled amicably. The other network men agreed that we could place one camera atop the television booths," he said, "and we decided to cut radio booth space in half and place the other camera inside our booth."

Mr. Day also took exception to the newspaper report's contention that CBS President Frank Stanton and Board Chairman William Paley had demanded emergency measures in an effort to top NBC's coverage in view of viewer ratings in Los Angeles coverage. (Mr. Paley now is in Europe.) Mr. McAndrew denied that the CBS-Song was settled to his and Mr. Velotta's satisfaction. "There is no battle over placement of cameras," the NBC news chief said.

Eye to Future ■ Nevertheless, the pros and cons of pool coverage (in terms of relative competition and expenditures) cropped up frequently in conversations among radio-TV newsmen in Chicago last week, much as it had in Los Angeles. Corridor talk included speculation that the day of single-city conventions may be close at hand—perhaps as early as 1964.

In that connection, network executives expressed interest in the proposed new McCormick Place Exposition Center and at least one of them (Mr. McAndrew) surveyed the site on Chicago's lakefront. At a news junket to the amphitheater Wednesday, Mr. McAndrew estimated it will cost his network about $250,000-$300,000 more because of the two-city coverage. CBS's previous estimate of its own additional two-city expenditures was $1 million (Broadcasting, June 27).

Mr. McAndrew declared that NBC's new electronic editing system has revolutionized TV news reporting for national political parleys, stressing newsman can concentrate more on journalism and less on electronics. With the NBC system, editorial and mechanical functions are separate: a news editor views coverage on four monitors and selects segments from all 32 cameras, channeled to a preset control room by a news director (Broadcasting, June 20).

NBC expects small demands on video tape in Chicago, based on Los Angeles experience. ABC, on the other hand, plans to "make good use" of VT facilities, according to Mr. Velotta.

All Tooled Up ■ NBC will maintain 32 cameras (including six for the pool feed) at the Chicago show, the same number as in Los Angeles, where ABC handled the video pool as part of an overall 31-camera setup. ABC will use 28-30 cameras this week. Latest count on CBS was 24 or 26, with the network adding the previously mentioned extra units to its 22 count in Los Angeles.

All the major radio-TV networks aired special programs during pre-convention week. NBC announced plans for NBC Special Report—Convention Preview, featuring Vice President Nixon and Gov. Rockefeller Saturday (July 23), 9:30-10:30 p.m. EDT, supplementing a schedule of three specials announced earlier for July 19, 21 and 22. Additionally, NBC-TV set aside a full-hour Meet the Press Sunday (July 24) for Gov. Rockefeller and Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.), leaving another half-hour still open in line with the 90 minutes it gave Democratic candidates Jack Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and Stuart Symington.

ABC-TV announced it would telecast the arrival of President Eisenhower in Chicago July 26, either on a live or a video-taped delayed basis.

CBS-TV plans were highlighted with a scheduled interview by Edward R. Murrow of the Vice President and Mrs. Nixon on Sunday, 6-6:30 p.m. EDT.

Meanwhile, Illinois Bell Telephone Co. put the finishing touches on communications facilities for the convention, including 100 dish-like microwave antennas. Forty of them atop the amphitheater will relay signals to stations. The Bell switching center at 84 West Congress St. will feed the network.

Nine of ten watched in N.Y., ARB reports

More than nine out of ten television homes in the New York market watched the Democratic convention on television at least once during the five nights it was in progress. The cumulative, unduplicated viewing figure was computed for CBS by the American Research Bureau on the basis of ARB's Arbitron instant-rating
New AB-PT program subsidiary

American Broadcasting - Paramount Theatres will establish a new subsidiary to produce programs for use on ABC-PT. Selig Seligman will relinquish his duties as vice president and general manager of KABC-TV, network-owned station in Los Angeles, to head the new operation. Elton Rule, sales manager, will assume Mr. Seligman's position.

An ABC-TV spokesman in New York refused to give details of the new subsidiary, stating that a complete announcement will be made "sometime next month." It could not be ascertained if the new unit would concentrate on production for the network only or also make product available for syndication, or if tape as well as film production would be included in the scope of its activities. AB-PT also owns ABC Films, which has invested in tv film programs made by independent producers, and has sold the product to stations and networks.

RCA INCOME UP, PROFIT DOWN

Data processing investment causes decline

RCA's sales during the first six months of 1960 reached a record high of $707 million, it was reported last week. But profits declined 7%. The lower profit picture was caused by increased investment in data processing build-up, according to the joint announcement by David Sarnoff, board chairman, and John L. Burns, president.

Among RCA's strengthening factors this year, the report said, were NBC's performance, which registered the "largest first-half profit in its 34-year history," and sales of color TV sets. Sales to dealers of the new line of color receivers introduced in June are up 300% over a year ago. NBC Radio pushed the company forward this year by coming out of the red for the first time in eight years (BROADCASTING, June 20).

While RCA's sales gained 12% over the same period of 1959, profits after federal income taxes amounted to $18.1 million, compared with $19.4 million for the first half of 1959. Earnings per common share totaled $1.14, compared with $1.29 for the 1959 period. Sales during the second quarter of 1960 amounted to $345.8 million compared with $311.9 million in the comparable 1959 period. Net profit after federal income taxes totaled $5.1 million as against $6.5 million for the second quarter last year.

3M buys Revere to enter tape field

It became official Thursday—Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. bought out the Revere Camera Co. for an estimated price of about $20 million. With the move 3M gained an entree into the home tape recorder field.

The purchase was jointly announced by Herbert P. Buetow, 3M president, and Sam Briskin, board chairman of Revere, 20-year-old manufacturer of tape recording, camera and allied equipment. Mr. Buetow added there will be no "basic" changes in Revere's management and operating policies. Theodore S. Briskin, Revere president, will serve as vice president and chief operating officer and Sam Briskin, his father, as a consultant.

The development goes a step beyond what 3M originally had in mind in connection with its new tape cartridge system for home recorded music. Initially, it discussed with Revere the possibility of a "joint venture," in which presumably Revere would supply the recorders. As negotiations wore on, the two companies talked more in terms of a merger or outright purchase by 3M.

As Mr. Buetow explained it Thursday, "Our new tape cartridge system of recorded music for the home has been offered to the industry through licenses on the various patented inventions which are involved. While a number of top firms in the industry will manufacture tape cartridge equipment, our management felt that to maximize the return on this very substantial research investment, 3M should also produce tape cartridge players."

No Facilities = Mr. Buetow pointed out that 3M has no "facilities and organization" to enter the field itself and that it would take at least two years to develop a "strong manufacturing sales team." He stressed that, while there'd be no changes in basic operating policies, 3M plans to "bolster" Revere's research program.

The system was originally developed for 3M by CBS Labs and the first commercial machine is being produced by Zenith Radio Corp. for the consumer market sometime next year. It was initially demonstrated at the Institute of Radio Engineers' international convention in New York this past Spring and includes six cartridges, each capable of 64 minutes' playing time. Among its features are ease of handling and professional quality.

Acquisition of Revere, with estimated annual sales of $20-30 million, marks 3M's second major company purchase this year. It acquired the MBS radio network this Spring for an estimated $1.3 million (BROADCASTING, April 25).

3M has earmarked about $30 million for capital expenditures this year. It earned nearly $65 million on volume of approximately $500 million in 1959, with electrical products reportedly accounting for 15-20% of all sales.

Reinsch joins Kennedy staff

J. Leonard Reinsch, executive director of the Cox radio and television stations, who served as executive director of the Democratic National convention in Los Angeles, last week was drafted by the Democratic presidential nominee as his communications consultant.

Announcement of the appointment was made at Sen. John Kennedy's summer home at Hyannis Port, Mass., last Wednesday (July 20). Mr. Reinsch was designated communications consultant, with his specific assignment that of coordinating the presidential nominee’s radio and television appearances.

Mr. Reinsch, it is understood, will visit with Senator Kennedy and his staff this week, arriving at Hyannis Port on Wednesday with Mrs. Reinsch. Since the wind-up of the Democratic convention, he has been vacationing at Pebble Beach, Calif. It has been clearly indicated that both Senator Kennedy and his running mate, Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson, intend to rely heavily upon the broadcast media in their campaign. This is premised largely on the notion that a majority of newspapers are traditionally pro-Republican.

Mr. Reinsch, 52, has been identified with Democratic activities in radio and television since the fourth Roosevelt campaign in 1944. He became radio advisor to President Truman after Mr. Roosevelt's death in April, 1945, and for a short period served as news (press) secretary to President Truman.

As has been the case in the past, Mr. Reinsch will serve without pay during this year's presidential campaign. He will take leaves of absence, as necessary, for the duration. As executive director of the Cox radio and television stations, Mr. Reinsch is the policy head of WSB-AM-FM-TV Atlanta; WHIO-AM-FM-TV Dayton and WSOC-AM-FM-TV Charlotte. He is also a minority stockholder (5%) in Biscayne Television Corp., which owns WCKT (TV) and WCKR Miami.

Mr. Reinsch started in radio in 1924 with WLS Chicago, while attending Northwestern. He joined the Cox organization in 1934 in Dayton where he established WHIO as a new operation. In 1939 he moved to Atlanta to manage WSB. He became managing director of the Cox stations in 1942 and executive director shortly thereafter. He is president of Carolina Broadcasting Co., which operates WSOC-AM-FM-TV, acquired by the Cox organization in April 1959. He is also a director of Atlanta Newspapers Inc.

CBC ENDS YEAR WITH SURPLUS

Tv revenue hits $36 million, up 16%; but radio income drops to $1.85 million

For the first time in five years the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. was able to report to the Canadian Parliament that it did not need all the money granted it. CBC reported commercial radio and television program sales of $38,162,337. For the fiscal year ending March 31, 1960, an increase of $6,103,772 over the previous year.

Television advertising revenue totaled $36,312,000, up $6,185,000 in the year, and $4 million over the target set by CBC’s commercial division when they launched a new drive for commercial revenues last year. Radio advertising revenue was off $117,000 to $1,850,000 in the fiscal year.

Despite the surplus, CBC did not meet half its program expenses of $80,968,107. Its operating expenses increased by $7,728,000, a small boost compared to the $7,278,000 increase in operating expenses the year before. CBC used $52,300,728 of the government’s grant of $58,404,000.

The CBC report, made public in the Canadian House of Commons at Ottawa, on July 15, added that the advent of competitive tv stations late this year in cities where CBC has enjoyed a monopoly to date, may have the effect of reversing the higher revenue trend.

As the financial report was announced at Ottawa, CBC’s program department at Toronto released details of its fall and winter schedule, showing a high percentage of commercial network time sold in the coming months. The schedule shows the national network starting at 2 p.m. weekdays, at 5 p.m. Saturdays and 12:45 p.m. on Sundays.

There will be an increasing number of Canadian live and film programs, including many new children’s shows directed to different age groups. There will also be more imports from U.S. networks and film companies. Included will be the Twentieth Century, The Verdict Is Yours Monday through Friday from CBS, Red Skelton, Tennessee Ernie Ford, and pre-release of new film programs My Three Sons, My Sister Eileen, Klondike, Danger Man, and National Velvet.

Second tv network organizes in Canada

Independent Television Organization was formed at Winnipeg, Man., last Monday (July 18) to develop a television network to compete with the government’s Canadian Broadcasting Corp. Closed meetings were held by stations recently licensed as second tv stations in major Canadian markets.

A statement issued after the meetings said that “the main purpose is the foundation of a mutual organization to assist in the production and distribution of Canadian television programs.” The group will consult with the Canadian Board of Broadcast Governors regarding its aims.

R. E. Misener, manager of CFCH-TV Montreal, Que., was elected president of the new Independent Television Organization, with Ralph Misener (no relation). CJAY-TV Winnipeg, Man., as vice president; Charles Baldo, CFTO-TV Toronto, Ont., as secretary; and E. L. Bushnell, president of recommended licensee at Ottawa, Ont., as treasurer. Directors elected were Finlay MacDonald, CJIC-TV Halifax, N. S.; Paul L’Anglais, CFTM-TV Montreal, Que.; Gordon Love, CFCN-TV, Alta.; G. R. A. Rice, CFRN-TV Edmonton, Alta.; and Art Jones, CHAN-TV Vancouver.

Only station of this group now on the air is CFRN-TV Edmonton, which will be replaced on the CBC tv network when the newly licensed CBC tv station there goes on the air early next year.

criminal in brief

Beirut broadcasting - A new radio station is under construction in Beirut, Lebanon, and a tv station is planned. The radio facilities occupy an area of 5,795 square meters. An additional 5,746 square meters are reserved for the tv station. The outlets will reportedly feature modern electronic equipment, with the cost to the government estimated at $2.7 million. Target date is Jan. 1, 1961.

Olympics on CBC - Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has arranged with CBS to televise the Olympic Games on a daily basis from Aug. 29 to Sept. 10, airing the films taken earlier that day in Rome, Italy. The films will be flown to New York to provide same-day tv coverage for both networks. Canada will have 99 athletes taking part in the Olympic Games.

Radio goes everywhere

A Washington diplomat stepped out of his office last summer and heard Beethoven's 9th Symphony pouring out of a man hole cover. The reason? A sanitation engineer was tuned in to WGMS Washington, D.C., on his portable radio.

These strange encounters by listeners to WGMS are being recited as part of the station's "Radio Reaches Everywhere" contest. Listeners are invited to send in letters telling about the most unusual place in which they have listened to the "Good Music Station." Winners receive Channel Master transistor radios.

Some of the zaniest replies received thus far by WGMS: A swimming pool repair man who enjoys Berlioz under water; a mother who gave birth while enjoying Mozart as background music; and a high-flying music lover who picked up the station 35,000 feet over Albuquerque; and an engineer of a rival station who regularly "sneaks" his listening in while ensconced in the control room.

Pre-convention campaigning

-WTIC (TV) Pittsburgh, Pa., did some pre-convention campaigning of its own to promote the NBC-TV coverage of the Democratic National Convention. The NBC affiliate went all out in staging a "demonstration" for Huntley-Brinkley, complete with balloons and streamers.

Highlight of the three-day promotion was a parade which, according to the station, drew 10,000 persons into the Brookline business district.

The ch. 11 facility had the cooperation of businesses and merchants in the Brookline area who set up window displays which featured NBC personalities. Over 70 merchants participated, the station reported.

 reporting back - Jack Reynolds, WSAI Cincinnati air personality has been expertly mixing business with pleasure. Mr. Reynolds has been phoning back daily reports for broadcast from his Hawaiian vacation. The station has been holding a week-long WSAI 50th state celebration in conjunction with a suburban shopping center's awarding prizes brought back from the Islands by Mr. Reynolds. The young lady pictured above with Ron Britain (another WSAI personality) was not a prize, the station regretfully reported.

Pulse contest

The Pulse Inc., New York, announces a contest which the company hopes will develop new ideas for improved data service. Members of advertising agencies and client advertisers are invited to tell in approximately 400 words how they have used Pulse data to solve a specific problem. The pooled experience will be incorporated into its broadcasting research service. From the replies chosen best by a panel of judges, the top 20 will receive awards ranging from $500 to transistor pocket radios. Deadline for entries is Sept. 1, and winners will be announced Oct. 1.

Parental concern

Westinghouse Electric Corp., during its sponsorship of CBS-TV's coverage of the Democratic National Convention, displayed parental interest in two tv programs produced by Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. Westinghouse Electric used part of its $6 million tv package to promote Reading Out Loud, a series of 15 half-hour programs with leading American personalities reading classics to children, and Lab 30, a half-hour advanced science series starring Hugh Downs and Westinghouse scientists. Each program received two 90-second institutional promotions in prime evening time. Produced by Perry Lafferty and the Ketchum MacLeod & Grove agency, the announcements utilized clips of various scenes in each series and mentioned that the programs are available free to any interested broadcaster on a non-commercial basis.

Drumbeats

Roundup time - It's time for the ponies of Chincoteague, Va., to unite! Each year on July 26 officials of this island community round up the wild ponies which run loose the year around and sell them at auction. WDVM Pocomoke City, Md., has been named the "official station" to broadcast the roundup activities.

No summer 'Payne' - Air-conditioning notwithstanding, employees of WFPA Ft. Payne, Ala., seem to be singularly fortunate this summer. The station is now broadcasting "poolside" from its newly opened swimming pool at the station building atop Lookout Mountain.

Air power - WBRZ (TV) Baton Rouge, La., is co-sponsoring an air show, "Sky-O-Rama" in cooperation with the Defense Dept. The show, which will be held at Ryan Airfield, on Aug. 20, will feature the Thunderbirds, the famed precision flying team of the Air Force.

Lest they forget - Jack Sterling of WCBS New York isn't letting vacationing listeners forget the hometown station. He cuts tapes for broadcast on WNOG Naples, Fla., saying he hopes vacationing New Yorkers are having an unforgettable time.

Leo Burnett

Reach for the stars! Reach for them anywhere, whether along Chicago's Michigan or New York's Madison avenues, and have no qualms if you are forthright and lack the pretense of the sophists in advertising. The twin of good advertising can and do meet and, invariably, they talk of the primemovers and image-makers.

Leo Burnett, whose agency started out with apples in 1935 and symbolically reaches for the stars, feels his agency pioneered in "forthrightness and simplicity," but disclaims that these are qualities indigenous to the Midwest. An idealist by nature, with a creative flair, the 68-year-old board chairman of Chicago's most locally-oriented agency (projected overall billings of $115-117 million, with about 60% in radio-tv) modestly disclaims his role in building the house that Burnett indeed built.

But, as the agency gets set to celebrate its 25th anniversary in August, some 900 associates in six cities would be inclined to disagree. And they are all the happier because the apples that the prospering agency currently is passing out (at the rate of 115,000 annually) are less a reminder of the depression years than things accomplished and yet to come. Despite the contrary embellishments of press agents, Leo Burnett Co. is still creatively, individually, characteristically and ideally Leo Burnett, who stepped down from the presidency a few years ago (now held by W.T. Young Jr.).

The Burnett portfolio includes such blue-chip accounts as Allstate Insurance Co., Campbell Soup, Chrysler Corp., Hoover, Kellogg Co., Kendall Co., Philip Morris, Pillsbury, Procter & Gamble (all network tv) and Brown Shoe Co., Green Giant, Pfizer, Pure Oil, Santa Fe, Star Kist, Swift, the Tea Council and Commonwealth Edison Co. (all spot and local radio and/or tv). Networkwise, the image of forthright advertising pervades upwards of 35 programs that would swell up a Who's-Who of broadcasting.

Dutch Uncle? ★ A student of creativity, Mr. Burnett minces no words on the subject. The Magazine Publishers Assn. was called to task in New York last December for maintaining a "status quo editorial concept" and "muffing the ball" on the greatest mission in history. Mr. Burnett, commands and gets loyalty (long hours) that suggests he is a kind of dutch uncle to his employees (he owns 14% of common stock). Station representatives who regularly call on his people well know the Burnett penchant for creativity—that merely buying by the numbers is not totally the Burnett concept.

Actually, Leo Burnett might have succumbed early to printer's ink had it not been for the blandishments of a college classmate, O.B. Winters. Born in St. Johns, Mich. (on Oct. 21, 1891), Leo Burnett shunned his father's dry goods business and picked up printing. After teaching at a rural school to raise money, he enrolled at the U. of Michigan in 1909, majoring in English and editing all campus newspapers.

By now an aspiring journalist, with his sights on New York, the youth got an $18-a-week job as a reporter-writer on the PEOria Journal. Mr. Winters (later a creative executive at Erwin Wasey) kept taunting Leo about the lures of advertising and the youth reconsidered his career. "He (Mr. Winters) was making $40 a week on an automobile house organ and I had to support my mother," Mr. Burnett recalls. "My food budget consisted of 10 cents for breakfast, 25 cents for lunch and 35 cents for dinner. Naturally, it piqued my curiosity," So, he made inquiries and prepared a resume on a typewriter in the Peoria YMCA.

Mr. Burnett joined the Cadillac Motor Car Co. in Detroit in 1916, editing its house organ for $25 and later $40 a week. Within two years he was appointed advertising manager and his career was launched. After a World War I Navy stint, he returned to Cadillac, then shifted to Lafayette Car Co. (after General Motors bought out the former) in Indianapolis as advertising chief in 1920. When the company moved headquarters to Racine, Wis., Mr. Burnett remained, joining Homer McKee's agency, which he described as a "great training ground for the man with a flair for a phrase" and which handled Real Silk Hosiery and other accounts. He served in executive and creative capacities for about 10 years.

A New Decade ★ In 1930 Mr. Burnett received a proposition from Art Kudner and joined Erwin Wasey as vice president in charge of creative activities servicing Goodyear, Carnation, other accounts. It was the start of a new decade—of depression years and the emergence of radio as a full-fledged advertising medium.

Undaunted, Mr. Burnett and eight associates formed Leo Burnett Co. in August 1935 with a handful of employees (eight), accounts (three) and a goodly supply of apples. "We were heavy in radio but late in getting into tv," Mr. Burnett observes. What does he think about the aural medium today?

"Radio has lost its personal characteristic. Its individuality, and has become a catch-all. Of course, in a small way, fm has come along as a service and if properly run, is a good medium. It has a distinct identity."

Other Burnett views in capsule: "Color tv has a very great future—there's as much difference between color and monochrome as tv and radio."

"I can never understand why conventional and pay tv can't complement each other."

Personal Salesmen ★ Mr. Burnett reveals that among his greatest personal satisfactions he has derived in his 25 years as agency head lay in Burnett's pioneering of the simulcast and placing greater emphasis on the development of "personal salesmen" on tv—Garry Moore, Art Linkletter, Arthur Godfrey and others.

Despite stick-to-it-iveness and a dedication for work around the clock, Mr. Burnett also manages to find time for extra-curricular interests. The credits: trustee of the American Heritage Foundation, director of The Advertising Council and Chicago Better Business Bureau (he directed the AHF Register & Vote campaigns in 1952-56). His honors: From the Freedom Foundation, New York Art Directors Club and other groups.

Mr. & Mrs. Leo Burnett (the former Naomi Geddes, married May 29, 1918) live in Lake Zurich, Ill., and have three children—Phoebe, Peter and Joseph. Far from being a gentleman farmer, Mr. Burnett is active in the soil (cattle, poultry) as a hobby; though he does employ a full-time farm man.
EDITORIALS

Color picture

IN THE past few weeks RCA and NBC have been issuing bullish reports about the progress of color television.

If there has been an appearance of inflation in some of these reports, RCA and NBC may be excused. Among all the major manufacturers and broadcasters only RCA and NBC have made a serious effort to create the color system that the FCC authorized six and a half years ago.

There are three important reasons why other elements in television have not joined in the exploitation of color:

- Black-and-white television advertising volume has expanded dramatically, and the market for black-and-white television sets, reinvigorated by the development of portables and multiple-set homes, has remained firm. In such circumstances there has been relatively little incentive to push color as a stimulus to tv advertising or set manufacturing.

- Rivals of RCA have not been anxious to exploit a field in which, presumably, RCA enjoys some patent advantages. Rivals of NBC have not been anxious to invest in color broadcasting when they lack a parent manufacturing concern that would benefit from color promotion.

- Some manufacturers and broadcasters have held the view that the quality of color sets needed improvement and that the original and maintenance costs of color sets were too high to promise a mass market.

All three of these reasons for delay in color exploitation are losing their importance. Technological developments in other advertising media are at last proceeding rapidly enough to promise increased competition for a television system that still broadcasts most commercials in black-and-white.

Many national advertisers now use magazine advertising because it can be presented in full color.

Many national and local advertisers are beginning to use newspaper advertising for the same reason—even though newspaper color still has many imperfections.

Printing developments promise to improve magazine color and to eliminate some of the production problems it now entails. Among newspapers there is concentrated effort in the same direction. Much money is being spent to create faster presses and simplified engraving processes that, in very few years, will substantially increase the volume and improve the quality of color in the print media.

Print media have an advantage in the development of color that television lacks. Their audiences are already fully equipped for color.

Television cannot go into the color business fully until 46 million homes buy color sets. It has taken nearly 15 years to put black-and-white sets in those homes. If only one manufacturer had been building sets and only one network broadcasting programs, only a fraction of America’s homes would have black-and-white television today.

Broadcasting at its best

EVERY four years it’s the same story. Is there too much coverage of the political conventions? Should the whole convention system be revised? Why should networks (and their affiliated stations) take a financial beating and at the same time lose audience?

The questions may be asked with some validity. The answers, to us, are obvious.

As long as the nominating conventions are held, they will make big news. Spot news can’t be rationed or programmed. It must be covered spontaneously. In spite of duplication or costs, the networks are going to cover conventions. It is their responsibility.

At the Democratic convention in Los Angeles, thorough and efficient television and radio network coverage was backed up by regional and local coverage of stations and station groups. It was the greatest demonstration of mass reporting of a single event in history. This performance will be repeated this week in Chicago.

After the conventions of 1928—the first to be covered by network radio—complaints arose about duplication and sameness. The radio coverage, sparse as it was, brought a revolutionary change for newspapers. The “extra” expired. The public had it hours before by radio.

Television coverage began with the 1952 conventions, but radio was still the anchor medium. The 1956 conventions constituted tv’s emergence as the major medium. And this year the largest corps of reporters and operating personnel ever accredited to any news event handled the job. Two thousand radio-tv credentials were issued.

One had only to look behind the scenes in Los Angeles to see what television has wrought. There was hardly a newspaper or newsmagazine cubicle at the Sports Arena or at the headquarters Biltmore Hotel that did not have a tv receiver to monitor coverage. TV did the “leg” job for them. The lounges provided for newsmen were equipped with several receivers. They were surrounded by “working” reporters.

Electronic journalism has wrought far-reaching change in newspapering. The public thus is better informed. Newspapers have improved because of this competition. And electronic journalism, with its natural advantage of speed, has matured.

Gov. LeRoy Collins, permanent chairman of the Democratic convention, paid deserved tribute to all news media for the job performed in Los Angeles. This was in refreshing contrast to the gratuitous smear of radio and television contained in the party platform. Gov. Collins spoke of the “outstanding contribution to good government, and to the progress of our nation” manifest in the television and radio coverage. Broadcasters are understandably grateful.

The Democratic convention coverage, complaints notwithstanding, was broadcast journalism at its best. It reduces to absurdity the failings of the few involved in the overplayed payola and quiz-rigging incidents. It was a massive rendition of educational tv and radio, with sponsorship.

The 1960 convention task will be completed this week in Chicago. Fresh from their Los Angeles experience, the networks and the independent stations should do even better.

We hope the GOP, along with their Democratic brethren, will recognize this demonstration of public service broadcasting when they return to Washington next month to consider pending legislation seriously affecting broadcasters.
