LONGER ODDS ON LONGER NEWS □ In same week that SRA and Rust Craft mount attacks on proposals for longer news, and week after NBC said no, it won't go, ABC announces it's shelving plans for expanding Reasoner-Walters broadcast. PAGE 19.

NO FEATHERS RUFFLED □ President Ford speaks to the NAB regional conference in Portland, Ore., and he says things that broadcasters want to hear. PAGE 21.

CARTER FEARS ALLOYED □ NAB executives confer last week with some of the Democrat's campaign advisers. It results in erasing some misgivings caused by earlier Carter comments on broadcasting. PAGE 23.

DOWN TO THE WIRE □ In the final days of the campaign, Ford forces pour $4 million into TV and radio commercials, while the Carter camp spends $2.5 million in its broadcast finale. PAGE 28.

THE FTC WARS □ Participants in an advertising law conference, sponsored by the Federal Bar Association and the American Advertising Federation, analyze activity at the trade commission and the FCC. They also take a look ahead. PAGE 29.

FOURTH NETWORK STUDY □ Ogilvy & Mather says it is examining the pros and cons of such a TV undertaking and it expects to have an answer on its feasibility by February. PAGE 31.

TV PRICES DEFENDED □ NBC-TV's Howard tells AAAA workshop that if inflation and other factors are considered, the real-dollar C-P-M of television has decreased in the past decade. PAGE 31.

DINGELL IRKED □ Michigan Democrat wants GAO to look into Advertising Council campaigns for the government. He thinks some expense claims are out of line. PAGE 31.

THE NIXON TAPES □ The appeals court in Washington overrules District Judge Sirica's decision that the White House tapes in the Watergate trial should be withheld from the public for the time being. The networks are happy and Warner is ready to release a two-record set of the tapes. PAGE 34.

FREEDOM FOR JOURNALISTS □ A Tunney subcommittee report contends that prior restraints on the press in covering trials are not justified and that reporters should not be cited for contempt for refusing to divulge sources. PAGE 39.

UNESCO PROPOSAL □ CBS and NBC are uneasy over the draft resolution for media restrictions that the international organization is considering. Salant sends a letter of protest; Mulholland goes to the Kenya conference. PAGE 39.

RECONNOITERING AT CBS-TV □ Management at the network knew last spring that its program development on the West Coast had to be revamped. It undertook wholesale restaffing and new prime-time contenders are beginning to come off the line for 1977 and beyond. PAGE 44.

'GOSPEL HOUR' DROPOUTS □ More than 100 stations make sure they don't get involved in a personal-attack case. They bypass the Oct. 24 program of the Rev. James Falswell in which there is criticism of Jimmy Carter's Playboy interview. PAGE 51.

OKAY, BOSS □ President Ford's support of the program for TV captioning to assist the deaf is a signal for OTP to put its shoulder to wheel on the project. PAGE 52.

BUCKLEY'S COMPLAINT □ FCC gets its act together in a 6-0 decision that public stations must afford a reasonable amount of access to candidates. PAGE 53.

NETWORK-AFFILIATE RELATIONS □ FCC's Abbott Washburn gets into that subject at an NAB regional conference and thinks the commission should undertake an inquiry. PAGE 55.

DELAYED, BUT APPROVED □ The FCC grants the sales of WRVR(FM) New York and WLIX(AM) Islip, N.Y., that had been stalled by protests against proposed format changes. PAGE 55.

NAEB IN CHICAGO □ The noncommercial world gathers at the Chicago convention where association President Fellows talks money and FCC's Quello discusses UHF. PAGE 57.

ROAD FROM MOROCCO □ With experience that dates back to running an Air Force radio station in North Africa, James Sefert has had an alliance with broadcasting since 1951. A high point of that career came Oct. 1 when he took over as president and chief operating officer of Peters Griffin Woodward. PAGE 81.

On eve of presidential election word from source close to Democratic candidate is that Jimmy Carter, if elected, is serious in his intent that independent agencies, including FCC, FTC and most certainly Federal Power Commission, be "liquidated" and through separations and consolidations made more "efficient" with new personnel at policy-making levels. Details, if in his mind, remain there.

Warm-up
FCC Commissioner Benjamin L. Hooks, whose name appears frequently in speculation as to who would be named commission chairman if Democrat Jimmy Carter wins Presidency tomorrow, had opportunity to run commission meeting for about 30 minutes last week. Chairman Richard E. Wiley had left early to keep speaking engagement, and Commissioner Robert E. Lee, who as senior member normally spells him, was out of town. Commissioner Hooks, according to reports, handled meeting and himself with style.

Under discussion was complicated common-carrier item over which Common Carrier Bureau and general counsel were at odds---kind of item that normally turns most commissioners off. But Commissioner Hooks was said to have been equal to task---even to point of suggesting way two sides could resolve their differences. As one Hooks supporter on staff put it, as he looked forward to Carter victory: "It was a dry run."

Title tells it
Asking price of Norman Lear's new five-week syndicated sitcom, All That Glitters, is said to approximate what he's already getting for established hit, Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman, and some major station prospects have been turned off. Metromedia's WNEW-TV New York, for example, was reportedly offered new show at $35,000 per week plus one 30-second spot per show after 13 weeks if show clicked. It's now paying $38,000 per week for Hartman, but that's proved winner; station gets $3,000 per 30-second spot, sells 13 per show, grosses $195,000 per week. All That Glitters is being bought sight unseen. There'll be no pilot.

In New York, WPIX-TV has bought new show, Kaiser U's in Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and San Francisco have bought it. Total of 30 markets have been signed. Glitters will play on role reversals: women as corporation executives, men stuck at home with household chores. It's to go into production next January for April 4, 1977, start.

Softspot
Unexpected sputter developed in spot-TV business in October, according to station reps and other sales sources. Nothing really serious, they say, and not enough to drop October sales below last October's or cause any breakup in rates, but certainly enough to make sales people pause and wonder: "It's not that business is poor," one executive said. "It's just not as good as we thought it would be."

Several possible reasons are offered. One is that political advertising volume fell far short of expectations. Some authorities suggest that regular advertisers may have held back to avoid heavy run of politcal that didn't materialize. Some regard apparent slowdown in national economic recovery as another likely influence.

Whatever reason, most tend to believe it will be short-lived: Some say comeback already seems to have begun; others look for it shortly after this week's elections.

Buried alive
FCC plan for making appreciable dent in its backlog of AM and FM applications for new stations and major changes in existing ones seems to have backfired. Commission called for "closed season" on such applications beginning last July 1 and lasting six months. Idea was that staff would have breathing spell in which to process existing applications. Instead, staffers are saying, commission will be in worse shape when season ends than when it began. Part of reason is those hundreds of applications that were filed in June by present and would-be broadcasters taking advantage of advance warning of closed season.

But it's even worse than that bulge would indicate. Staff is now working on applications received in February. With staff disposing of about 25 AM and 25 FM applications each month, total backlog is about 1,150. Broadcast Bureau has seven engineers working on backlog, expects to add six more—but it takes months to train them.

Exclusivity options
FCC's Cable Television Bureau staff is working up handy primer for FCC's use in reconsidering syndicated exclusivity rules for cable. Commission is turning to matter this week in line with Chairman Richard E. Wiley's promise to review those rules—which have been described as copyright substitute—if Congress passed copyright legislation that covered cable, as it did. Staff document is expected to review history of rules, state their rationale, and propose that commission issue either inquiry, to obtain views of interested parties on whether or how rules should be changed in light of new copyright law or, if it has ideas, notice of rulemaking. Staff will probably include laundry list of suggested rulemaking proposals—from eliminating rules, as cable suggests—to extending considerable degree of exclusivity protection now afforded top-50 market stations to stations in smaller markets, as broadcasters urge. Suggestions may include limiting exclusivity protection to programming on stations in need of help or in specific time slots: say, in daytime.

Prospect
There's speculation that Robert L. Stone, now in command of RCA's Hertz Rent-a-Car subsidiary, may figure in future of another RCA subsidiary, NBC. Mr. Stone, 56, was vice president-general manager of NBC-TV before moving to parent company. He's given much of credit for turning Hertz from loser to big winner and is said to command respect of Edgar H. Griffiths, new chief executive of RCA.

Paper drive
Eight regional sales seminars have been set by Television Bureau of Advertising for early 1977, designed like their predecessors in 1975-76 to help stations sell harder against newspapers. All-day sessions will also get new sales tools and explore sales and profit values of computers. Schedule: Detroit, Jan. 18; Boston, Jan. 31; Portland, Ore., Feb. 1; Las Vegas, Feb 3; Houston, Feb. 15; Atlanta, Feb 17; Denver, March 1, and Chicago, March 3.

Exodus?
Leadership turnover on Senate Communications Subcommittee may be wholesale at start of next Congress. Retirement of subcommittee Chairman John Pastore (D-R.I.) makes opening in that majority position, but ranking Republican slot may be vacant too. Senator Howard Baker (R-Tenn.) has post now, but he wants to join Foreign Relations Committee where there will be vacancy if Republican-to-Democrat ratios stay same next year. Senate rules permit membership on two major committees at most. Question is whether Senator Baker would give up Communications' parent Commerce Committee or Public Works Committee. Two years ago, when he made brief move to Foreign Relations Committee, he gave up Commerce.

At Rust Craft Television...People Make the Difference.

A television station is only as good as the people who manage it. Take WSTV-TV, Steubenville, Ohio... for instance.

Ray Chumley entered broadcasting as a film editor and projectionist in 1954. He has been with Rust Craft since WRCB-TV went on the air in Chattanooga in 1956. He moved to WJKS-TV, Jacksonville as Program Manager in 1968 and became General Manager of WSTV-TV two years ago.

Terry Walden began his broadcasting career as a radio announcer in 1962 while he was attending Florida State University. He joined Rust Craft in Jacksonville in 1970 after receiving his B.A. in communications. In 1974, Terry moved to WSTV-TV to become Program Manager.

Michael Macaluso has worked in broadcast sales since 1956...most of that time with Rust Craft in Steubenville. Mickey became Regional Sales Manager in 1972; and two years later was named General Sales Manager.

At all Rust Craft stations, it's people like these who make the difference...The Rust Craft difference. No wonder that when the Steubenville-Wheeling market thinks of television, it thinks of WSTV-TV.

Pick “Star Trek Animated” when you’re reaching for the stars. It’s the off-network Emmy award winning series created and produced by Gene Roddenberry, the man behind the original “Star Trek”... the most successful series in syndication history.

Starring in the colorful animated version are the now familiar voices and famous likenesses of the men who made “Trekkies” a household name: William Shatner as the brilliant Captain Kirk, Leonard Nimoy as the stoic Mr. Spock and DeForest Kelley as the much-loved Dr. McCoy. All featured in spine-tingling adventures that are out of this world.

America is also sold on “The Brady Kids.” It’s the off-network animated series that follows the adventures of the six brothers and sisters of the wildly successful syndicated series “The Brady Bunch.”

Now in colorful animation, and hilarious comic situations, The Brady Kids are on their own. Solving mysteries in their tree-top clubhouse and rocking in their own rock group, while your viewers roll with laughter.

From clubhouse to schoolhouse, it’s good clean fun that brings The Brady Kids all the way home.

Antitrust/networks. Original Justice Department suits charging networks with illegally monopolizing prime time were filed in U.S. Court in Los Angeles in April 1972. Those cases were dismissed on ground that networks were denied access to White House tapes and documents they said they needed to support their charge that Nixon administration was politically motivated in bringing suits. However, Judge Robert J. Kelley permitted Justice to file suit after President Ford moved into White House, and it did (Cases 74-3599 et al). Supreme Court then dismissed network appeals contending Judge Kelley should not have permitted refiling of suit. Judge Kelley later rejected one filing for summary judgment on ground that improper motive was behind refiling of suit, accepted for consideration request for summary judgment on ground that networks are not in violation of antitrust law and can't dismiss on ground that Justice lacks jurisdiction to file suits (BROADCASTING, May 3).

Broadcasting in Congress. Resolution to permit live broadcasts from inside House chamber by pool of networks and Public Broadcasting Service was casualty in House this year. Resolution, H. Res. 875, by Representative S.F. Sisk's (D-Calif.) special broadcasting subcommittee of Rules Committee, failed to clear full Rules Committee in March and went back to subcommittee, where it remained when the House adjourned. Sub-committee wrote another resolution and another report supporting chamber broadcasts and Mr. Sisk wants to try to move it again next year. Success will depend on make-up of next Rules Committee, which will be under new chairman, probably James Delaney (D-N.Y.). There was no action at all on broadcasting resolution in Senate this session.

Cable rebuild deadline. FCC has relaxed rebuild requirements it would have imposed on systems by 1977 (BROADCASTING, April 5, 12). National Black Media Coalition and Philadelphia Community Cable Coalition have appealed cancellation of 1977 deadline and Midwest Video Corp. has appealed modification of rebuild requirements in U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington. Commission is expected to consider this week requirements for refranchising.

Canadian policies. Canadian policy that cable systems there delete commercials from signals of U.S. stations and law denying Canadian advertisers tax deduction for time purchased on American stations are being fought by U.S. broadcasters assisted by FCC, Congress and State Department. However, Canadians have "proclaimed," that is, put into effect, their tax legislation.

Children's TV. Oral argument was held Sept. 14 in U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington in appeal (Case 74-7006) by Action for Children's Television from FCC's 1974 policy statement on children's television (BROADCASTING, Sept. 20).

Copyright. First return of copyright laws since 1909 has passed Congress and been signed by President Ford (BROADCASTING, Oct. 20). Cable operators and broadcasters are now liable for copyright infringement. Law gives cablecasters compulsory license permitting them to use copyrighted materials without having to negotiate for each work. Public broadcasters get modified compulsory license. Broadcasters get some assurance cablecasters cannot substitute commercials on their signals, and—in House report at least—some assurance that bill will not serve as green light to FCC to break down barriers to distant signal carriage and pay cable.

Crossownership (newspaper-broadcast). Oral argument was held Sept. 17 in U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington on consolidated appeals (Cases 75-1084 et al) from FCC order banning newspaper-broadcasting crossownerships prospectively and requiring breakup of 16 crossownerships (BROADCASTING, Sept. 20). Number of parties had petitioned commission to reconsider its order, but commission denied them. FCC has also turned down five of six Justice Department petitions to break up certain multimedia holdings (BROADCASTING, Oct. 25), and Justice is appealing one decision, on WIBW-AM-AM-TV Topeka, Kan.

Crossownership (television-cable television). FCC has amended its rules so that divestiture is required for CATV system co-owned with TV station that is only commercial station to place city-grade contour over cable community (BROADCASTING, Sept. 29, 1975). Affected are eight crossownerships in small markets, which have two years to divest. Acquisitions of cable systems by TV stations are still banned within grade B contour of station. FCC has rejected petitions for reconsideration of new rule (BROADCASTING, March 8). National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting is seeking appeals court review as are two of system owners involved (BROADCASTING, April 26).

EEO guidelines. FCC has begun rulemaking on equal opportunity guidelines for cable television systems that track EEO rules commission established earlier for broadcasting (BROADCASTING, Aug. 2). Commission, however, did indicate concern in announcing rulemaking that Supreme Court decision in Federal Power Commission EEO case (BROADCASTING, May 31) did not support FCC authority to create such rules for cable.

Fairness doctrine bills. Two bills were introduced in Senate last Congress to abolish fairness doctrine, one by Senator William Proxmire (D-Wis.), another by Roman Hruska (R-Neb.). Both underwent hearings before Senator John Pastore's (D-R.U.) Communications Subcommittee, but neither went any farther. Senate Appropriations Committee Hruska bill next Congress (it was S.2 this one). The two Senate bills were introduced in House by Robert Drinan (D-Mass.) (Proxmire bill) and Charles Thorne (R-Neb.) (Hruska bill). Neither of the latter two received any action.

Family viewing suit. Final arguments have been held and judge's decision is awaited in suit filed by Writers Guild of America, West and Tandem Productions in U.S. Court for Central District of California (Los Angeles) aimed at blocking implementation of family viewing concept adopted by networks and National Association of Broadcasters (BROADCASTING, July 19). FCC is defendant along with networks and NAB in both suits, which are based on antitrust and First Amendment grounds. Tandem Productions, besides seeking injunction, wants $10 million damages.

FCC fees. Sixteen parties have appealed (Cases 75-1053 et al) FCC's order modifying its fee schedule (BROADCASTING, Jan. 28, 1975). Oral arguments have been held (BROADCASTING, Jan. 26). More than 70 appeals have been filed by broadcasters and others from commission's refusal to refund fees paid under previous schedule which was held by Supreme Court to be illegal (Cases 75-1087 et al). Oral arguments have been held in that case (BROADCASTING, May 31). More than 60 parties seeking refunds have filed in U.S. Court of Claims (Cases 82-74 et al) (BROADCASTING, Nov. 3, 1975). FCC has suspended collection of 1973, 1974 and 1975 cable fees pending final court decision on legality of commission order requiring payment of those fees (BROADCASTING, Aug. 4, 1975).

Food advertising. Federal Trade Commission staff attorneys are analyzing comments regarding proposal to regulate claims and information contained in food advertising (BROADCASTING, May 10). Trade regulation rule would involve such areas as nutrition claims and comparisons, and energy and calorie claims. Rule was proposed Nov. 7, 1974, with disputed issues of fact and comments submitted in opposition by broadcasters and advertising agencies and generally in favor by consumers (BROADCASTING, Aug. 4, 1975 et seq.). Commission has begun public hearings on certain aspects of proposal (BROADCASTING, June 7).

Format changes. FCC has concluded inquiry to determine if it can or should be involved in regulating program formats with order concluding that it can't and shouldn't (BROADCASTING, Aug. 2). Commission said determination should be left to discretion of licensee and to regulation of marketplace. This is contrary to several recent appeals court decisions and expectation is that Supreme Court will ultimately decide issue. Several citizen groups are appealing commission's position (BROADCASTING, Sept. 6, 13).

Indecency. FCC's declaratory ruling on indecent broadcasts (BROADCASTING, Feb. 17, 1975) is being appealed to U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington (Case 75-1391) by object of ruling, Pacifica Foundation's WBAI(FM) New York. Oral arguments have been held (BROADCASTING, April 5). Commission also has fined WXPN(FM)
Philadelphia $2,000 for obscene and indecent broadcast, has begun hearing on license on ground of licensee abdication of responsibility. And FCC has sent to Congress draft bill that would ban obscene and indecent broadcasts (Broadcasting, June 7).

KRLA (AM), FCC has affirmed earlier decision awarding Pasadena, Calif., frequency to Western Broadcasting Corp. (Bob Hope and others) following remand of that decision to commission by U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington for "clarification." Commission reiterated its position that it could award license on basis of engineering efficiency alone (Broadcasting, Jan. 5). Case now goes back to court.

License renewal legislation. House Communications Subcommittee never did hold hearings on license renewal measures introduced this Congress, even though such hearings had been planned. There were number of reasons, mainly death of Communications Subcommittee Chairman Torbert Macdonald (D-Mass.) this year following long illness that slowed subcommittee work. New chairman, Lionel Van Deerin (D-Calif.), pledged to hold hearings on bills but ran into scheduling problems at end of year. License renewal will be considered in Mr. Van Deerin's proposed rewrite of 1934 Communications Act in next Congress (Broadcasting, Oct. 11).

Network exclusivity on cable. FCC order substituting 35- and 55-mile zones for signal contours as basis of protecting television stations has been appealed to U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington by CBS, NBC and ABC television affiliates associations, National Association of Broadcasters and number of individual broadcasters. Commission has denied petitions for reconsideration of order.

Pay cable; pay TV. FCC's modification of its pay cable and pay television rules (Broadcasting, March 24, 1975) is being opposed by broadcasters and cable operators in U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington. Oral arguments have been held (Broadcasting, April 26). Commission has also voted to remove restrictions on the use of series-type programs by pay cable (Broadcasting, Nov. 10, 1975). Also, cable systems, New York Cable Television Association and National Cable Television Association are taking state of New York to court, challenging its assumption of jurisdiction over pay cable rates (Broadcasting, April 12).

Pole attachments/forfeiture. Legislation which would have empowered FCC to (1) set minimum standards for pole attachment agreements if states chose not to assume jurisdiction and (2) fine cable systems for rule violations died this past session of Congress when House Speaker Carl Albert (D-Okla.) made it evident he would block bill from reaching House floor vote (Broadcasting, Sept. 27). Community Antenna Television Association, vehemently opposed to forfeiture section, played major role in bill's death, with many of its members contacting speaker's office. Forfeiture legislation had passed Senate and similar pole attachment bill was introduced there.

Public broadcasting funding. Funding for Corporation for Public Broadcasting for next three years, part of over-all appropriation package for labor, health, education and welfare, has been passed into law (Broadcasting, Oct. 4). President vetoed measure, but Congress overrode. CPB will receive, under system of matching grants requiring it to raise $2.50 for every federal $1; $103 million in 1977; $107.15 million in 1978, and $120.2 million in 1979.

Section 315. U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington uphold FCC's change of its administration of equal-time law, and Supreme Court has refused to review case (Broadcasting, Oct. 18). Commission said political debates and press conferences by presidential and other candidates will be treated as on-spot coverage of bona fide news events exempt from equal-time requirements (Broadcasting, Sept. 29, 1975). Several attempts by minor-party candidates to be included in televised Ford-Carter debates under Section 315 have been turned down (Broadcasting, Oct. 11).

Sports antiblackout. Legislation extending Congress's 1973 ban on TV blackouts of home professional football, basketball, baseball and hockey games if sold out 72 hours in advance was not renewed this Congress, even though versions of bill passed both houses of Congress and were tentatively reconciled in conference committee. Breakdown was over House bill's permanent extension of ban and its amendment limiting to 90 miles the blackout zone around town where home game is played. National Football League, which lobbied heavily against extension, has agreed to abide by spirit of antiblackout, even though original law expired Dec. 31, 1975.

VHF drop-ins. In April, FCC adopted inquiry (Docket 20418) into feasibility of dropping as many as 83 VHF channels into top 100 markets, said if FCC finds that United Church of Christ petition which substantially embodied study of Telecommunications Policy Commission suggesting channels could be added if mileage-separation standards are reduced. Comments have been filed (Broadcasting, Dec. 15, 22, 1975). Institute for Telecommunications Sciences, arm of Department of Commerce, will study feasibility of VHF drop-ins with Knoxville, Tenn., as test market (Broadcasting, June 28).

WPIX (TV). FCC Administrative Law Judge James Tierney has issued initial decision recommending renewal of New York station and denying competing application of Forum Communications Inc., decision contested by commission's Broadcast Bureau (Broadcasting, Sept. 22, 1975). Case is moving toward oral argument stage.

Pot, kettle, black thumb

EDITOR: The Kansas City Times recently gave that city's public TV station a nice boost in an editorial, but couldn't resist putting the barbs to commercial TV at the same time.

The Times noted that the local public channel is offering better programing this fall and a "break from the capricies of commercial TV, which is supported by disruptive cuts away from programing to sell a product."

This isn't the first time the Kansas City newspaper monopoly has lamented the fact that commercial TV uses up to 16 minutes of commercial time per hour. But never has the Times apologized to the public for the page after page of commercial time it offers up to 70% of the paper's entire content.

I like to read the newspaper. But I get black thumb disease looking for the news among the commercials. I wonder how long newspapers would last if they were held to 30% maximum commercial space, as broadcasters are. -B. D. Thorntom, president-general manager, KMAM(AM)-KMOEFM Butler, Mo.

If you can't beat them

EDITOR: Apparently the members of Committee (Committee for the Preservation of American Color TV Industry) have not seen the Phillips Petroleum spot promoting the free-enterprise system. News of the Phillips campaign was in the Oct. 4 "Monday Memo." Elsewhere in the same issue, we find that COMPACT is requesting a quota on imported televisions.

A true example of the free-enterprise system. If you can't sell your product because of low quality or high price, have the government outlaw the competition. - Harold Hallikainen, president, Hallikainen & Friends, San Luis Obispo, Calif.

Several things considered

EDITOR: We are disturbed and confused by your Oct. 18 editorial, "A little bit commercial."

We seem to be upset about our identifying those underwriters who make special programing possible, and yet you are well aware that public broadcasting must raise $2.50 from outside funding for every $1 of federal money it receives.

We are further confused by your questioning the value of program promotion, when BROADCASTING has long been in the forefront of championing broadcast program promotion. Why does promotion become suspect or unacceptable when applied to public broadcasting?

In addition, we are perplexed by what you term "making a dent in the public consciousness"? In the five years All Things...
Considered has been on the air, it has won every major broadcasting award. It has accumulated an impressive record of newsmaking exclusives and has assembled a reporting team second to none in radio broadcasting.—James P. Barrett, director, public information, National Public Radio, Washington.

EDITOR: I think many people were surprised at the number of dollars spent by National Public Radio on the ad regarding Susan Stamberg’s consistency, but All Things Considered is well recognized as a fine contribution to broadcast journalism and indeed has denied the public’s consciousness—check the ratings in many markets.—Alan H. Frank, assistant professorradio-TV and general manager, WKMS-FM Murray (Ky.) State University.

You’re looking for someone in particular?

We may be the smallest radio advertiser in the country, although we’re not sure of that. But we do know that radio has worked for us and probably can work for other service companies—if properly used.

The Sheldon Group is an advertising-sales promotion agency that has serviced, over the years, such accounts as Beechnut/Lifesavers, Group W, ITC Entertainment, Lily Tulip Cup Corp., Pfizer, 20th Century-Fox Television, IBM, The Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, Four Star Entertainment, The Lutheran Church in America and Waldbarns supermarkets.

But one of the most difficult media recommendations we ever had to make was for ourselves. Over the years we’ve held out just about every media type to our clients—newspapers, TV, radio, periodicals, trade publications, direct mail, outdoor. We’ve used them all successfully.

But when the time came for us to find the best medium for the Sheldon Group, we had a unique problem. We wanted to reach the greatest percentage of our market in the most effective way possible. That in itself is not uncommon. The uniqueness of our situation was that we were trying to reach the advertising and sales managers, the vice presidents—in short, the top- and mid-level management people who are responsible for deciding which agency is going to handle his company’s advertising and promotion.

It’s been more or less traditional for creative agencies to use the trades and direct mail in this effort. As a matter of fact, we’ve gone that route ourselves many times, and, I might add, with minimal degrees of success.

The problem: Even if you reach your target, if you don’t reach that key person at the moment he is ready to “buy,” so to speak—at a time he’s pulling his hair out trying to meet a deadline without a dependable agency or is fed up with his present agency—you really don’t stand much of a chance of landing him. Most of the time, even when you do get in to see him, the response is sort of a “Let’s see what you’ve done that’s different from what our present agency has done and is doing.”

More likely than not, he also has a pretty much closed mind about changing agencies.

Frankly we weren’t too happy with the amount of success in the other media we’d used. This time we were looking for something different and more effective. Our recommendation to ourselves was radio, specifically morning drive time.

We chose radio and a.m. drive time for several reasons. First, morning drive attracts a large percentage of the decision-making audience that we want to reach. Second, it’s a captive audience. Morning drive time is when our target audience is shaving, having breakfast, driving to work. It’s a time when he’s alert, not tired out after a heavy day. Then too, we knew that radio offers other unique advantages.

For one thing, it’s a highly personalized medium. You can talk to someone one to one, and for the time your message is being broadcast you “own” the station. So we were convinced radio was the medium for us, which left us with the decision as to which station.

Actually, we chose two—one, a major New York all-news station, because studies told us our target audience turns first to the radio for news when they wake up in the morning. Then we chose a major Westchester county, N.Y., station that offered live traffic reports and localized coverage in an area where we knew a good percentage of our potential customers were located. The final element was the message.

The situation that we created was an ad-man talking to his female psychiatrist about all his pressures and deadlines—ads, promotional materials, slide programs, flip charts, annual report, etc.

“Why not call The Sheldon Group?” she says.

“But... how do you know about The Sheldon Group?” he says.

She closes with, “You’d be surprised what you can learn with a couch.”

As it turned out, our recommendation to ourselves was on target. The results were excellent. We got new business on the books, plus a good amount of potentially new business inquiries to follow up on. We found people interested and responsive to our message, far more than in any of the previous campaigns we had mounted for ourselves. We also achieved something else.

After all, how often does an agency get to prove itself to itself, and prove it on a direct-response basis when there could be no doubt as to the success of the campaign?

We didn’t spend too much in our radio campaign. As a comparatively small company, we obviously cannot invest hundreds of thousands of dollars. Frankly, we’ll have spent only a few thousand dollars this year and intend to increase the amount next year. Radio can pay off handsomely for the amount invested.

It all came together—the right copy, the most effective medium for getting that message to the people most important to us and the time to do it. Considering the type of client we are, the audience we were trying to reach, and what we had to say, we chose radio. And I’m happy to say we’re a good advertisement for ourselves. The campaign worked, and we’re picking up our option for a new campaign.

President Ford has just signed the first completely new copyright law since 1909.

In 1955 Congress undertook to revise the outmoded 1909 Copyright Act. And it took 21 years to complete the task. The revision had to balance the demands of many competing interests, and there were times we despaired of its ever being accomplished.

Yet throughout all the years of disappointment, ASCAP spearheaded the drive for a new law, knowing that such a law was the only solution for the composers, lyricists, and music publishers in their fight for economic justice.

In the struggle to get legislation approved that would command the respect of both the creators and publishers and users of music, ASCAP had the full and essential cooperation of other American organizations representing creators.

Thanks to the efforts of many individuals—especially two strong allies of America’s musical creators, Senator John McClellan and Representative Kastenmeier—we have at long last succeeded. The new law is not perfect, but then no law is. It follows in the tradition of the art of the possible.

And for it we’d like to thank the lawmakers of the United States, the President and the American people.

Odds growing longer on longer news

ABC follows lead of NBC and announces its shelving idea; this comes in week in which SRA and Rust Craft attack proposals for expansion; CBS is still talking on it

The prospect of longer network evening newscasts receded further last week, perhaps to the vanishing point, as ABC-TV officials told their affiliates that "there are no plans now for an expansion" of the half-hour ABC Evening News With Harry Reasoner and Barbara Walters.

With NBC-TV already committed to stand pat on the 30-minute length, ABC's action left CBS-TV the only network still entertaining expansion notions—and seemingly increased the pressure on it to stifle them.

CBS officials had no comment, indicating they wanted time to reflect on what their course should be following this new turn of events. Some other sources speculated that expansion might be thought even more attractive now—if the widespread opposition of CBS affiliates could be overcome. The answer presumably will come at—if not before—a meeting of the CBS-TV affiliates board scheduled Nov. 14-20 at La Quinta, Calif.

ABC's decision was reported in a statement approved by both the ABC-TV affiliates board and ABC officials and relayed Friday morning from their meeting in Hawaii. It said ABC-TV officials had outlined other "areas of possible expansion of the network's news service, including a one-hour prime-time news magazine program, a daily one-minute news headline report in prime time and a new five-minute news program during Monday-Friday daytime."

The statement said affiliates and network officials agreed that their common goal "is leadership in television news through continued improvement of all news programming, whether network or local." They also agreed that—as many affiliates have contended all along—first priority should be "a continued growth" of the Reasoner-Walters newscast.

ABC authorities had first raised the prospect of newscast expansion when they signed Miss Walters away from NBC last spring at $1 million a year for five years. They saw the extra time as needed to give her a chance to exploit what is regarded as her forte: extended interviews. And some observers and competitors believed last Friday that ABC would have continued to push for expansion if the Reasoner-Walters ratings had maintained the gains they enjoyed in the first few days after Miss Walters joined the team on Oct. 4.

The statement from the meeting also said that "as the ABC-TV network and its affiliate body have achieved leadership in entertainment and sports programming through an effective and cooperative partnership, the network and board pledge a comparable effort to achieve excellence and leadership in news programming."

ABC's decision—and its prime-time ratings leadership—clearly elated the affiliates board. John Conomikes of WTAI-TV Pittsburgh, board chairman, was said to have told the ABC delegation—led by Chairman Leonard H. Goldenson—that "you have our total gratitude, confidence and support for a job superbly done." Board members further showed their enthusiasm, participants said, with a standing ovation.

While ABC was backing away from newscast expansion, other pressures against it continued to mount. These included a lengthy analysis by the Station Representatives Association—accompanied by a legal opinion venturing that affiliates of any given network might legally act together in refusing to clear an expanded newscast—and a policy decision by Rust Craft Broadcasting enumerating additional reasons for opposition.

In addition, NBC issued another statement to make clear that—contrary to original impressions—its own decision to abandon the idea of expanding newscasts would not be affected by anything any other network might do.

And the networks are also getting negative vibrations from the FCC. At a House Communications Subcommittee hearing in September, Commissioner James Quello said that he is "philosophically opposed to another half hour for the networks" (Broadcasting, Sept. 27). The issue had come up in connection with a discussion of Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.'s petition for an inquiry into allegations of network domination of their affiliates. Mr. Quello said he thought the petition had "slowed down" the networks' reach for another half hour of prime-time news.

And last week, Commissioner Abbott Washburn, in a speech to a National Association of Broadcasters regional meeting in Portland, Ore., said he is con-concerned about "the steady encroachment by the networks" into the air time and revenues of local affiliates (see page 53). He thinks the commission should conduct an inquiry into network-affiliate relationships.

Meanwhile, the deadline for comments on the Group W petition has now been postponed a second time at the request of a network. The original Oct. 13 deadline was postponed to Oct. 27 at ABC's request. Last week the commission moved the date back to Nov. 22 in response to a pleading by NBC.

In releasing the results of its analysis of the impact of expanded evening network news, SRA cautioned its members not to relax their efforts because NBC has pulled back. The association said last week it does not consider the campaign against network news has been won because of the NBC announcement.

The association assembled its report in time for distribution at the ABC affiliates board meeting in Hawaii last week and it will be furnished also to the CBS and NBC affiliates boards, which will be meeting later this month.

The SRA marshalled both economic and legal arguments to buttress its contention that an expanded evening newscast would represent another "network encroachment" on station time and "upset the delicate balance" that now exists between stations and networks.

The analysis presents an array of statistics to document its charge of network incursion into local time. It asserts that in 1963, out of an 18-hour broadcast day (7 a.m. to 1 a.m., Monday through Friday), ABC-TV filled about eight hours and 15 minutes daily, and local affiliates, about nine hours and 45 minutes. By 1975, the affiliates had lost three hours and 15 minutes, or one-third of their station time.

Similarly, the CBS-TV affiliate fell from seven hours per day of station programming in 1963 to five hours daily in 1975.

SRA said that the increased evening networks since 1963 already was programming 13 hours a day, or 72.2% of the station's total broadcast day. By 1975, it said, even after the prime-time access rule, NBC was programming almost the same amount—12 hours and 45 minutes—for a total of more than 70% of the station's broadcast day.

Since 1963, SRA went on, "local stations have lost up to one-third of their local time to network encroachment." The analysis indicated the networks have moved into every station broadcast daypart. In the 4:30-8 p.m. period, said to be the highest local audience viewing span, "the networks already have a half hour and now want more," according to SRA.

"While the expansion of news may be desirable, it is not necessary for the networks to take over station-controlled time for such purposes," SRA argued. "They can do it in their own time."

Some of the repercussions of an expanded network TV newscast, as cited by SRA: "It would damage local operations"; it would mean the loss to the average station of 12%-13% of its total Monday-through-Friday audience; it would seriously affect present syndication commitments as well as reduce future syndication product."

A concomitant of lengthened network news would be its financial drain on stations, the SRA maintained. Longer news is not needed to maintain network financial stability, the reps claimed, an additional network half hour "would divert nearly $200 million from stations' spot revenue . . . and lower HUT levels due to program relocation could increase this loss."

"Any sharing of commercial availabilities that yield networks more commercial time than they presently have will mean a diversion of spot dollars to the networks," SRA advised. "The proposed network offer to share availabilities in an expanded news is merely a temporary network expedient to give stations back some of what they already have— their own time."

The SRA cited FCC financial data to show that network profits over 10 years rose much more sharply than payments to nonnetwork-owned affiliates. The association said that network profits climbed to $208.5 million in 1975, a jump of 164.9% since 1966, while network payments to nonowned affiliates edged up to $217.4 million in 1975 from $201 million in 1966. While stations, the SRA reminded stations that the expansion of network programming into their time "is not the only network threat to stations." It said networks presently are considering expanding commercial time in prime hours by an additional minute per half hour.

The SRA analysis also looked into the question: "Do the antitrust laws prohibit affiliated stations of one of the three national television networks from collectively refusing to clear a particular network program or program segment?"

It engaged the Washington law firm of Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue to prepare an opinion. The 27-page legal memorandum was part of the array of material distributed to SRA members and the 535 television stations they represent.

The law firm concluded that a joint refusal by an affiliate group to clear an additional half-hour of news or any other new program offered by their network is not likely to be held as a violation of the antitrust laws. Its rationale was that the affiliates of a particular network are not competitors of each other or, individually, with their network.

In elaboration, the memo states that a refusal to clear by an affiliate group does not directly involve competitors and competition, and would appear unlikely to be a per se antitrust violation. It adds that joint action by an affiliate group to resist further network encroachment would appear to be a reasonable effort to achieve a proper objective that cannot as a practical matter be reached by individual affiliates acting alone.

Rust Craft's position was detailed by TV Vice President Ralph E. Becker at the company's annual workshop in Wheeling, W. Va. Rust Craft's broadcast properties include six TV stations, in markets ranging in size from 52d (Flint-Saginaw Bay City, Mich.) to 114th (Steubenville, Ohio).

Mr. Becker's paper made clear that, while opposed to longer network news, the company believes the issue is one for networks and affiliates to resolve without involving "any governmental regulatory agency—an obvious allusion to Washington Broadcasting Co.'s petition for FCC action.

Rust Craft's opposition, Mr. Becker said, is based on several grounds. Among them: That longer network news would reduce counterprogramming opportunities in markets having fewer than four stations, would run counter to analyses showing that viewers prefer local news to network news, would impair-licensee ability to meet local needs and could cut so seriously into station revenues as to require "curtailment of present program services, especially local news."

In addition, Mr. Becker said, Rust Craft believes the networks "should provide a news service to affiliates, and pledges its subscription to closed-circuit news feeds which may be inserted into locally originated newscasts."

Rust Craft has stations affiliated with each of the three networks. All provide 30-minute early-evening newscasts except WJXT-TV Jacksonville, Fla., a U affiliated with ABC, which offers five minutes of news in early evening. The other stations are WRDW-TV Augusta, Ga. (affiliated with CBS); WVEY-TV Saginaw, Mich. (CBS); WROC-TV Rochester, N.Y. (NBC); WSTV-TV St. Louis, Mo. (CBS); and WABC-TV Chattanooga (NBC). All are V's except WJXT-TV and WVEY-TV.

NBC gave its affiliates further assurances after some reporters had been given—and their own accounts had accurately conveyed—the impression that NBC's decision to stand pat was subject to reversal if another network decided to expand its evening newscast.

"This is not the case," Don Mercer, station relations vice president, told the affiliates in a telegram.

He said NBC's "announcement was unqualified and we do not intend to change our decision depending on what other networks may or may not announce. Of course, no position is taken in perpetuity, because as stated in our announcement, the conflicting considerations which prompted NBC's decision 'may change or be resolved in time.' We also stated, and we stand by that statement, that we do not propose to resolve these conflicting considerations by overriding the almost universal opposition of the stations we serve."
Ford doesn’t ruffle feathers of broadcasters in Portland talk

Views on appointees, siphoning, cable regulation, family viewing and longer licenses are in line with radio-television thinking.

President says future of OTP will be decided before January; Carter sends telegram containing praise and politics

Eight days before the election which will determine whether he will have four more years or less than three months in the White House, President Ford addressed the National Association of Broadcasters’ regional meeting in Portland, Ore., last week and said some of the things broadcasters wanted to hear. He said he favors liberalizing the equal-time law to give broadcasters greater responsibility in covering elections and that he opposes the siphoning of sports programs from conventional television, and he applauded family viewing.

But he did not give the broadcasters as much to chew on as had been expected. Prepared remarks that would have contrasted the President's views with those of his Democratic opponent, Jimmy Carter (where the latter has said he would use the White House to mobilize public opinion against violence on television, the President would say the White House should steer clear of involvement in programming matters (“Closed Circuit,” Oct. 25)) were not used. And some questions that offered him an opportunity to take a pro-broadcasting stance were treated warily, as in the case of one on the fairness doctrine.

Mr. Carter was represented at the meeting by a statement—drafted after Carter aides heard of the President’s scheduled appearance—and read by Senator Daniel Inouye (D-Hawaii). In the statement, Mr. Carter credited the broadcasting industry with helping to re-establish the confidence of the American people in their government. He managed both to compliment broadcasting and to make a political point with the comment that Watergate hearings had the effect of restoring the public’s confidence in basic institutions. And he said one of his administration’s major responsibilities “will be to protect the constitutional right to freedom of speech and freedom to express dissenting viewpoints.”

One piece of hard news made by the President was his disclosure that he plans to make a decision (and he did not add “if I’m elected”) before January on the future shape of the Office of Telecommunications. He said one group within the administration has advised him that OTP should be folded into the Department of Commerce, whose Office of Telecommunications is “a reasonably comparable unit,” and another, that OTP should be retained as telecommunications adviser to the President, “and probably expanded in some respects.”

An ad hoc committee of White House and Office of Management and Budget aides, along with OTP Director Thomas J. Houser, have for the last several months been studying the question of what OTP’s structure, location and role should be. Among the options said to be under consideration for recommendation to the President is one to retain OTP as the President’s telecommunications adviser but to strip it of its management functions, including management of the government portion of the spectrum.

President Ford also seemed to offer some reassurance to members of his audience regarding reported proposals by members of his administration to deregulate cable television. He said a report described by a questioner as “overwhelmingly in favor of cable television” had been returned to the group that prepared it with instructions to redo it with recommendations “more in line” with his views. He said he did not approve of the report as prepared, nor did he say what his views were.

The report under discussion, which has not been made public, was prepared by the Domestic Council’s regulatory reform group. One of its co-chairmen, Paul MacAvoy, said in April that he and senior White House advisers agreed that additional research which would indicate the consequences of various proposals was needed before firm recommendations... could be made to the President (Broadcasting, April 12). Mr. MacAvoy has since joined a number of research projects that have been undertaken by academicians and others interested in the issue.

The President's prepared remarks were brief—an appeal to broadcasters to help stimulate interest in voting and an expression of confidence that such an effort can be effective in persuading voters to pick him.

But the questions drew him out on broadcasting matters. And one sought his view on what the questioner said was Mr. Carter's announcement that he would make his first FCC appointment “from the ranks of the Ralph Nader group.” Actually, the Democratic candidate has said that his regulatory appointments generally would be of the type that would satisfy Ralph Nader (Broadcasting, Aug. 16), but the President took his cue from the question, and drew laughter with the comment, “I think we could find a more objective person than somebody that comes from that organization.” Mr. Ford added that he is proud of his appointments to regulatory agencies and of his choice of appointees court Judge John Paul Stevens—“an outstanding jurist”—to be a member of the Supreme Court. For the first FCC vacancy, he said, he would seek someone of that caliber “in this particular field.”

He has already made three FCC appointments—Abbott Washburn (a reappointment), Joseph Fogarty and Margita White.) “I don’t think we ought to pull somebody out of a certain segment of our society just to perhaps show off a bit,” he said.

His response to a question about the equal-time law made it clear he saw problems in easing the burden it imposes on broadcasters. He cited the minor party candidates, whose rights to coverage are now protected by the law, and the problems broadcasters face in covering a campaign with a multitude of candidates.

But, he said, “If I had a choice, I would leave it up to the good judgment of those that have the responsibility in the electronic media to use how they think the airways ought to be used. I have never seen that responsibility abused . . . so if Section 315 has to be amended to put more responsibility on you . . . I would favor it.”

The question on sports-program siphoning was put to the President in the context of his interest in sports, and he responded in kind: “I love sports broadcasts, and anything that takes that away from me as a viewer or listener, I am going to raise the devil about it.” (Earlier in his response, he indicated he thought the copyright legislation he had recently signed would deal with the problem. NAB President Vincent Walseloski informed him that it does not.)

As for family viewing, the President said he is a strong believer in self-regulation as opposed to government regulation. And although he has not had much of an opportunity to watch the programs presented in the 7-9 p.m. slot the NAB and the networks have reserved for family viewing, he said, his impression is that an honest effort is being made to present "wholesome" programming.

But a question as to whether broadcasters might "gain equal status with the print media as far as the fairness doctrine is concerned" did not get an answer. He simply said he feels friendly toward all news media, and added, "Don't get me in between who is the best or the worst between the electronic and the writing press. I have enough trouble without that.”

The President said he had no complaints regarding broadcast coverage of the campaign. "I say with great sincerity that I feel the broadcast media have been fair, even-handed," he said.

In other matters of interest to broadcasters, the President noted that he favors five-year licenses for broadcasters but said it would be "premature" to comment on whether he would support proposals to deregulate radio and television; he has not yet seen any such proposals.

Public broadcasting, along with the commercial system, came in for a presidential pat on the back. In the course of praising the private system of broadcasting, the President noted that he has given "more support, financially and otherwise, to public broadcasting" than any other President. "I think public broadcasting plays a very important role in our society, and I am pleased with the management and the content that I personally observe," he said.

In Brief

- ABC-TV and NBC-TV engineered their first cancellations of fall season last week, ABC axing Cos (Sunday, 7-8 p.m.) and Mr. T and Tina (Saturday, 8:30-9 p.m.) and NBC snuffing out The Gemini Man (Thursday, 8-9 p.m.). Mr. T and Tina will be replaced on Nov. 13 by ABC's summer sitcom hit What's Happening!, about three black urban high school kids; produced by Saul Turteltaub, Bernie Orenstein and Bud Yorkin's production company. Cos will be replaced by various one-shot specials over next two months before expected (although not yet announced) full-time replacement show, Lorimar's The Young Pioneers, takes over time slot. Gemini Man is replaced as of Nov. 11 by move-up of The Dick Van Dyke Show (which now airs Thursday, 10-11 p.m.); Van Dyke's replacement on Nov. 11 is Columbia Pictures Television's Gibsville, drama series with small-town newspaper setting, based on short stories by John O'Hara.

- Long-awaited decision in family-viewing case, in which Hollywood producers charged TV networks, National Association of Broadcasters and FCC with, among other things, violation of their First Amendment rights, will be handed down by U.S. District Judge Warren Ferguson in Los Angeles at noon Thursday (Nov. 4).

- Four CBS-TV affiliates—two owned by Group W and two by Post-Newsweek—said last week they would not carry CBS Wednesday Movie telecast of "Death Wish" (Nov. 10, 9-11 p.m., NYT), Charles Bronson movie that stirred controversy in theaters two years ago both because of graphic violence and appearance of endorsing vigilante tactics as solution to urban crime. KPJX-TV San Francisco, KDKA-TV Pittsburgh, WFLD-TV Chicago, and WXYZ-TV Detroit, Mich., stations involved. (Post-Newsweek's wpo-tv Washington said it would delay "Death Wish" to 11:30 p.m.)

- Decision of ABC, and earlier of NBC, to drop idea of longer network evening newscasts (see page 19) will not cause Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. to withdraw or change thrust of its petition for FCC probe of network-affiliate relations, Chairman and President Donald H. McGannon said Friday. He said in response to questions that longer news was "only a manifestation of some of the problems" cited in petition. Meanwhile, commission has received initial comments supporting Westinghouse petition for FCC to investigate television network practices (Broadcasting, Sept. 6) from Black Hawk Broadcasting Co., National Organization for Women, Citizen's Communications Center, United Church of Christ, Michiana Telecasting Corp. and WERE-TV Inc. Groups commenting so far (comments are now due Nov. 22) agreed that three major networks dominate affiliate relationship in both programing and financial concerns, often to detriment of public interest. CCC (petitioning on behalf of four citizen groups) and NOW asked for divestiture by broadcasters and FCC investigation into possibility of emergence of fourth network. Michiana, licensee of WNDU-tv South Bend, Ind., partially supported Westinghouse proposal, especially promoting idea of affiliate groups of each network for bargaining with networks.

- General recommendations for improving regulatory agencies issued last week in final chapter of Representative John Moss's (D-Calif.) Investigation Subcommittee report, include one specifically for FCC: that Office of Public Counsel be established to represent public in rate and license proceedings. FCC should also provide funds for citizen participation in proceedings, report says. Those are sub-recommendations under general heading of improving consumer participation—
Carter sends don't-worry delegation to meet with NAB

Kirbo and Jagoda huddle with executive committee to calm fears raised by Nader reference; broadcasters 'feel a lot better'

The National Association of Broadcasters' worst fears about Jimmy Carter were laid to rest last Thursday during a meeting between the association's executive committee and three of the Carter campaign's top advisers.

The gathering was in lieu of a con-cference with the candidate himself, which NAB requested two months ago to quiz Mr. Carter about his earlier statements that put the industry in a state of panic by his apprehension over what sort of President he would be on broadcast matters.

At the end of the meeting Thursday, however, the NAB executives' fears were mollified. "I feel a lot better" about Mr. Carter, TV Board Vice Chairman Kathryn Broman said afterward. "They told me some things I wanted to hear," said Radio Board Chairman Donald Thurston.

Chief spokesman for Mr. Carter was the candidate. He was accompanied by De-Jongh Franklin, campaign liaison with the business community, and Barry Jagoda, Carter TV adviser.

They imparted two points most pleasing to the ears of the NAB contingent; first, that it would not be Mr. Carter's "style" to use presidential muscle to force solutions to regulatory questions. It is more Mr. Carter's style, Mr. Kirbo said, to bring together concerned parties and let them work out solutions.

Specifically, Mr. Carter never intended to say that the FCC should establish program standards governing amounts of sex and violence on TV, Mr. Kirbo said. That was the message received by broadcasters from remarks by Mr. Carter to a forum in August sponsored by consumer advocate Ralph Nader (BROADCASTING, Aug. 16).

This is an instance where Mr. Carter's main effort would be to gather opposing parties and urge them to make their own solutions, he said. What would happen if that strategy failed was left unsaid, however.

Mr. Kirbo said Mr. Carter still believes, as he said at the Nader forum, that the President should be able to speak out against matters such as excessive TV violence, but that he is sensitive to concerns about potential censorship.

The second critical point was that Mr. Carter would not preclude appointments of industry people to posts at agencies regulating the same industries. Earlier statements by the candidate, deploring the "revolving door" between agencies and regulated industries and espousing the choice of consumer advocates for agencies posts, had suggested to the broadcasters that none of their own could ever be picked for the FCC under a Carter administration. Tied to that was their fear that FCC appointees without experience in the communications field would not have enough background to understand the "technical intricacies of communications industries," as Mr. Thornstor put it.

Mr. Kirbo said Mr. Carter would seek appointees who are best qualified for agency posts, including industry people. What Mr. Carter particularly dislikes, Mr. Kirbo said, are cases where industry people leave business to work for an agency, then return to the same industry a few years later, in effect using the agency post to improve their own standing in industry.

Other points made for Mr. Carter by the advisers included these:

* Mr. Carter would not threaten stations with losing their licenses.

* No choice has been made for a new FCC chairman if Mr. Carter wins. Mr. Kirbo said Mr. Carter has not met the man speculation has centered on for the next chairmanship. The last is an apparent reference to current Commissioner Benjamin Hooks, although his name was not mentioned.

* The candidate has no problem with an NAB-supported provision exempting FCC license renewal proceedings from the jurisdiction of the proposed consumer protection agency.

* Mr. Carter's current knowledge of Here are the reasons.

We provide more than beautiful music to our subscribers. That's why so many rank Number One. Here's what's involved:

- The most proven and consistent music mix and flow, created by Phil Stout and Jim Schulke.
- Music tapes unmatched in the industry for technical excellence...so beautiful that people actually feel the difference and listen longer.
- Exclusive recordings by the "beautiful music" orchestras of the BBC...plus a $100,000 package especially recorded by SRP in London...plus recently commissioned material just completed and never before heard by any audience.
- Consultation and recommendations on format execution by Dave MacFee...Music is important, but it won't produce maximum results without good execution.
- Monitoring via recorder-coupler to provide outside perspective on format execution.
- Survey-proven promotion ideas, including TV commercials and schedules, plus billboard, busboard and newspaper layouts.
- Perspective on ratings survey results and growth patterns by Bill McClenaghan.
- Continuing research and recommendations in RF engineering, studio equipment and audio processing...a vital part of SRP's consistent record of success.

the broadcasting industry is limited, but that he promises to study it carefully. In this regard Mr. Kirbo offered the personal opinion that broadcasting does a better job of regulating itself than most other industries.

Mr. Kirbo also invited the broadcasters' ideas for improving business regulation. Mr. Carter has promised to overhaul the Washington bureaucracy if elected.

The meeting at NAB headquarters in Washington, lasted about two hours, including lunch. Both sides appeared satisfied going away. Said Mr. Thurston, "I think that we have established a very comfortable dialogue in a proper atmosphere that will continue regardless of who wins."

Although attempts to get Mr. Carter and the NAB together began with the NAB, the meeting Thursday was initiated by the Carter campaign, largely because President Ford spoke to the association at a fall regional meeting in (preceding story).

The Carter campaign also offered for the same advisers to meet with the leadership of the National Cable Television Association. NCTA politely refused the invitation, however, in deference to the tight schedules, but also because the cable people did not have anything so pressing as NAB's concern. NCTA indicated it would, however, like to meet with Mr. Carter should he become President. Mr. Carter met with the NCTA board once earlier, in February 1975, while he was yet an unknown.

Ford leaves indignant stations in his wake

Nessen erupts in WBBM interview; half-hour commercial taping puts squeeze on WJW news show

President Ford had a successful string of one-night, half-hour commercials on half a dozen state-wide television networks last week, with Joe Garagiola making things pleasant as a kind of talk show host (see page 28). But the presidential tour's encounter with real live newsmen along the way was not always as smooth.

In Chicago, there was talk of White House requests for conditions on interviews with the President and, when one reporter asked a question that White House News Secretary Ronald Nessen had urged him to avoid, Mr. Nessen cut off the questioning, swore at the reporter, and indicated he would not be warmly regarded at the White House in the future.

In Cleveland, the taping of the half-hour commercial at wjw-tv caused anxious moments for the news staff. The taping involved use of newsroom cameras and tape decks, and the taping did not end until minutes before the 6 p.m. news was to go on the air.

Initially, it seemed that the President had scored another media coup in Chicago. With the President in the wls-tv building for several hours prior to the taping, on Tuesday, news department and station officials managed to prevail on him to submit to an interview. Mr. Ford simply walked onto the set while the evening news was in progress, and took about three minutes of questions from the anchormen, Fahey Flynn and Joel Daly, and the sportscaster, Mike Nolan. The personnel were delighted.

But the interview started wbbm-tv Chicago's competitive juices flowing. Phillip Walters, the station's Washington correspondent, who was in Chicago, contacted Senator Charles Percy (R-III.) and through him obtained permission for an interview with the President at his hotel. But the senator reportedly asked for "easy" questions.

The station rejected the condition and, Mr. Walters said, so did he, in a brief discussion with Mr. Nessen prior to the interview, which was to be taped. However, Mr. Nessen asked what questions Mr. Walters planned to ask, and when the reporter mentioned the subject of an interview with Playboy magazine, Mr. Nessen tried to talk him out of it, according to Mr. Walters.

The reporter said he made no commitment. But, toward the end of the interview with the President, when Mr. Walters tried to ask the question, Mr. Nessen interrupted. "Wait a minute. That's not fair," he said. To which Mr. Walters replied, "I can't ask that!" The answer was no and the interview was over, but not before the cameras picked up the exchange, which was played on the air.

After they were back in the hall, Mr. Walters said that Mr. Nessen "got more acid," "used abusive language" and said, "That's the last time we do anything for you." The remark seemed "abusive" to Mr. Walters, who is not a regular White House correspondent. He said he does few stories out of the White House.

Things went more smoothly in Philadelphia on Wednesday. There, the taping of the half-hour show was done at wpvi-tv. Again, the newsmen in the building were hungry for a live interview. And again, the President complied. He walked on as the set of the 6 o'clock news was picked up at 6:23 p.m., and spent about five minutes taking questions from the anchorman, Larry Kane.

But this time, according to Bob Feldman, the station's assistant news director, there was no suggestion that the reporter take it easy. "They didn't ask about the give away," he said. "They just wanted a plug for the half-hour show."

Newsmen at wjw-tv Cleveland, where the President taped his show on Thursday, also had visions of a live interview. But as things turned out, they were happy just to get the 6 p.m. news show on at 6 p.m.

The President's program was to have been taped between 4:45 and 5:15 p.m. But the presidential party was running late and the taping did not begin until 5:15. As a result, it was not until after 5:55 p.m. that two of the cameras normally used on the set were wheeled in from the main studio where they had been used in taping the President's program. Two tape decks normally available to the news department were tied up in the taping.

"Normally," said Ron Bialek, the station's managing editor, "we're ready to go at 5:30. Everything worked out, but there was a lot of worried people here." Even after the program, tensions were so high that, it was said, President would have been far from a welcome guest in the wjw-tv newsroom.
First they cut your budget. Now they scream for video quality.

VPR-1 makes you a hero.

The unbelievable new VPR-1 produces spectacular high-band color pictures in a one-inch helical format. Viewed side-by-side against a quad machine, it astounds professional engineers.

You'll probably buy your VPR-1 because you want top quality and versatility priced to suit your budget. But once you get your feet wet, you'll want to add the optional Automatic Scan Tracking (AST) accessory. It upgrades your VPR-1 to an entire system, with one-fifth speed slow motion, still frame, manual jogging, and real-time video verification features. Add the optional digital time base corrector, and the entire bag of tricks can be broadcast commercially, without compromise.

You can put in-house productions on the air, because they'll have all the polish, creativity and audience appeal of network programs. That's the league a VPR-1 puts you into.

VPR-1 is the one-inch helical recording system from Ampex, designed for users who can't take chances.

Ford pours on the broadcast in final weeks of campaigning

Going down to the wire, he unloads $4 million in TV and radio commercials and state-wide hook-ups for special half-hour program

The President Ford Committee is winding up its election campaign with a heavy foot on the television throttle. Thirty-second, one-minute and five-minute commercials are being seen on the networks and, through spot buys, on individual stations across the country. And in six states critical to President Ford's hopes for election, half-hour programs featuring the President were seen last week, on state-wide networks.

Nor is that all. Tonight (election eve), the President will be seen in a half-hour program on each of the commercial networks.

And television isn't the entire story. President Ford is being heard in daily five-minute broadcasts on Mutual Broadcasting. The programs, which ran one a day, Monday through Friday, beginning at 8:15 a.m. in each time zone, and are running again at the same time today and tomorrow, feature the President discussing such issues as defense, tax policy and inflation.

All told, the last two weeks of the campaign will cost PFC about $4 million in television and radio time and production costs. The cost of the state-networks will cost PFC $450,000, and the three half hours on the networks tonight, $300,000. The MBS programs are depleting the PFC treasury of another $50,000.

The heaviest spending by PFC on broadcasting is being concentrated in the final two weeks of the campaign. The PFC had allotted $8 million to television for the entire campaign and the budget was increased another $450,000 to accommodate the state-network buys.

The decision to use television on a state-wide as well as national basis was made by the President's campaign advisers who felt the technique would permit the President to present the most of his natural advantages without risking the slips of the tongue that extemporaneous speaking sometimes produce.

In California on Sunday, Oct. 24; Illinois on Tuesday, Pennsylvania on Wednesday, Ohio on Thursday, Texas on Saturday and New York last night (Sunday), viewers saw two editions of the President's day in those states followed by an informal discussion between the President and several supporters. Members of the permanent traveling cast including Joe Garagiola, who is prominent in NBC Sports programming as well as in commercials, and former Representative Edith Green, of Oregon, a Democrat who is a leader in Democrats for Ford. As the campaign moves from one state to the next, the program joins in local personalities such as United Nations Ambassador William Scranton, a former governor of Pennsylvania, as well as members of the President's family.

As observers have noted, the carefully prepared questions Mr. Garagiola puts to the President are not tough. "How many leading women have you dealt with, Mr. President?" Mr. Garagiola asked in the program aired in California. "One hundred and twenty-four leaders around the world, Joe?"

The California program originated in the studios of KABC-TV Los Angeles. The other originating stations were WLS-TV Chicago, WPVI-TV Philadelphia, WIVV-TV Cleveland, KTRK-TV Houston and WABC-TV New York.

If the half hours in the six states were pleasing to the-President's aides, so was the new five-minute spot that was shown on the networks for the first time last week. It was, as Philip Angell, of Deardorff, Bailey & Eyer, the agency in charge of PFC advertising, said, "very up-beat." There are scenes of parades, of happy crowds, of men and women saying the

In last stretch he turns to TV close-ups with straight sell and half-hour network windup

In contrast to the President Ford campaign, which poured about $4 million into radio and TV in the final two weeks before tomorrow's presidential election, the Carter-Mondale campaign spent about $2.5 million.

That was Gerald Rafshoon's best guess; Jimmy Carter's advertising man said he could make no more exact an estimate. Most of the media buys, he said, had been made well in advance.

"It's true we don't have near the exposure they [President Ford's campaign] do," Mr. Rafshoon said last week. He heads the advertising agency that has handled Mr. Carter's commercial work since Mr. Carter's first run for Georgia governor. "But I think they've got overkill . . . I think you reach a point of diminishing return and maybe it will hurt them."

Mr. Rafshoon made no effort to conceal his resentment that the Ford committee had so much to spend in the final days. In earlier stages, the Carter camp made an issue of Mr. Ford's "hiding" in the White House, using the office of the President as a campaign platform, while Mr. Carter traveled about shaking hands and making speeches.

But in the end, media expenditures of both camps, came out about the same. The Carter campaign spent close to $11 million in all, about $6 million on TV and $1 million on radio. The main reason the Ford campaign had more to spend at the last was because it started its political advertising a month after Carter advertising started.

As did the Ford campaign, the Carter campaign reserved half an hour on each of the commercial television networks tonight, election eve. The Carter program, Mr. Rafshoon said, relies heavily on a man-on-the-street format, showing voters who appear undecided asking questions and getting answers from the candidate.

The footage was shot over the past three weeks in California, Colorado, New York and Houston. Mr. Rafshoon notes with some pride that the voters in the commercial are given names. "They're real people," he said, just as Jimmy Carter is a real person, a point Mr. Rafshoon said he has tried consistently to put across in all of his Carter commercials.

The half-hour commercial also got mileage in local markets. It ran in about 25 markets in all during the week, mostly in the large industrial areas on which the campaign has concentrated from the start, Mr. Rafshoon said. He listed key states as New York, California, Ohio, Texas, Florida, Wisconsin, Michigan and Missouri.

Mr. Rafshoon said he thinks the input of adman Tony Schwartz into the Carter commercial production (BROADCASTING, Oct. 25) has been "blown out of proportion." Mr. Schwartz is a veteran of 200 political campaigns, but his name is inextricably linked still with the highly negative "atom bomb" commercial used once by Lyndon Johnson against Barry Goldwater in the 1964 presidential race and then withdrawn. Mr. Schwartz produced about 25 new commercials for the Carter campaign two weeks ago and although none showed anything so ominous as an atomic bomb exploding behind a little girl picking daisies, the hiring of Mr. Schwartz was played in the press as a counter move to offset a new set of anti-Carter commercials distributed by the Ford campaign.

On the contrary, Mr. Rafshoon said, "we've been running a positive campaign," including the new commercials. Most of the new batch show tight close-ups of the candidate in a one-on-one attitude toward the viewer. They are the only TV commercials made with the candidate in a studio. Most others have shown Mr. Carter on the campaign trail. The reason for the new approach, Mr. Rafshoon said, was to give the undecided voter a more intimate view of Mr. Carter, the impression that he was getting to know the candidate better.

It is too soon, Mr. Rafshoon said, to say what went wrong or right with the Carter ad campaign. "I'm not going to go into any advertising mumbo jumbo about it," he said. "I'll know more about 10 or 11 o'clock Tuesday night."
things about President Ford that had been said in earlier, man-and-woman-in-the-street commercials—"He's restored my faith in America," "He was on the scene when things were at the low ebb," for instance—and all against the background of the Ford campaign song, I'm Feeling Good About America. There are scenes, too, of the President speaking before an enthusiastic crowd at his alma mater, the University of Michigan, as an announcer reminds viewers that Presidents, not so long ago, were not welcome on college campuses; scenes of the President in the Oval Office chatting with youngsters and with the elderly, and scenes of the President on a farm and at a factory.

Tomorrow, PFC will learn how effective the campaign has been.

Lawyers talk of the FTC wars

Legal workshop paints commission as adversary with too much power

Explanations and interpretations of Federal Trade Commission and FCC activity and predictions of the directions those agencies might take in the future were offered to the nearly 100 participants in an advertising law conference co-sponsored by the Federal Bar Association and the American Advertising Federation in Washington.

The tone was one of an adversary relationship between the FTC and advertisers. Daniel C. Smith, former FTC attorney now with the Washington law firm of Arent, Fox, Kintner, Plotkin & Kahn, said that the FTC, in its handling of ad complaints, views "everything in the eyes of the consumer . . . . The businessman has become a second-class citizen in this area." Mr. Smith said the FTC is no longer out just to correct improper advertising and trade practices, but to penalize the company "to teach them a lesson they'll never forget."

He went on to talk about the change in jurisdiction at the trade commission that lets it investigate complaints not founded on charges of deception, but rather on complaints of "unfair" practices. In addition, a company does not have to be the specific object of a cease-and-desist order to be bound by its terms. Mr. Smith explained that the FTC can merely inform a firm that certain actions it engaged in are the subject of a separate order against another firm and that, it, too, must now stop these practices.

The recent Supreme Court decision allowing pharmacies to advertise prescription drug prices (BROADCASTING, May 31) was discussed by Joan Bernstein, former acting director of the FTC Bureau of Consumer Protection, and Miles Kirkpatrick, former FTC commissioner. Both agreed that it was a good course for the court and noted that the decision will have some influence on similar cases pending at the FTC involving prescription eye glasses, doctor and lawyer advertising. Areas of government intervention in advertising listed by the speakers included the proposed Food and Drug Administration labeling rules for over-the-counter drugs, and similar advertising content regulations for OTC drugs to be considered by the FTC.

The OTC drug matter was addressed by Daniel Manelli, legal affairs vice president of the Proprietary Association, who presented the industry view that the prohibition of certain words in OTC drug ads "raised serious free speech issues." The FTC's acceptance of FDA standards in this area, he said, is a transfer of power with the FTC "reduced to comparing word lists" to determine which products are violating the law. And the warning required on package labels may also be made mandatory for the product ads, he said, with drastic results for broadcast spots that must include tag lines such as, "If presently using an antibiotic consult your doctor before taking." Once this precedent is established, he said, it could conceivably be broadened to other products.

The FDA-proposed description for one OTC drug category—antacids—would allow the product to be listed as offering relief from acid indigestion, sour stomach and heartburn with only those three terms listed as acceptable. It appears, said Mr. Manelli, that firms would be prohibited from using other terms, possibly just as ac... curate, that are not on the list. The question of whether OTC drugs should be allowed on TV before 9 p.m. (the subject of a rulemaking petition now under consideration by the FCC) was also mentioned by Mr. Manelli who speculated that the FCC could impose a fairness doctrine solution as it did with antismoking ads if the FCC agrees with arguments that such ads may lead children to take illicit drugs.

Arthur L. Herold, attorney with Webster & Chamberlain, Washington, spoke on industry self-regulation and the antitrust laws. Trade associations must be careful, he warned, not to do anything, such as setting fees for their members, that could be construed as restraining trade. The National Association of Broadcasters code, which prohibits networks and stations from accepting ads for products not cleared by its code board, he said, could conceivably be challenged as an antitrust violation if it enforces the code with some sort of punitive action, instead of just promoting it.

Ogilvy studies TV independents as new ‘network’

Agency seeks way to brake rising national TV costs

Ogilvy & Mather Inc., New York, is encouraging the creation of a “fourth network” to counteract the escalating costs of network television.

The agency makes it clear it is not thinking of an interconnected network but one of independent stations that would serve about 60% of the country via syndication. In a report prepared by Howard Eaton, senior vice president and director of broadcasting, O & M said it is now trying to answer these questions: “What premiums are advertisers willing to pay in the short run to get 10 or more years of future price stability? Can independent stations spend more money to acquire programs (barter is the same as spending), substantially increase existing audience levels and be more profitable? Can we find programs which can be produced at budget levels less than network but good enough to raise independent station audiences?”

Ogilvy said the major advantage of a “fourth network” would be “the brake on rising costs.” The disadvantages: short-term, cost-per-thousand premium and further audience segmentation, which might make it harder to deliver broad reach. Ogilvy reports it will decide by next Feb. 1 if its proposal is feasible and has set a target airdate of next September—if the project does get off the ground.

Real-dollar C-P-M’s fell in decade, NBC-TV’s chief says

Agency workshop also hears call for more creativity

Television prices were defended staunchly last week by Robert T. Howard, president of NBC-TV, before an audience representing the nation’s leading advertising agencies.

He told a closed workshop panel of Eastern region of the American Association of Advertising Agencies of New York last week that television advertising had been “underpriced for a very long time.” He claimed the recent increases in network TV rates “are far less than what they seem to be in current dollars.” He added that “if we allow for inflation and express prices in constant dollars, cost-per-thousand dollars are lower than a decade ago.”

To a workshop observation that television is too expensive for the small and new advertiser, Mr. Howard responded: “At NBC we don’t see this. We find that, by providing a broad schedule base, NBC has continued to accommodate the fringe advertiser.”

About 15 to 20 smaller advertisers make their initial network purchases on NBC-TV each year, he said, and they buy on such early-morning and late-night shows as Today, Tonight, Tomorrow, The Midnight Special, NBC’s Saturday Night and Weekend.

In another session devoted to advertising in today’s marketing environment, John E. Bergin, executive vice president and creative director of SC&B Inc., New York, deplored the absence of “personal feeling” in so much of today’s TV and radio commercials and print advertisements. To sell on radio, television or print, he said, “the copywriter must include his personality, must provide a personal touch to create a personal transaction between the creative person (the seller) and the consumer (the buyer).”

In a similar vein, Nadeen Peterson, senior vice president and creative director of Norman, Craig & Kummel, New York, cast a jaundiced eye at much of today’s broadcast and print copy, claiming it is shaped by directives from the agency’s or client’s legal and research and development departments. She blamed mass skepticism and stronger government regulations as factors contributing to what she called the “legal claim craze,” and asked, “Where’s all the fire and the spirit?”

David B. McCall, chairman and president of McCaffrey & McCall Inc., New York, pointed to the growing professionalism of the advertiser as the most significant development in the recent marketing environment. He noted that clients have upgraded their own marketing departments and said they are demanding that agencies produce “brilliant commercials and advertisements that follow sound advertising strategies.” As one who rose through the creative side of the agency, Mr. McCall said he was “prejudiced” but convinced that the “most brilliant advertising” comes from agencies headed by a creative person.

Dingell wants GAO to take look into Ad Council campaigns for the government

Innovation and improvement.
The TK-46 includes the latest version of high efficiency prism optics for superior low-light pictures; the comb filter and coring that set a new standard for signal-to-noise ratio; and Chromacomp, RCA’s colorimetry adjustment. All standard.

Chromacomp allows colorimetry adjustment without affecting picture luminance. Hue and saturation of primary colors may be changed without altering grey scale balance. Matching to other cameras is simple.
Such innovations made the TK-44 and 44A the best-selling TV cameras. And further developments made sales leaders of their successors.

Age of the automatics.
The TK-44B and TK-45 launched the automatic TV camera age. Automatics that simplify or eliminate subjective operator judgments were introduced on these cameras. They include automatic iris, operated by reflected light levels; automatic white balance and automatic black balance; automatic centering control.

Another notable development was internal bias light. It minimizes lag and permits camera operation with as few as five foot-candles of incident light.

Scene Contrast Compression gave users another important benefit. With this control, the cameraman can pull details out of shadow areas (in sports arenas, for instance) without a shift in color balance. He can pan into bright light without overexposure, too.

These proved performance advantages are also yours on the TK-46.

What's new on the TK-46?
Better signal-to-noise ratio, for one thing. In low light, a new, advanced preamp design improved signal-to-noise ratio by 3 dB—especially useful in multiple-generation tape production.

Also new for the TK-46 is a tiltable viewfinder with an 8” diagonal screen. The cameraman can hold a horizontal view while tilting the camera through a 30° arc.

Simultaneous in- and out-of-band contours with combing and coring are standard on the TK-46. Our chart will show you all the advantages and how long they have been performance proved. A look at the TK-46 will show how well it performs today, and for many tomorrows.

The one camera truly worth looking into.
If you are planning to invest in a quality TV camera, look into the TK-46 soon. You'll find it's the one state-of-the-art camera with outstanding proof of performance behind its many features.

To see what all the TK-46 excitement is about, see your RCA Representative.
Department's "Smoky the Bear" program, the Commerce Department's free entertainment campaign and the White House's 1974 WIN promotion, was prompted by allegations of misdealings by the Ad Council in its handling of the "Don't Be Fuelish" campaign for the Federal Energy Administration. The campaign included television spots narrated by celebrities such as George C. Scott, promoting energy conservation.

Congressman Dingell, chairman of the House Energy and Power Subcommittee, said the subcommittee has uncovered evidence of possible fraudulent and exorbitant claims against the FEIA in a $602,000 contract with the Ad Council. A memorandum by Lee James, former FEIA associate administrator, estimated that between $100,000 and $200,000 had been wasted in the contract, which lapsed last year.

"Some of the claims submitted under this contract were outrageous," Representative Dingell said last week. "Subcommittee staff and I mean big New York advertising agencies—billed the government for such expenses as tuxedo rentals, liquor, lunches and dinners for advertising executives, cleaning, drugs and unauthorized first-class air travel. There also is mention in an FEIA memo of evidence of double billing.

A spokesman for the Ad Council said last week the charges by Mr. Dingell are "baloney." There might be some "technical discrepancies of a minor nature" in the billing, but nothing more, said Benjamin Greenburg, an information staffer of the Ad Council. He also objected to the subcommittee's report that the "Don't Be Fuelish" campaign contract was canceled after FEIA officials accused the council of "noncooperation and gross mismanagement." The parting was friendly, Mr. Greenburg said.

Representative Dingell said the council has done "some good work over the years," but that "we aren't going to allow a few greedy, ad executives carte blanche to bill the government for their liquor and cleaning bills."

The congressman asked GAO to obtain substantiation for major expenses by the council and subcontracts, and to investigate questionable expenses on the "Don't Be Fuelish" contract such as a drug bill, a $203 dinner bill and liquor bills, and to "determine what steps can be taken in the future to ensure tighter government control over Advertising Council expenses. In this regard no out-of-town trip or other major expense should be undertaken without advance approval of the contracting agency."

Don't be afraid—McCann

Spot TV's escalating rates have concerned advertisers this fall, but Frank McCann, president of Katz TV Continental, has urged broadcasters to be "rate leaders" in their markets. He told an audience at the Georgia Association of Broadcasters that TV stations have been "timid" in their pricing policies in the past. Mr. McCann pointed out that TV's cost-per-thousand actually had declined during the inflationary period between 1970 and 1975. To achieve rate leadership, he said, TV stations must develop and support a sales policy based on a bullish rate structure, an aggressive sales policy and a planned control of inventory.

Going national. First national organization of television commercial producers has been formed with the consolidation of 27-member New York office of Association of Independent Commercial Producers with new 38-member Los Angeles office of AICP. Within 30 to 60 days, AICP said, Chicago office will be opened, followed by branches in San Francisco, Dallas, Miami and Atlanta.

Hands off. FCC has told AFL-CIO United Farm Workers of America that FCC could not block California radio and television ads against unionization. The FCC said the network would allow farm workers to decide by secret ballot which union, if any, they want, because FCC can't censure broadcast matter. FCC said it couldn't give impression it was attempting to judge truth or falsity of material being broadcast, but told UFW proper procedure on filing fairness complaint.

Partners. John L. Paige, who resigned last July as vice president, marketing, BiC Pen Corp., Milford, Conn., has teamed with Steve Rubelman to form marketing-communications firm, Rubelman & Paige, Milford. Mr. Paige will be president of company and Mr. Rubelman, who has headed his own advertising-promotion agency, will be executive vice president and creative head.

Changing names. Bo Bernstein & Co., advertising agency, is now LeBeau, Leicht & Santangini Inc. Joseph M. (Bo) Bernstein retired from agency, shortly followed by retirement of his brothers, Harry and Victor. Raymond J. Leicht was appointed executive vice president and creative director, and Raymond A. Santangini was named senior vice president and executive art director. G. Russell LeBeau is president of company. Messrs. LeBeau, Leicht and Santangini have assumed ownership of agency. New headquarters are at 1240 Pautucket Avenue, Rumford, R.I. 02916.

Ready to roll: Court rules Nixon tapes should be made available to all

Network officials are happy over decision but are withholding plans to broadcast recordings until they are listened to; Warner is ready to release two-record set of the tapes

Major media groups are a step closer to prying loose for broadcast the White House tapes that played a crucial role in the Watergate coverup trial of top aides of the Nixon administration and in the destruction of the administration itself.

The U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington last week, in a 2-to-1 decision, overruled District Judge John Sirica's decision that the tapes are not to be made available to the public until after the appeals of former Attorney General John Mitchell and former White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman from their convictions are decided.

But Judge David Bazelon, writing for the court majority, said there is little danger that release of the tapes—scripts of which have already been made public—could prejudice the appeals rights of the defendants. He also said the public has a common-law right to inspect and copy the tapes.

The decision was a victory for the three commercial network companies, the Public Broadcasting System, the Radio Television News Directors Association and Warner Communications Inc., which had sued for release of the material.

The tapes should prove popular, although their contents are well known. They include the so-called "smoking gun" tape of June 23, 1972, on which President Nixon is heard approving an effort to halt the FBI's investigation of the Watergate break-in, which had occurred six days earlier. Another involved is the one on which former White House Counsel John Dean, on March 21, 1973, is heard to speak of a cancer on the Presidency.

Judge Bazelon said there is a significant difference between reading a transcript and listening to the tapes: "It is conceded that one who listens to the tapes—the inflections, pauses, emphasis and the like—will be better able to understand the conversations than one who only reads the written transcripts that already have been published."

Release of the tapes has been opposed by Mr. Nixon's lawyers. One of them, Herbert Miller, said the ruling will be appealed. Effect of the decision, he said in a statement, "is to permit the commercial
One of a series of reports on the first hundred years of the telephone.

What's next, Professor Bell?

"The greatest invention I have ever made; greater than the telephone." That's how Alexander Graham Bell rated his photophone, patented four years after the telephone, to transmit conversations on a beam of light. (Photophone = light-sound.) He actually demonstrated lightwave transmission of voices, but it would be nearly a century before it would become a practical reality.

The photophone was one of many ideas Bell proposed to improve the usefulness of his basic invention. Working with him on improvements were his assistants Thomas A. Watson, who received the world's first telephone call on March 10, 1876, and Charles S. Tainter. The sort of work they did would be called today "research and development".

Bell envisaged a telephone network linking the cities of the nation and eventually the whole world. But a voice could travel only a limited distance over a wire before it weakened and became inaudible. So the first phones depended heavily on lung power. It is no coincidence that we speak of telephone "calls", or that the word "hello", the standard greeting in phone conversations, is kin to "holler".

For years many people looked for a way to make a voice reach from coast to coast, including engineers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company (the parent company of the Bell System), and its manufacturing and supply arm, the Western Electric Company. Some telephone people were much interested by a paper read to the American Institute of Electrical Engineers on October 20, 1906, by Dr. Lee de Forest. The paper described de Forest's new "audion" tube, a version of the vacuum tube used at that time in radio receiving sets. Basic theory told de Forest that his invention should detect and amplify tiny electric currents, such as those coming over the telephone.
wire. But his early models failed at amplification. He continued working on his own. And telephone engineers pursued other solutions.

By 1912 de Forest was ready to demonstrate an improved audion that did operate as an amplifier, although imperfectly. In the group of telephone people assembled for one of de Forest's demonstrations was Harold D. Arnold, 29, a brilliant physicist hired the year before. Arnold identified at once the audion's major problem: the vacuum pump de Forest was using left too much air inside the tube, with the result that its performance was erratic and unpredictable. As a consequence of financial support by AT&T of the Bell System's research and development program, Arnold could obtain the newest pumping equipment and achieve a much higher vacuum, and within a year he had the amplifier needed. AT&T and Western Electric engineers made further circuit changes needed for telephony, AT&T management arranged for manufacture under de Forest's basic patent, and the amplifier went into production. On January 25, 1915, Bell in New York repeated to Watson in San Francisco his famous words, “Mr. Watson, come here. I want to see you.”

As the telecommunications industry grew, the vacuum tube was improved many times, but by the 1940s it was reaching its inherent limitations. Scientists at Bell Laboratories saw promise in a class of materials called semiconductors. From their carefully thought-out search came the discovery in 1947 of the transistor effect—the amplification and control of the flow of electrons in a solid material. Again the enormous problems of putting the discovery into practical form were far more quickly and expertly solved by collaboration between people at Bell Labs and Western Electric than could ever have been the case otherwise.

The story of the search for ways to strengthen telephone voices shows, in a rather simple way, many of the elements of the Bell System's research and development effort as it is carried on today: A perceived need in telephone operations. Corporate management that emphasizes service improvement. A commitment to exploration in relevant areas of basic science. A development effort, adequately funded, to move from discovery to practical use. Free exchange of information among people in research, development and manufacturing. And finally use of the discovery in equipment or a product to meet the need originally perceived. That final stage is what gives a laboratory discovery the right to be truly called an “innovation”. And the expectation that applicable new knowledge will be used in the Bell System makes it possible to commit each year the millions of dollars necessary to search for it.

The amplifier story has an extra dimension, the use of innovations in many fields outside telephony. That is true of much Bell System research and development. It is corporate policy to publish new findings, to make new technology available to other companies through licensing arrangements, and to exchange technology with others. Vacuum tubes made possible radio-telephones, television broadcasting, improved phonographs and sound motion pictures. Scientists and engineers working for the Bell System made many contributions to all these innovations and the new industries that sprang from them. But the main objective of their investigations has been the improvement of the nation's telecommunications network and the myriad of services it provides.

The transistor, in its turn, gave birth to the whole new industry of solid-state electronics. It made practical such developments as the large-capacity computer for data processing, high-speed transmission of data between computers, space travel and communications via space satellites. Most important for the ordinary telephone user, the transistor made possible a new generation of switching machines for routing calls to their destinations—machines controlled by instructions stored in changeable memories. These electronic switching systems, now being installed, are many times faster than the best electromechanical systems. They provide enormously increased capacity and flexibility to meet the growth needs of the 1980s.

It is characteristic of a technologically oriented industry that technology must be prepared in anticipation of needs. The search requires a huge investment, both of time and money. And success depends on careful planning and close coordination of effort, in a process that runs from basic scientific exploration through fundamental development work, specific design, manufacturing capability, distribution and delivery to the ultimate consumer. For many industries, including telecommunications, the process also includes activities in maintenance, servicing and operation.

In the Bell System, that process involves twenty-three regional operating companies, plus Bell Labs, Western Electric and the Long Lines Department. All these parts share one goal: to provide telecommunications services at the lowest possible cost to everyone.

Such cooperation produces results.
According to the June 28, 1976, issue of Business Week:

By almost any measure, Bell Labs has contributed more to the telecommunications industry and more to the U.S. economy than any other research establishment....A major part of Bell Labs' charter is to keep well ahead in technology so that no significant development applicable to telecommunications will be unavailable to the Bell System. The bargaining power made available through extensive patent holdings gives AT&T ready access to the inventions of others when the company needs them.

Since 1925, the people at Bell Labs and Western Electric have received more than 24,000 U.S. patents, which have been made widely available to all of U.S. industry and the world.

Bell System research and development work is well underway on new communications technologies to meet the needs of telephone service in the future. For example, Bell scientists and engineers are now working on a practical way to use lightwaves for communications. They have already developed pinpoint light sources—light-emitting diodes, and lasers no larger than a grain of sand. (Both projects benefited from earlier Bell research on semiconductors.) To carry light around corners, or under city streets, they are using tiny strands of ultra-transparent glass called “lightguides.” Right now an experimental lightwave communications system is being tested by Bell Labs and Western Electric engineers in Atlanta. Light and glass may one day join electricity and copper wire in the nationwide telecommunications network, and we may in fact “talk by light”. Those are Alexander Graham Bell’s words, describing his photophone.

One Bell System. It works.
exploitation of recordings of presidential conversations subpoenaed for use in a criminal trial.

The Nixon attorneys had argued that release of the tapes would constitute an invasion of the privacy of the former president and of those others whose voices are on the tapes. However, Judge Bazelon said the embarrassment Mr. Nixon feels "is not republication of highly personal matters. Rather, we deal with conversations between business associates admitted into evidence as 'proof of personal misconduct.'"

This appeal makes it unlikely that the tapes will be made available for public distribution in the near future. Even after the appeal is decided—assuming the decision is upheld by the Supreme Court—the procedures for making the tapes available would, under the appeals court's ruling, be determined by Judge Sirica in a hearing with the parties.

Judge Bazelon, in his opinion, said the distribution should be "prompt, and on an equal basis to all persons desiring copies." He also said that neither the court nor any agent it appoints "should profit from the public's exercise of its commonlaw right."

Joining Judge Bazelon in the opinion was District Judge Robert Mehrije of Virginia, who was sitting by designation. The dissent was by Judge George MacKinnon, who agreed with Judge Sirica that release of the tapes should await conclusion of the appeals taken by the co-defendants in the cover-up trial.

John Salisbury, president of RTNDA, said the association "is gratified" that the public "may at long last have the opportunity to hear the White House tapes... It has always seemed to us a severe limitation on free reporting to force broadcast newsmen to settle for indirect accounts of what those tapes contained when it was technically possible for the public to hear for itself the actual voices of Mr. Nixon and his associates with all the nuances."

A spokesman for PBS expressed "delight" at the court's decision, but none of the networks was in a position to discuss plans for using the tapes.

An NBC official said the network would not map out plans until after obtaining copies of the tapes. But he cited two problems already troubling NBC—the sound quality, which may be too indistinct for reproduction on radio, and the famous Nixon expletives (should they be edited out or would the FCC, in the interest of historical completeness, reject complaints about them?)

Officials at ABC and CBS said they would withhold comment on their plans pending a study of the court's opinion by their lawyers.

Warner Communications, however, seemed ready to roll. It issued a statement announcing its plans to distribute two sets of recorded tape on Warner Bros. Records. One set, for the general public, would consist of two records "of the most important passages, with an accompanying narrative text." The complete 22 hours of recordings of the tapes played during the trial, the statement added, will be made available to schools, libraries and the general public at no profit.

Senate staff report argues for rights of journalists in covering trials

Prior restraint, citations for contempt impinge on First Amendment, says Tunney unit

The staff of Senator John Tunney's (D-Calif.) Judiciary Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights says that prior restraints on the press "are never justified in the trial context" and that reporters should never be cited for contempt for refusing to disclose sources of information about a trial.

In a report released last week, the subcommittee staff said, "no member of the press should be held in contempt for refusing to disclose the identity of persons who have transmitted information prohibited under a restrictive order or for refusing to disclose the content of such information. To hold reporters responsible in such matters would be to undermine severely their right to gather and report the news."

The subcommittee staff is convinced that the advantages of unfettered trial coverage outweigh any disadvantages.

Among the advantages it cited: The defendant in a trial is protected from intimidation by the prosecution; the public is exposed to the workings of the criminal justice system; those who would commit crimes might be deterred, and those who want to change the system can gather information by watching.

The disadvantage, mainly that the press' reporting might be excessive, inaccurate, unfair or distressing, is a problem for the press to remedy in the staff's opinion, not for the courts. "Prior restraints are too harsh a remedy, their mark too indelible for them to be appropriate here," the report says. "In this regard, the subcommittee supports self-policing by the press itself rather than intervention by a trial judge."

All this is preface to a report recommending legislation restricting courts' authority to close judicial proceedings and to limit the conversation of trial participants.

Occasionally, the staff concedes, the need arises to restrict the speech of participants in a trial. This is to protect the fair trial rights of the accused. But authority to invoke restrictive orders on participants should be severely limited; such orders pose problems to the participants' First Amendment liberties and also—because they have the tendency to cut the flow of information to the press—have the practical effect of prior restraint.

The standard proposed by the staff for judges to use before issuing restrictive orders is threefold and cumulative: before restricting the speech of a trial participant, the judge must find that prejudicial publicity will reach the jury and will create an impermissible level of prejudice and that alternative judicial procedures will not suffice.

The proposal also sets a standard for closing judicial proceedings and keeping documents secret: The judge must find that failure to do so would injure the fair trial rights of the defendant and that alternatives would not suffice.

In both cases, notice must be given of a hearing on any motion to issue a restrictive order or close a proceeding; the judge must state on the record the reasons for imposing secrecy; procedures must be made available for appealing the order, and the press must be granted standing to challenge such an order.

CBS, NBC are uneasy over UNESCO proposal

Salant says network is 'unalterably opposed' to declaration of 'use' of media; Mulholland goes to Africa to observe meeting

CBS and NBC have begun involving themselves in efforts to modify if not oppose a draft "Declaration of Fundamental Principals Governing the Use of the Mass Media" now being debated at the General Conference of UNESCO in Nairobi, Kenya. The draft declaration, being pushed by Communist and third-world nations, says that "states are responsible for activities in the international sphere of all mass media under their control." And the U.S. and countries in Western Europe and Latin America see its adoption as giving the color of moral authority to government control of news (BROADCASTING, Oct. 25).

Richard S. Salant, president of CBS News, put the division on record as "unalterably opposed" to the draft resolution. In a letter to Sarah Goddard Power, chairman of the U.S. National Commission for UNESCO, he said that the proposal is "fundamentally so misconceived in its principles that it is incurable by alteration of language."

NBC will have an observer at the conference. Robert Mulholland, executive vice president of NBC News, will spend a week in Nairobi, beginning after the election, conferring with broadcast industry representatives who are in attendance as well as members of U.S. delegation, and then will report back to Richard Wald, NBC News president.

Mr. Wald, who is a vice chairman of the American Committee of the International Press Institute, said he will relay Mr. Mulholland's observations to other members of that committee. "We will attempt to work out a plan of action that does not block us from coverage of the news throughout the world," Mr. Wald said last week.

Mr. Salant, in his letter, did not appear sanguine about any satisfactory resolution of the dispute. If there is to be an official U.N. provision for a free press throughout the world, "there can be no qualifications," he said. He added that nothing less than the First Amendment's absolute bar to abridgement of the freedom of the press provides the hope—if not the guarantee—of achieving such a press.

While it may not be realistic to expect the UNESCO conferences to adopt an equivalent of the First Amendment, he said, "we do not believe that the United States, or any U.S. news organization, can settle for less nor indicate in any way that it approves, or will be bound by, anything less."

CBS and NBC are the only major broadcast entities involving themselves in the UNESCO issue. ABC has indicated it believes that, as a practical matter, there is no point in attempting to defeat a resolution supported by a bloc of nations that constitutes a majority of UNESCO and that, in any case, there is at present a degree of censorship in many third-world and Communist countries. The National Association of Broadcasters has not indicated much interest in the matter.

Besides the official delegations of Western countries, spokesmen for a number of media groups in the U.S., Europe, and Latin America are in Nairobi to lobby against the draft resolution.

But in Nairobi, UNESCO's director general, Amdou Mahtar M'Bow, of Senegal, said the allegations that the organization has aided efforts to curb press freedom are absurd. "We do not propose nationalization of the mass media," he said in a marathon report of the conference.

A debate between candidates for the Senate seat vacated by retiring Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) was held last week in Pittsburgh, but only after restrictions on questions a panel of local broadcast newsmen could ask Congressmen William Green (D) and John Hines (R) were lifted.

Ground rules originally supplied by the sponsor of the debate, the Pittsburgh Radio and TV Club, stated that the four questioner-panelists—Adam Lynch of WICF-TV, Paul Long of WTAE-TV, Andy Gassmeyer of KDKA-TV and John Eid of WWSW(AM)—were requested to draw their questions from four subject areas: ethics in government, the economy, defense and foreign policy, and urban problems. The two candidates also insisted that they not be asked about Gulf Oil campaign contributions or machine politics of Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo.

But Adam Lynch and his news department balked at the restrictions, and two days before the debate was held, the restrictions were removed.

The confrontation took place at the Pittsburgh Press Club. It was not televised, but highlights were carried by local stations on their news programs.

Radio-TV gets share of NPC reporting honors

Eight broadcast winners were among the Fourth Estate Awards presented Oct. 21 by the National Press Club, Washington.

Byron Harris, reporter at WFAA-TV Dallas, won first place in the television station consumer reporting category for his reports on the condition of hamburger meat in the Dallas area. Donna Deener, WTAE-TV Pittsburgh, won second place in that category and Patrick Collins, WTOP-TV Washington, received an honorable mention.

James L. Mitchell, KOV(TV) Stockton (Sacramento), Calif., won first place for continuing consumer news reporting at an individual television station. John Stossel, WCBS-TV New York, received an honorable mention in the category, and Lea Thompson, WRC-TV Washington, was given an honorable mention.

The winner for consumer reporting on radio was Linda Satter, WINS(AM) New York.

First place among the television networks went to ABC.

Agronsky stood up

Martin Agronsky's premiere program for Public Broadcasting System's Agronsky at Large suffered a fatal case of presidential no-show. President Ford had been committed for the program, which was to have been broadcast Friday. But presidential campaign plans intruded. The President left on Saturday, Oct. 23, a day before Mr. Agronsky was to tape an interview with him at the White House, and efforts by the producer, John Larkin, to arrange an interview anywhere on the campaign trail were fruitless. Mr. Agronsky and Mr. Larkin reluctantly decided on Monday they had run out of time, as well as hope, and canceled the premiere.

For a time, Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter was a possibility for the first program. He as well as the President had been invited. The Carter campaign declined on Oct. 22, but at that point, the President was still regarded as a sure thing.

The new premiere date for the program is Nov. 5. And the guests—the present vice presidential candidates, Senator Walter Mondale (D-Minn.) and Senator Bob Dole (R-Kan.). Of course, by time the program is seen, one will be the Vice President-elect, while the other will be preparing to resume his career in the Senate.

WMCA for Carter-Mondale; equal-time barrage started

WMCA(AM) New York became last week what its president, R. Peter Straus, said he believed was the first U.S. station to endorse a candidate in the current presidential campaign. It came out editorially for the Carter-Mondale ticket. That was last Monday, and by Wednesday the station had already scheduled and was running replies on behalf of the Ford-Dole ticket and 12 other presidential slates. The endorsement editorial was broadcast four times, so such reply was getting four runs. However, the endorsement's plays were split up: two were carried on the first day and the other two were saved for yesterday (Oct. 31).

Mr. Straus said that Carter campaign officials told him WMCA was the first station to endorse their candidate on the air, and that the White House reported it knew of no such endorsements of Mr. Ford. WMCA was widely credited as the first station to give an editorial endorsement to any presidential candidate when, in 1960,

ANPA study finds no newspaper-TV credibility gap

A study by the American Newspaper Publishers Association concludes that the public thinks news on both television and newspapers is credible, but sometimes for different reasons.

The same general description of news fits both media, according to the findings of Eugene F. Shaw, associate professor of communications and journalism at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. People see the news of both as "true, accurate and objective; complete, substantial and in adequate amounts; and, generally, informative and understandable, specific and first-hand."

Some traits, however, are not shared: Television is considered faster than newspapers; local newspapers are considered more public-spirited than local TV stations; newspaper content is judged fuller and more complete than TV's; broadcastings presentation is more interesting and dramatic, yet pessimistic, television's personnel are considered more expert, informed and energetic.

These differences, however, do not always indicate what makes for credibility. For example, the study says, "credibility is shown to be dependent in part, on how slow, not fast, the medium is regarded. And it is the dramatic news presentation of newspapers, but the undramatic television treatment, that enhances the credibility of print and broadcast media respectively."

Presumably, broadcast managers and newspaper publishers could use the study's findings to improve news credibility. But Mr. Shaw notes that despite differences between broadcast and print factors that make for credibility, broadcast stations in any event would probably have more difficulty improving their credibility ratings than newspapers. That is particularly true of the network affiliate which "is closely associated in the public's mind with the network with which it is identified. ... Network programming throughout the day seems to have an impact on how the local channel is perceived as a news disseminator. A newspaper neither enjoys nor suffers such constraints and its credibility is almost exclusively controlled locally."

The study was based on interviews with 278 nonstudent households in Chapel Hill, N.C. It was funded by ANPA's News Research Center.

CBS-TV readies reinforcements for prime time

Last spring, network began restaffing program development on the West Coast and new product is beginning to come off the line for '77 and beyond

Eight months ago, the CBS Television Network's West Coast development operation rested primarily on the shoulders of one man—Franklin Barton, vice president for program development. He was directly involved in every Hollywood series project, from sitcoms and cop shows to variety hours and family dramas.

We never worried about that much development in the past because we always needed fewer replacements" than ABC and NBC, says Steve Mills, CBS's new vice president for program production in Hollywood. CBS, of course, had basked in the glow of an almost unbroken string of first-place finishes in prime time throughout the fifties and the sixties and the first five years of the seventies.

But upstart ABC, under the guidance of CBS's former vice president for programs, Fred Silverman, turned things around and, beginning in January of this year, started to confront CBS with the toughest prime-time challenge in its history (ABC actually won the Nielsen race for the full prime-time year, September 1975 to September 1976, with a 17.3 rating to CBS's 17.8 rating to CBS's 17.3 rating and NBC's 16.2 rating.)

By last April, CBS's management knew that its whole West Coast development set-up would have to be changed (Frank Barton had resigned), so it hired William Self, a former head of production at 20th Century-Fox Television, as vice president, programs, to begin gearing up for second-season 1977 and beyond.

CBS's 1976-77 prime-time schedule has already begun springing more leaks than that of ABC or NBC, and CBS sources acknowledge that they were forced to schedule certain marginal returning shows as Doc, The Blue Knight, Tony Orlando and Dawn, and Barnaby Jones and such weak new shows as Ball Four and Spencer's Pilots because there was simply nothing better in the development hopper to replace them with.

Doc, The Blue Knight and Ball Four were canceled late last month, and these sources say it's just a matter of time before Spencer's Pilots and Tony Orlando and Dawn get their pink slips. But rather than rush the series now in development that are just beginning to jell onto the air quickly in November, CBS has decided to mark time with another two-hour movie night (Wednesday, 9-11 p.m., NYT, added to The CBS Friday Movies, also 9-11
DANIEL D. VILLANUEVA, General Manager of KMEX, Channel 34, Los Angeles, will serve as moderator for a special feature of DESTINO 76: the presentation of opposing platform viewpoints between Democratic Mayor of Miami Maurice Ferre and Republican William Orozco of California.

JACOBO ZABLUDOVSKY, News Director of Televisa, the Mexican television network, is well known to U.S. Spanish-speaking audiences through his news show “24 HORAS,” televised five nights a week via satellite on SIN television stations. Zabludovsky will offer commentary and analysis of the effect of the election results on Latin American relationships.

GUILLERMO RESTREPO, with seven years experience as News Director of WXTV, Channel 41, New York, has won both the PEABODY and GOLDEN MIKE awards. Restrepo will be News Director and Anchorman of DESTINO 76. Restrepo covered both 1972 political conventions in Miami, the 1972 Partido de la Raza Unida Convention in El Paso, Texas, and the 1976 conventions in Kansas City and New York City.

TOMAS REGALADO, News Director of WLTV, Channel 23, Miami, will cover Congressional races in the U.S. House of Representatives, with special emphasis on Hispanic candidates of particular interest to Latin voters.

ENRIQUE GRATAS, News Director of KDTV, Channel 60, San Francisco, will cover the 33 Senate races, offering his expert commentary on those candidates who have special relevance to U.S. Hispanics.

Live, Coast-to-Coast, Spanish Election Coverage by Satellite on SIN TV Network

For the first time in U.S. Television History, SIN, the U.S. Spanish Television Network, will transmit live satellite, coast-to-coast coverage of the U.S. General Elections.

SIN coverage will concentrate on contests and issues of special interest to 10 million Spanish-speaking Americans. Exclusive in-depth interviews... incisive analyses of issues... thorough discussions of propositions... all information translated into the U.S. Hispanic's daily existence, by a group of expert reporters gathered especially for DESTINO 76.
Hopes are resting. CBS-TV's Hollywood program-development team, which the network has charged with replenishing its depleted program stores includes (I-r): Paul Monash, vice president, programs, motion pictures for television and miniseries; Richard Berger, vice president, drama program development; Lea Stalmaster, vice president, talent and casting; Andrew Siegel, vice president, comedy program development; William Self, vice president, programs; Michael Gursey, vice president, variety programming, and Steve Mills, vice president, programs.

p.m.), according to Mr. Self.

But with the way development has grown under Mr. Self, CBS may be ready to mount a strong counterchallenge to ABC in the second season.

Under the aegis of Robert Wussler, the president of CBS-TV, Mr. Self has put separate vice presidents in charge of drama (Richard Berger, who joined CBS on May 21 from a top production job at 20th Century-Fox Television), of comedy (Andrew Siegel, who also joined on May 21 from a similar post at ABC-TV), of variety (Michael Gursey, who joined on Aug. 6 from a top management position at International Creative Management) and of movies-for-television and miniseries (Paul Monash, who joined on Oct. 20 from a long career as a movie and TV producer/writer). In addition, Mr. Self hired Lea Stalmaster as vice president of talent and casting and promoted Steve Mills to the job of vice president, program production.

In terms of sheer numbers of executive personnel, Mr. Self says there are at least twice as many people working in development as there were under Franklin Barton.

And the properties are beginning to roll off the line. Mr. Berger, the vice president of drama-program development, says CBS is committed to two 60-minute series, Quinn Martin's The Hunter and Warner Bros.'s Code R. The Hunter, about a male-female espionage duo, is "glamorous and slick and good-looking, with two attractive leads," says Mr. Berger. "It will be pure escapism, set in and around country clubs rather than back alleys," adds Mr. Self. The show will be geared somewhat to the audience that has made ABC's Charlie's Angels the new-show hit of the season.

Code R is fashioned along the lines of NBC's Saturday-night Emergency, focusing, as Mr. Berger puts it, on "land, sea and air rescue units" that operate from an island vacation spot off the West Coast.

Two other 60-minute melodramas with second-season potential, Mr. Berger says, are Quinn Martin's Winner Takes All, a "stylish, cerebral" tongue-in-cheek mystery modelled on the movie "The Thomas Crown Affair," and 20th Century-Fox's Nashville 99, a hard-action cop show that Mr. Berger describes as "a Starsky and Hutch with rural appeal."

CBS has six sitcom projects on the docket. It is committed to one of them for second season and has made pilots of the other five, according to CBS's vice president for comedy-program development, Andrew Siegel.

The commitment is to a new Norman Lear offering called A Year at the Top, which Mr. Siegel describes as "a fantasy-type comedy loaded with flamboyant characters." The premise: three middle-aged show-business hangers-on sell their souls to the devil for one year of gold-record celebrityhood.

The five pilots, according to Mr. Siegel:

Under One Roof, a Paramount Television production, starring Maureen Stapleton as the owner of a huge house who rents out the rooms to a passel of crackbrained boarders;

Bob Klein's Comedy Patrol, another Paramount Television half-hour, with Bud Austin as executive producer, featuring hip, contemporary sketches, blackouts, satirical bits, etc.;

The Last Markowitz, a third Paramount comedy, about a somewhat awkward young man trying to find a job and a girl in New York City; Mr. Berger, the vice president; Dick and Jane (tentative title), an old-fashioned sort of romantic comedy, produced by Paul Junger Witt, Tony Thomas and Susan Harris in association with 20th Century-Fox Television; and

Stop the Presses, a gang comedy from

Mayor Beame, who’s known to have cash-flow problems with his city, commented: “I understand that when is one of the top stations in New York and is making a lot of money. What I want to know is how you do it.”

Viacom set in the newspaper city room of a medium-sized city, which Mr. Siegel describes as “like Barney Miller, only inside of a newspaper instead of a police station.”

In the variety-show area, The Jackson Five are committed to doing a musical-comedy half-hour slated for second-season family hour, according to Michael Gursey, CBS’s vice president for variety programs. In addition, Mr. Gursey says, Marilyn McCoo and Billy Davis, who were lead vocalists for the Fifth Dimension singing group, are set for a summer-replacement variety series that could lead to a regular berth in 1978.

With this range of product for CBS to choose from, Mr. Self says he’s beginning to feel some confidence after six months on the job. He hesitates to talk about discernible trends in this mix of projects, but does say that “larger-than-life characters, escapism and pure entertainment” may be what the public will embrace in 1977, rather than street-smart cop shows like Delvecchio and Serpico (both of which were highly touted before the season began but are getting only marginal Nielsens). “These shows may be too sordid and too realistic,” Mr. Self concludes.

Week five: It’s ABC, NBC, CBS

For the fifth week in a row, ABC-TV continued in its first-place Nielsen lead, despite the fact that NBC scored the expected huge numbers on the two nights it telecast World Series games.

ABC came out of the fifth week (Oct. 18-24) with a 20.9 rating, NBC, with the World Series lift, finished a strong second (20.3 rating) and CBS was bounced back to third place, with an 18.8 rating, after climbing into second (over NBC) the week before.

In the five-week season-to-date averages, ABC has a 21.2 rating, NBC a 19.6 rating and CBS an 18.3.

Happy Days (33.0 rating, 49 share), Laverne and Shirley (31.3 rating, 44 share) and Charlie’s Angels (31.1 rating, 53 share)—all ABC series—were the three highest-rated shows of the week. In fourth place was NBC’s telecast of Thursday’s (Oct. 21) World Series game (30.5 rating, 48 share) and in fifth place was NBC’s Tuesday World Series telecast (29.8 rating, 44 share).

As usual, CBS won the third Ford-Carter debate (Friday, Oct. 22, 9:30-11 p.m., NYT) Nielsen’s, harvesting an 18.4 rating and 31 share to NBC’s 17.3 rating and 29 share and ABC’s 13.4 rating and 22 share.

Wasilewski: exclusivity should not be deleted

National Association of Broadcasters President Vincent Wasilewski has joined the Association of Maximum Service Telecasters in stating that syndicated exclusivity rules should not be deleted because of the new copyright law (BROADCASTING, Oct. 18). Responding to a presentation of Burt J. Harris, chairman of the National Cable Television Association, at the FCC’s monthly en banc meeting, Mr. Wasilewski, in a letter to FCC Chairman Richard E. Wiley, said both Congress and the FCC intended exclusivity rules to work in conjunction with the new

The safety of 3,840,600 square miles of America's coastal waters, all major ports and our inland waterways is the responsibility of a group of people that wouldn't even fill Yankee Stadium.

The Coast Guard's job is big. And growing every day. The men and women in the Coast Guard are equal to the task. But all too often the job they do goes unnoticed.

Saving lives is a tradition with the Coast Guard. It's the one thing we do that everybody knows about. Probably because the 3000 or so people we rescue every year tell that story for us. But there are other missions the Coast Guard is equally dedicated to. And performs equally well.

The Coast Guard is the watchdog of our maritime resources. We have sophisticated monitoring equipment that helps us locate oil spills and track down the offending vessels that cause them. We even get in on the clean-up from time to time. And if waterfowl and finned inhabitants of the sea could talk, our conservation efforts would be well-known worldwide.

As vessel traffic in major ports increases, so does our job in safely guiding ships out to sea and in from it. We're designing, installing and operating innovative vessel traffic systems. And with them, we're significantly improving the capability of our ports to safely accommodate growing maritime commerce—commerce necessary to fuel our nation's economy. Increased inspections of foreign and domestic vessels in our coastal waters has added yet another dimension as our responsibility for intercepting narcotics smugglers expands.

Finally, the Coast Guard will be overseeing and enforcing adherence to the new 200 mile fishery conservation zone. One more part of the good job we do.

Quietly.

We're a small service with a big service to perform, but we're not complaining.

What we really want to do is put out the good word about the Coast Guard to young people who can help us do our good work. Because we need more of them to help us do it. So the next time you hear about something new that we're doing, you may even want to pass it on yourself.

Fifteen families participate in experiment; NAB says project is unreliable

Fifteen New Milford, Conn., mothers who put their children on a month-long TV “diet” say that their children’s behavior changed, usually for the better.

The women were participating in an “experiment” sponsored by Redbook magazine, and the results are summarized in its November issue. The children’s TV viewing time was cut to one hour a day, and at the end of four weeks, their mothers concluded that there is a relationship between the children’s viewing habits and their behavior.

Most of the women said their children’s behavior improved. At first, they noted, many of the children became agitated when deprived of their accustomed TV

AFTRA criticizes CPB for committing money to foreign production

Wolff says decision to spend federal funds is an affront to artists in this country; CPB’s Quayle says Americans will be hired for filming

The American Federation of Television and Radio Artists blasted the Corporation for Public Broadcasting last week for using taxpayer’s money to help finance production in Britain while many American performers go jobless.

Sanford I. Wolff, national executive secretary of AFTRA, criticized CPB’s decision last month to commit $1.2 million of federal money to help produce a series of 36 Shakespeare plays for showing on U.S. public TV stations. He said the plans called for the BBC and Time Inc. to produce the plays over a six-year period in England, with supplemental funding coming from the Exxon Corp. and the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. CPB says the decision is tentative.

“This decision flies in the face of the terrible economic realities now confronting American artists and artisans, who cannot find work to match their talents,” Mr. Wolff said. “It is an affront to our unions which, year after year, have appealed to Congress to be generous in appropriating American taxpayers’ money to further the cause of public broadcasting.”

When questioned on the subject, Donald Quayle, CPB senior vice president and director of broadcasting, said that CPB representatives met with the BBC last week in London in an attempt to have some of the shows produced in the U.S.

That would allow the hiring of American production companies. The BBC earlier had said it would hire Americans to work there, but only top directors and actors.

He also said that $200,000 a year for six years was actually a small price to pay. Ernie Lotito, CPB director of communications, said that the overall cost is estimated at $14 million. The full American share is about $3.6 million.

Mr. Lotito said that CPB has committed $8.9 million for domestic television this year, with about $3 million for domestic drama. Next year he said both commitments will be higher. He also said that CPB will have 15% of the shows’ rights.
Commercial TV gets going-over in PBS special

Creative types complain of network editing, timidity

A one-hour documentary about commercial television, You Should See What You’re Missing, concludes that “the full creative potential of the medium” is unrealized. Produced for the Public Broadcasting Service by noncommercial WTTW(TV) Chicago, the program includes interviews with 10 writers, editors, producers and directors disenchanted with the commercial networks and offers footage from their shows (some of which was said to have been barred from network broadcast). The program will be fed on PBS Nov. 26, 9-10 p.m.

Among those interviewed are Larry Gelbart, co-producer/writer of CBS’s M*A*S*H; Susan Harris, creator/writer of Fay (canceled by NBC-TV after three weeks); Abby Mann, creator/writer of NBC’s Medical Story (which, he says, “became the antithesis of the reasons I wrote it”); David Rintels, president of the Writers Guild of America, West; Danny Arnold, executive producer of ABC’s Barney Miller (“If you do something that everybody likes, of necessity you abdicate all points of view, you eliminate all controversy, and what you wind up with is a kind of innocuous pablum”), and Joseph Wambaugh, novelist and story consultant on NBC’s Police Story (which he disavowed in its pilot stage for what he thought was excessive violence). Byron Paul, producer of The Dick Van Dyke Show, narrates one film clip from perhaps the best-known episode to be banned from network air, in which the young daughter walks in on the husband and wife making love.

A notice at the end of the documentary says program executives of the three networks declined to appear on the program.

Six months ago, the inner workings of public television were examined in a CBS News special, CBS Reports: Inside Public Television, (Broadcasting, April 19), depicting PBS and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting as vulnerable to outside pressure and ridden by internal conflicts.

Protests hit CBS-TV

‘Hawaii Five-O’ episode killed by four affiliates after conflict-of-reference issue is raised by nuclear group;

Gays’ protest against ‘Kojak’ fails

Two CBS-TV shows ran into special-interest trouble late last month—Hawaii Five-O from pro-nuclear power groups and Kojak from a homosexual faction.

Four CBS affiliates refused to carry the Thursday, Oct. 21, episode of Hawaii Five-O (10 p.m., NYT) because it dealt with the theft of plutonium by terrorists. Three of the four stations—KOIN-TV Portland, KOB1(TV) Medford and KONTV Tucson—killed the episode in Oregon and the fourth, KIRO-TV Seattle, is in Washington, two of the six states that are asking voters tomorrow (Nov. 2) whether nuclear-power plants should continue to be built in those states. Pro-nuclear-power groups in the four markets convinced the CBS affiliates that Five-O’s episode could prejudice voters against their position because it perpetuates myths about radiation and plutonium.

The New York-based National Gay Task Force sent a formal letter to every one of CBS’s affiliates requesting that they “refuse to run” the Sunday, Oct. 24, episode of Kojak (9-10 p.m. NYT) because its story line “will reinforce the stereotyped notions of homosexual men and persons who are molesters of children.” The letter fell on deaf ears, though. According to CBS’s affiliate-relations department, not one station bumped the Kojak episode.

100-plus TV outlets renege on ‘Gospel’

Oct. 24 segment of series bypassed after flap over Falwell criticism of Jimmy Carter and possible involvement in personal-attack case

More than 100 television stations that normally carry The Old Time Gospel Hour apparently decided last week that discretion was the better part of valor, and preempted the Oct. 24 program. That was the program in which the Rev. Jerry Falwell, the program’s host, criticized Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter for giving an interview to Playboy magazine and for what he said in it (Broadcasting, Oct. 18, et seq.)

Carter campaign aides in several states, with the advance approval of Carter headquarters in Atlanta, warned many of the 260 stations carrying the Gospel Hour that the discussion might constitute a personal attack under the FCC’s fairness doctrine, one that would obligate them to provide Mr. Carter with a transcript of the program and an offer of time for reply.

Almost immediately, Mr. Falwell began hearing from stations that would not carry the program. He called a news conference at which he accused Mr. Carter of attempting to “muzzle” a preacher of the gospel, and called on him to notify the stations that he would not seek time for reply. The Carter campaign did not comply.

As of Wednesday, a spokesman for Mr. Falwell said that he had heard from 105 stations that had not aired the program and added that the total number would probably be greater after checking.

Carter headquarters in Atlanta on Wednesday said there was no definite word that any of the state coordinators had asked stations carrying the program to provide time for reply, although the matter was said to be under consideration in Virginia and Kansas.

President endorses captioning project

Ford’s blessing is signal for OTP director to start conferences toward that goal

With President Ford signed on as a supporter of the proposed program, Thomas J. Houser, director of the Office of Telecommunications Policy, will begin conferring with persons in and out of government in an effort to encourage voluntary implementation of a program to caption television for the benefit of the deaf.

The President noted that the Public Broadcasting Service has pioneered the development of a closed-captioning system that permits those who cannot hear to read captions on their television screens, and expressed his support for such a system.

"With the cooperation of the nation’s television broadcasters, the producers of entertainment programs, the advertising community, equipment manufacturers and others, I believe we can bring about the voluntary implementation of a closed-captioning system," the President said.

"To that end, I have asked the director of the Office of Telecommunications Policy to meet at the earliest opportunity with appropriate persons in the public and private sector to encourage the voluntary implementation of a closed-captioning system," OTP Director Houser has been actively supporting the PBS system, as have Senator Charles Percy (R-Ill.) and Representative Lou Frey (R-Fla.). Mr. Houser said he would work with those who have shown an interest in the problem in carrying out the President’s request.

Technical Briefs

Caroline to Brazil. RCA Broadcast Systems, Camden, N.J., reports sales of television transmitting systems and studio and remote production equipment to TV Studios Silvio Santos Ltda. in Brazil, and transmitting equipment to South Carolina Educational Commission. Brazilian order totals $1.4 million and covers equipment to be used for new color TV station in Rio de Janeiro and for studio production center in Sao Paulo. South Carolina purchase amounts to about $425,000 and is for equipment for new educational station in Rocky Hill.

Honored. Dr. Frederick E. Terman, vice president and provost emeritus at Stanford University, received one of 15 National Medals of Science awarded by President Ford on Oct. 18. Dr. Terman was cited for his contributions in modern electronics and for his work with students in training them as engineers for industry and government agencies. Dr. Terman is author of numerous engineering texts, including Radio and Electronic Engineering, which is in its fourth edition, and Radio Engineers Handbook. One of Dr. Terman’s achievements was his concept of testing oscillators, approach that was adopted by Hewlett-Packard Co.

For video heads. New company, Videomagnetics, promises savings of up to 25% in refurbishing of video recorder heads by dealing directly with owner. General offices and marketing operations are located in Sunnyvale, Calif.; manufacturing, quality control and engineering offices are in Sunbury, Pa. Heads refurbished include Ampex Mark III, Mark X and Mark XV as well as RCA high band and low band models.

Editing unit. Television Research International Inc., Palo Alto, Calif., has announced new control-track editing system for on-line, off-line and electronic journalism markets. New model EA-3 is said to feature ease of operation, accuracy and portability. It can be interfaced with varis number of video-tape recorders including certain Sony, RCA and JVC models and does not require factory installation. Companion unit, EA-6 module, is to follow soon.

To be introduced. Jerrold Electronics
Corp., Horsham, Pa., subsidiary of Gener-

Calif. Called JLE-series, extenders minimize distortion characteristics for highly efficient feeder gain applications. Noise figure at maximum gain and full slope is 7 \( \text{db} \) maximum at channels 2 through W.

New availability. Sony Broadcast, New York, will begin delivery in December of new BVT-1000 digital time-base corrector.
Unit has newly developed analog/digital system and works with both high band and helical video-tape recorders. Sold in notions configuration, BVT-1000 includes video and drop-out compensators, full processing and full advanced sync. It combines wide window of \( \pm 2 \text{H} \) with moving window concept. Unit also handles direct and processed heterodyne modes and includes anti-gyro circuitry.

FCC says public stations must give ‘reasonable’ amount of access to candidates

Buckley wins contention that noncommercial outlets have same obligations as their commercial counterparts, but be loses when he says they have give him five-minute blocks

The FCC last week finally got its act together on Senator James Buckley’s (R-C.N.Y.) complaint that five upstate New York public broadcasting television stations failed to comply with the reasonable access provision of the Communications Act in reneging on commitments to carry a schedule of a five-minute program that he had provided and that they regarded as a ‘commercial.’

The commission, in a 6-to-0 decision said the stations had not afforded reasonable access to Senator Buckley, who is seeking re-election in a contest with Democrat Daniel Moynihan. It directed the stations to comply with the law before the
Nov. 2 election.

But the commission also said the stations are not required to carry five-minute programs; as in all such cases, the amount of time to be made available, in terms of total time and segment duration, is for the licensee to decide, subject to FCC review as to reasonableness, the commission said.

Senator Buckley is believed to be the first candidate to apply the 1972 law to public broadcasting stations, and his action casled considerable consternation among public broadcasters generally. Henry Loomis, president of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, called for a thorough review of public broadcasting’s obligations under the law, and said the commission should avoid “definitive answers” to questions inherent in the complaint in the few days remaining before the election.

Most FCC commissioners were made uncomfortable by the complaint also.
None wanted political advertising of the kind seen on commercial stations to show up on noncommercial outlets. But most felt that the law left them no choice but to treat all broadcasters alike.

It was easier for the commissioners generally to approve the final ruling, because of the statement in the decision that the stations involved would not be required to carry five-minute programs. It was inserted in part at least at the urging of Commisssioner Joseph Fogarty, whose opposition to a staff-drafted letter on the problem blocked its transmission two weeks ago (Broadcasting, Oct. 25).

He contended that Congress did not in-

You may already know that Cox Data Services has been offering cable TV billing for 12 years. But you may not know about our new data processing service— one that can give you the speed and efficiency you need to keep a growing data base in line.

As your cable business grows, you will be faced with more decision-making situations. You'll need a computer service that not only will handle your business operations, but a system that can provide you with an expanded amount of valuable marketing information. Information that can help you formulate intelligent, aggressive sales strategies and aid in increased market penetration.

With the Cox Data Base System, you'll have that information at your fingertips. Fast, economical access to a system which can give you continually updated demographic data on your specific market.

tend to apply the reasonable access law to noncommercial stations—a contention he based on his experience as a member of the staff of the Senate Commerce Committee and its Communications Subcommittee until joining the commission in September.

He said not persuade any of his colleagues, but he felt more comfortable with the ruling as a result both of the modified language and a joint statement he issued with Chairman Richard E. Wiley—with whom he had become embroiled in an acrimonious discussion when the staff's draft letter was under consideration.

The statement concedes that "the reasonable access provision clearly applies to both noncommercial and commercial broadcast licenses." But it adds, "the argument is persuasive that public broadcasting licensees are not required to meet this obligation in the same manner as their commercial counterparts. In this regard, the commission's ruling correctly notes that the public broadcast licensees in this case are not required to offer time to federal candidates for five-minute political programs, as Senator Buckley requested."

But the statement made clear the authors are not content to rest with their interpretation of the law. They said that since Congress apparently had not addressed the question of public broadcasting's responsibility under the reasonable access provision, they would "welcome further congressional review and guidance concerning this most critical aspect of broadcast regulation."

Although the language of the decision and the statement made the action easier for the commissioners to swallow, there is no guarantee one-minute or five-minute "commercials" will not appear on public broadcasting stations. For if the amount of time to be made available is a decision for a broadcaster, the format and content of the political program is in the hands of the candidate. Once time is made available, a broadcaster has no control over how it is used.

The stations involved in the complaint are WCVN-TV Syracuse, WNET-TV Buffalo, WXXI-TV Rochester, WMHT-TV Schenectady, and WSKG Endwell.

The stations had agreed to carry Senator Buckley's five-minute program between two and four times each. However, after carrying a one-hour debate between Senator Buckley and Mr. Moynihan, they said they had satisfied their reasonable access requirements and would not air the Buckley programs. Two of the stations—WNET-TV and WXXI-TV—had aired the program once, and the senator had appealed for six and a half minutes on WSKG during a public affairs program.

The commission said that the test of whether a licensee had met its obligations under the reasonable access provision was "one of reasonableness" that must be decided on a case-by-case basis. But it said none of the stations named in the Buckley complaint had been reasonable in the access provided the senator.
Washburn wants network-affiliate relations examined
Need for balance is stressed by FCC commissioner in talk to Portland NAB conference

Commissioner Abbott Washburn made it clear last week that there is at least one member of the FCC who may be susceptible to Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.'s contention that the networks exercise too much power over their affiliates. In his speech to the National Association of Broadcasters regional meeting in Portland, Ore., last week, he said it is "frankly troubled by the steady encroachment by the networks into the proportionate share of air time and revenues of the local affiliates."

Accordingly, he said he would favor an inquiry into network-affiliate relationships, as urged by Group W, and he was not the only one last week to urge such an inquiry. Four citizen groups filed comments with the commission supporting Group W's proposal and suggesting that the proposed inquiry be broadened to include a study of two other issues—what barriers exist to the creation of a fourth commercial network and whether the networks should be required to dispose of their owned-and-operated television stations.

The commissioner issued some caveats in connection with his expressed concern: He has not read all of the comments filed in response to Group W's petition for an inquiry into the networks' alleged dominance, and he does not know how far the commission should go in meeting the problem of "continuous network creep" if it is found to be contrary to the public interest. He said he is philosophically "for the least amount of regulation necessary to fulfill" the commission's responsibilities.

But, he said, he is concerned about the "reductio ad absurdum" of the trend of network creep"—virtually 100% of the broadcast day programmed out of New York. "It would be hard to imagine anything more unhealthy happening to American broadcasting," he said, "both for the affiliates and the networks (including the owned-and-operated stations)."

As a result, he said, he believes the commission should examine the network-affiliate relationship in the context of a notice of inquiry. He thinks the commission should consider issues raised in the petition as well as any related issues the commission's staff wants to raise.

Commissioner Washburn noted that two members of the House Commerce Committee—Representatives Timothy E. Wirth (D-Colo.) and John Murphy (R-N.Y.—have written to FCC Chairman Richard E. Wiley to express concern about what they see as a concentration of control in the hands of the networks and said there is "a similar feeling" within the Senate Commerce Committee. But he also said he starts "from a keen appreciation of the importance of the networks. If they didn't exist, they would have to be invented."

"It is a question of balance," he added.

The four citizen groups that filed comments on the Group W proposal are the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting, the National Black Media Coalition, the Committee for Open Media and the Committee for Community Access, of Boston.

They said the inquiry suggested by Group W is warranted in view of the facts and allegations supplied which indicate that the networks exert undue influence on the broadcasting industry.

And in urging the commission to go beyond the Group W proposal and examine impediments to the creation of a fourth network, the groups said that, "if direct governmental regulations are found not to be an appropriate way to curb the increased network dominance, additional network competition may be indicated." They said that recent developments, from the success of Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman despite network rejection of the program, to technological advances that might reduce start-up costs significantly indicate that a fourth network may indeed now be feasible.

As for the proposed inquiry into whether the networks should be required to dispose of their owned-and-operated stations, the groups said that network ownership of production, distribution and what amounts to "retailing outlets" may invest in networks an undue concentration of control.

Considering that the networks earned more than $208 million in profits in 1975—an increase of almost 130% from 1969—the groups said they no longer need their stations to subsidize network operations. "Fairness, national antitrust policy and the First Amendment interests in maximum diversification of information resources," they add, "would indicate that the commission explore and ultimately require the networks' divestiture of their owned-and-operated stations."

FCC gives green light to sale of NY stations

Sonderling Broadcasting will buy WRVR for $2.3 million and will retain jazz format; WLIX goes to Living Communications for $55,000 after sale was delayed because of format-change issue

The FCC granted the sale of two stations last week which had been delayed because of format issues.

The commission approved the sale of WRVR(FM) New York from the Riverside Church of New York to Sonderling Broadcasting Corp. for $2.3 million, and also approved Living Communications Inc.'s purchase of WLIX(AM) Islip, N.Y., from Long Island Broadcasting Corp. for $550,000.

The WRVR transfer had been protested by The Citizens Committee to Save Jazz Radio because, the group said, Sonderling intended to replace some of the station's jazz programming with rock music. Sonderling, which has been trying to consummate the purchase for over a year, revised its application last month, proposing to retain the all-jazz format (Broadcasting, Oct. 11). The citizens committee withdrew its petition to deny the sale, receiving as an extra benefit, a commitment on the part of the Riverside church to pay up to $10,000 in the committee's expenses and legal fees (Broadcasting, Oct. 25).

The commission granted the sale of WLIX in spite of the charges of Babylon Bayshore Broadcasting Corp., licensee of WNYG(AM)-WABR(FM) Babylon, N.Y., that the buying corporation had misrepresented its programming proposals. Babylon charged that Living Communications intended to change WLIX's present adult contemporary format to gospel music, bringing it into direct competition with Babylon's gospel format stations.

The commission said that Babylon did not establish that Living planned to change the over-all programming, and that the addition of one and one-half hours of religious music per day and three-and-one-half hours on Sunday does not represent a significant format change. The FCC also said Babylon didn't show that the public interest would be adversely affected even if WLIX did change to an all gospel music format.

Noncommercial world meets at NAEB Chicago

Association’s meeting is annual gathering for public broadcasting; Fellows talks money, Quello talks UHF, Carter talks partnership

The National Association of Educational Broadcasters held its 52d annual convention in Chicago last week. For the 2,300 registrants and estimated 2,000 other participants, there were more than 160 professional sessions and more than 50 equipment and programing exhibits. It was a time to discuss professional involvement in public telecommunications and the role played by the NAEB.

In his address at the annual business meeting, NAEB President James Fellows presented the financial picture of the organization. Mr. Fellows said that for the years 1973-75, NAEB had operating deficits ranging from $140,000 to $200,000. However, he said, the deficit incurred for the 1975-76 fiscal year (ended in June) was only $10,000.

"But even though the annual operating budget was close to being in balance, we were not retiring the accumulated deficit from previous years.... That condition must be brought to a halt. So the board of directors has authorized a fund-raising effort which, if successful, will enable us to do this. This amounts to $160,000," he said. He said that members will be asked to contribute $40,000 of that. Other sources, he said after the convention will come in $40,000 blocks from several private benefactors, the Ford Foundation and another institution whose name he chose not to mention since negotiations are currently under way.

Mr. Fellows' remarks came in the form of answers to letters that have been received at the NAEB. In response to one asking public broadcasters' greatest concerns, he noted funding levels and bureaucracy, calling them "nonexistent money." "The amount of money that this society allocates to broadcasting, for public purposes remains disgracefully small," he said. He said that "whether through CPB [Corporation for Public Broadcasting] or through government units," stations face funding problems because "budgets will not permit realistic continuance allocations" and "a growth factor in budgets."

"The solution lies in defining a range of acceptable financial practices and in specifying a harsh and definitive penalty for those who go beyond them," said Mr. Fellows. He also mentioned a concern "about the increase in the growing bureaucracies in Washington. He said there is "anxiety about the appropriateness of qualifications and orientation of key personnel" and fear of repercussions of raising criticism in certain areas.

"It is a very precarious and unhealthy situation.... Systematically, as if by design, the licensee base for public broadcasting is being intimidated and immobilized. Whether this is intentional is very hard to know, but that is a question people raise."

In response to another letter he said that "neither the PTR [Public Telecommunications Review] nor its publisher, the NAEB, is antagonistic to the other national organizations in public broadcasting. He added: "We have reason to think that there is at least a tolerance and perhaps a growing respect for criticism. . . ."

A particular concern of many managers was the direction of the Public Broadcasting Service. That subject was discussed in meetings of television managers who agreed to form a council within NAEB. "There may be a distance growing between PBS and the stations as the individual community instrumentalities," said Frederick Breitenfeld, executive director of the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting. He said this is the "next battle in public television." Concerns were expressed over the role of the licensees in running the national system in such areas as programming and policy. About 25% of PTV's managers were said to have attended these meetings.

FCC Commissioner James Quello, in an opening address, however, only had words of praise for the public television industry and for "educational broadcasting." "It is educational broadcasting today that is the leading catalyst for improving UHF transmission— an improved ser-the city, a rule which limits the number of authorized over-the-air STV operations. The National Association of Broadcasters, Metromedia Inc. and American Subscription Television of the District of Columbia, however, have told the FCC that the issues are too substantial to be solved in a limited proceeding, and that the commission should institute a full rulemaking inviting comments from all parties of interest in STV proceedings before the Washington waiver is granted.

Channel 50, applicant for assignment of a construction permit and grant of STV authority for WGPS-TV Washington had asked the FCC to waive its one-to-one community rule for Washington because, it said, Washington has enough broadcast stations already to provide sufficient free television programming (BROADCASTING, Oct. 11). WGPS-TV, confronted by a competing application for STV authority from WDCA-TV said that two STV stations in the Washington market would enhance diversity and competition. WGPS-TV said the rule’s applicability should be decided on a case-by-case basis, especially in the larger markets.

WDCA-TV agreed, telling the commission that its rule “serves no public need or interest in this case.” The rule deprives the public of STV competition, WDCA-TV said, and requires the FCC to make a prediction as to which STV authorization would better serve the public—a decision left to the public, WDCA-TV said.

The Broadcast Bureau supported WGPS-TV’s request, saying that the one-to-one community rule was originally issued to protect the amount of free television available to the public, not primarily designed to limit the number of authorized STV stations. Washington gets Grade A contour service from six currently operating television stations, the Broadcast Bureau said, and Grade B service from seven other operating stations. The Broadcast Bureau recalled the commission’s recent grant of STV authority for KBSI-TV Corona, Calif. (BROADCASTING, Sept. 20), even though the commission had previously granted STV authority for KWHY-TV Los Angeles. Even though Corona is a separate community, Corona is essentially a suburb of Los Angeles, and the STV signals will be reaching the same audience and market. The Broadcast Bureau said that if one of the Washington applicants were to change its community of license to a suburb of Washington, the situation would be identical to the Los Angeles-Corona case. The Washington applicants should not have to take such “evasive measures,” the Broadcast Bureau said.

Metromedia, however, said that the waiver request “raises broad issues of telecommunications policy which may not properly be resolved” within the context of the limited Washington case. Metromedia, licensee of six television stations including WTTG (TV) Washington, said the commission should invite “full public participation” in any question of this scale. Metromedia, supported by the NAB, said waivers of the rule could have ramifications on the public, program producers and distributors, and existing and future TV licensees, STV franchisees, CATV operators and channel leasors. The NAB said the existing one-to-a-community rule was the product of "exhaustive rulemaking proceedings conducted over a period of some 13 years," and that any change in the laws "would be of interest to a large number of parties."

American Subscription Television, a sublicensee of Telease Inc., the group with rights to lease the Teleglobe encoding and decoding STV technical system, agreed that before the waiver is granted, the commission should initiate a rulemaking proceeding to decide what changes are needed in STV regulations. AST, under contract for lease of the Teleglobe system to WGPS-TV, added that if the commission "decides to entertain seriously" the requested waiver, it should establish that the two stations use "compatible" decoding systems. AST said that prior to the adoption of STV rules the commission decided it didn't need to require compatible decoding systems since only one STV station per community would be authorized. If more than one STV station is granted to a community, AST said, the stations should "provide clear assurance that the public [will] not have to experience the inconvenience and expense of having two decoders attached to their [receivers]."

Newhouse to purchase major interest in Booth

Booth Newspapers Inc. has accepted an approximate $260-million bid of Newhouse Newspapers to purchase controlling interest in Booth. The acquisition, thought to be the largest in newspaper history, was accepted by Booth at $47 per share, despite approval by Booth’s board of directors two weeks ago to sell the 34% interest of three Booth directors and several other stockholders to the Times Mirror Co. The Times had offered to purchase all of the outstanding 7,371,000 shares of Booth stock for $40 per share. The sale to the Times (publisher of the Los Angeles Times, Newsday, the Dallas Times Herald and the Orange Coast Daily Pilot in Costa Mesa, Calif.) was seen by financial analysts as an attempt to block the growing control of Samuel I. Newhouse. Mr. Newhouse had already purchased 25% of Booth earlier this year. Booth publishes eight newspapers in Michigan, and the 19-million circulation Sunday supplement, Parade magazine. Newhouse owns 22 daily newspapers, 20 cable television systems and WAPI-AM-FM-TV Birmingham, Ala.; KTVM-TV St. Louis; WSYE-TV Elmira and WSYR-AM-FM-TV Syracuse, both New York; WTPA-FM-TV Harrisburg, Pa., and 50% of KOIN-AM-FM-TV Portland, Ore.

Sullivan, former TVB VP, to offer new service

Joseph J. Sullivan Jr., former executive vice president in charge of sales for the Television Bureau of Advertising, is forming an executive and talent search firm to serve broadcasters, effective Jan. 1. The firm will be known as Sullivan & Associates and will be based in New York.

Mr. Sullivan said he was forming his own company on the strength of a survey of 500 owners and managers of TV and radio stations that produced "a very high 28% rate of return" and in which over half of the respondents said they had never used such a firm but showed an interest in doing so.

Mr. Sullivan, who resigned from TVB late last summer ("Closed Circuit," Sept. 20), had been director of sales for Centinentic Broadcasting, director of daytime sales for CBS-TV and general sales manager of WCBS-TV New York. Pending his opening of offices in January, his telephone is 212-371-6400.

Corrections. KHD-AM-FM-TV Spokane, Wash., were listed as being licensed to Newhouse Broadcasting Corp. in the story last week (page 28) on FCC’s petition-to-delay day. The stations are owned by Spokane Chronicle Co.; licensee is KHD Inc. Also, the commission did not, as reported, renew the license of Newhouse’s WSNR-TV Syracuse, N.Y. Consideration of the matter was postponed and placed on the agenda for this week.

KSPZ and THE Z FORMAT GO FROM UNKNOWN TO #1!

KSPZ (FM) is Number One in 18-49 audience in Colorado Springs with Century 21's contemporary Z FORMAT automated program service.

In a market where 18 stations vie for the ratings, KSPZ signed on with THE Z FORMAT last September. By April-May they were a commanding Number One. Our congratulations to Jim Vinall and his dedicated staff.

There are similar Z FORMAT success stories across the country — giant rating increases and new sales records.

The secret's in the service — Under the direction of veteran programmer Dick Starr, the music mixes, contests, promos, announcers, jingles and sales aids are all customized and localized to fit your station and your market.

If you aren't getting this kind of precise and tailored attention from your present automation service, maybe you've outgrown it. And maybe you should talk to us about how THE Z FORMAT can work for you.

American Cable TV gets Phoenix franchise

Homes passed will be 259,000; franchise fee is 5% of gross

The Phoenix city council unanimously gave the nod last week to American Cable Television to construct a $40-million cable system there involving about 2,700 miles of plant that will pass some 259,000 homes. ACT, a multiple system operator with headquarters in Phoenix, received a 15-year franchise for the city.

According to Jim Monroe, ACT director of governmental relations, the franchise requires system completion within five years of receipt of an FCC certificate of compliance. He anticipates that a compliance application will be filed before yearend and that construction will begin some 18 to 24 months later. ACT has agreed to pay the city a franchise fee of 5% of revenues. Pay programming will be offered on the system.

ACT already has about 150 subscribers in Phoenix. In 1959 it was awarded a franchise for surrounding Maricopa county. Two years later, part of its franchise area was annexed by the city, which allowed the service to continue. Competition for the larger franchise had come from two local groups: Valley Cable Co. and Phoenix Telecast Services.

Over-all, ATC has nearly 50,000 subscribers on its systems in Arizona, California, Indiana, Kentucky and Texas.

Pittsburgh area gets a taste of pay today

TCI says it has 6,000 plus subscribers and expects 12,000 by mid-December

Tele-Communications Inc., Denver-based multiple-system operator, is scheduled to begin pay service today (Nov. 1) on its Centre Video systems in suburbs of Pittsburgh. The start-up follows a preview period begun Oct. 22, when TCI's 97,000 subscribers there were offered the programming.

The programming package is being supplied by Hollywood Home Theater, a joint venture of Twentieth Century-Fox Corp. and United Artists Corp. Delivery to cable head-ends is via multipoint distribution service (BROADCASTING, Oct. 4). Cox Cable Communications, which holds the MDS license there, also plans to feed apartment buildings.

The programming will include two exhibitions of a double movie bill each night. There are to be six cable premieres each month, five encores as well as specials and children's programming.

According to Graham Moore, president of TCI's cable pay-TV division, advertising and printing to promote the new service cost close to $75,000. Promotion has included spots on four local radio stations, inserts in suburban newspapers and advertising in TV Guide.

Mr. Moore said TCI is aiming for 12,000 pay subscribers by Dec. 15 and added that more than 6,000 orders had been placed by last Wednesday (Oct. 27). The pay service costs $8 per month.

Cable trafficking charged in California

$2.3-million sale of system prompts Tulare TV's question

Pappas Television Inc., licensee of KMPHTV Tulare, Calif., is attempting to persuade the FCC to strip two cable systems in the area of their certificates of compliance as a result of the proposed acquisition of one by the other for a total of more than $2.3 million. Since neither system has been built, the price, Pappas says, is "totally unjustifiable" and raises a question of trafficking in certificates of compliance.

San Joaquin Cable TV is the buyer and Fresno Cable TV is the seller.

Pappas contends that, apart from the trafficking issue, the proposed sale raises questions of whether the certificate holders misrepresented their intent to comply with the commission's requirement to build a substantial portion of their systems within a year, whether they ever intended to build and operate systems, and whether the commission's policy prohibiting lump sum payments is being violated.

Further exacerbating the matter, Pappas says, is the report that another transfer of control, to T. M. Communications, is contemplated. Pappas says that T. M. Communications, through the device of a contract with S. J. Cable, is building and will operate the S. J. Cable system.

Complicating matters even more for Pappas was the action of the commission's Cable Television Bureau staff at the request of S. J. Cable, in treating Pappas' petition to rescind as a petition for special permission. That permits the systems to seek relief. That permit, Pappas said in a letter to the Cable Television Bureau last week, S. J. Cable could obtain local governmental approval of the transfer.

Willey, Kelly address New York cable meeting

The New York State Cable Television Association heard from both national and state regulators last week at its annual meeting in Scarsdale, N. Y. Among them were FCC Chairman Richard E. Willey, FCC Cable Television Bureau Chief James Hobson and New York State Cable Commission Chairman Robert F. Kelly.

The FCC chairman made an appearance via video tape. Before introducing Mr. Hobson he told the group that he is seeking less regulation for both cable and broadcast. The FCC door is open to cable operators, he said.

Mr. Hobson told the group that passage of time will force changes in various FCC regulations: among them the pre-emption of state and local pay cable regulations, franchise fees and the issue of separation of content of programming and cable ownership. For example, he said, pay-cable pre-emption is based on the idea that the industry is in its infancy.

NYSCC's Mr. Kelly said that he has had a minimum amount of problems with the industry as a whole. He also noted that the commission is working on a "white paper" with recommendations to both cable operators and municipalities regarding rate increases. He also said that the FCC should revisit certain of its rules in light of the passage of the copyright rule.

If you’ll send your listeners to Brazil for Christmas, we’ll send them a present.

Every year, The Lutheran Hour brings you a Christmas Celebration from a different part of the world. This year, Dr. Oswald Hoffmann, The Lutheran Hour Speaker, has gone to Brazil.

And along with an examination of the ways Brazilians celebrate this universal day of joy, he’s brought back a present for every one of your listeners. A beautiful bookmark with a picture on it of the magnificent statue of Christ atop Sugar Loaf Mountain overlooking Rio de Janeiro Bay. And, of course, there’s another present: a beautiful program of Brazilian Christmas music and exciting, informative discussions with Brazilians about themselves, their country and their warm and moving relationship with the Christ Child.

Christmas in Brazil is available to you at no charge. It’s a disc that runs 29:30. In the past, our Christmas program has been heard on over 3000 stations. This year, we hope to be heard on even more.

Help your listeners get their presents: one for their books and one for their hearts. Send for your disc today.

WSW (FM) Tucson, Ariz.—Broadcast Bureau notified licensee it had incurred apparent liability for forfeiture of $1,500 for failing to maintain operating power at level not greater than 105% of authorized power. Action Oct. 14.

WTCW (AM) Whitesburg, Ky.—Broadcast Bureau ordered licensee to forfeit $1,000 for operating with power in excess of 500 w authorized by Pressuresource Service Authority. Action Oct. 13.

Other actions

KTYY (TV) Sacramento, Calif.—In initial decision ALJ Reuben Lozner denied renewal of license. He ordered Camella City Telecasters to cease its operation of KTYY, Oct. 30 days after initial decision becomes final, or as otherwise ordered by commission. Judge found that Camella had made misrepresentations to and deceived commission; demonstrated lack of candor, and that Camella did not possess requisite character qualifications to be licensee (Dots. 20125, 20429). Action Oct. 15.

KGHL AM Billings, Mont. — Commission denied petition for reconsideration of its May 21 action which denied application for review of Broadcast Bureau's rejection of fairness complaint filed by William Zosel and Northern Plains Resource Council (NPRC) against KGHL. Initial complaint said that KGHL had broadcast series of editorial advertisements for Montana Power Company that presented company's viewpoint on proposed construction of power generating facilities at Colstrip, Mont., and failed to afford reasonable opportunity for presentation of contrasting viewpoints. Commission said there was not submitted any information to show that programming presented by KGHL was inadequate to satisfy fairness doctrine. Action Oct. 13.

From the career word go, a broadcasting man:
James Sefert of PGW

From the time he majored in broadcast management at Ohio State University, James R. Sefert, the recently elected president of Peters Griffin Woodward Inc., New York, seems to have prepared carefully and precisely for his future career.

But he scoffs at any suggestion of pre-destination: “I think of myself as a man of architecture, then advertising and later marketing before he settled on broadcasting.

On a part-time and full-time basis, Mr. Sefert—a tall, huskily built man who has retained his high school weight—has been associated with radio and television since 1954. And if his experience at running a radio station near Morocco for the U.S. Air Force is counted, his alliance with broadcasting stretches back to 1951. In fact, James Robert Sefert attributes his first serious interest in broadcasting to his service with the Air Force station.

He was born 47 years ago on a farm near Paris, Ohio, and was reared in Louisville, Ohio (population about 5,000). After high school, he enrolled at Bowling Green State University. (“I guess, I went there mainly to play football but I was injured in my freshman year,” he says.)

He returned to Bowling Green for two years, worked briefly at odd jobs and at the outbreak of the Korean conflict enlisted in the Air Force for four years.

“The Air Force tested me and I decided I had an aptitude for electronics,” he says. “I was sent to an 11-month course at Biloxi, Miss., that was given under the auspices of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology—a crash course in electronics. I was then shipped to North Africa and helped build and operate a radio station.”

Fresh out of the Air Force in 1954, he returned to college at Ohio State because of the reputation of its broadcast curriculum. If he had been, in fact, only “a jock” at Bowling Green, he reversed his field at Ohio State. He carried a full load of studies; held part-time jobs at WLWCTV) Columbus (in the public service sector) and at WTVN(AM) Columbus (as a disk jockey), and helped run the campus station, WOIO(FM).

Upon receiving his degree in 1956, he worked full time at WLWC, serving briefly in the program and traffic departments before switching later that year to local sales.

At 27, Mr. Sefert was a comparative late-bloomer. But he made up for lost time during a career that moved steadily upward over the years, though the early period was no bonanza. “As a local salesman my categories were utilities, banks and department stores,” he says. “These are not hot classifications—in fact, the only advertisers on TV at the time were the savings and loan associations. But I remember my first sale; it was to Jack Lee, the ad manager for J.C. Penney, and it was an ID tag for the local cut-in of the Today show and brought in $750.”

In 1957 Mr. Sefert was transferred to Cincinnati to the national sales office of Crosley (later Avo) Broadcasting ( licensee of WLWC) and represented the company’s TV and radio stations. Crosley opened a sales office in Cleveland in 1958 and he ran the operation there until 1961, when he resigned to join Peters Griffin Woodward.

His initial assignment at PGW was as sales manager in Detroit and he remained there until 1964 when he was moved to other TV stations. He was named a vice president in 1967 and in 1968 was named senior vice president and Midwest manager. He was named senior vice president in 1971 and on Oct. 1 he was elevated to president and chief operating officer, with headquarters in New York.

Mr. Sefert said he was “not surprised” by his promotion as he knew he was being considered for the post, but added he was “very much excited by the challenge this new job poses.” He reported to Lloyd Griffin, chairman of the executive committee and chief executive officer of PGW, who marks his 31st anniversary with the TV representative firm this month.

Business associates consider Mr. Sefert “a positive, straightforward type,” as one describes him—demanding of his workers but not unreasonable. He is said to have a highly developed flair for managing people, enabling them to grow and advance within the organization. Mr. Griffin, incidentally, calls Sefert as “my right arm,” in citing the new president’s previous tenure in New York.

As president and chief operating officer of PGW, Mr. Sefert oversees an enterprise that employs more than 200 persons in 12 offices. The firm represents 50 TV stations in the country.

Mr. Sefert doesn’t make calls on advertisers these days (“I used to enjoy making calls”) and sees one of his key roles as being “an energizer” of his sales staff: “The message to our sales people is that every availability is an opportunity for him to make money and for the station to make money.”

Like other spot-TV entrepreneurs, PGW has had “an excellent year” in 1976, according to Mr. Sefert. Based on sales placements for 1977, he says, the year ahead will be “a strong one too.”

Mr. Sefert, the most dramatic development in spot TV in 1976 was not “so much the accelerated tempo of business as the increase in the unit price. “Now the truth of the matter is,” he says, “a good, selective time buyer can still find good time available at reasonable cost. It may not be the very best time but it’s very saleable.”

“I think there is going to be an attempt to erode the unit price in 1977. But I believe that TV station managements have reached levels of sophistication today and know what their worth is. And I’m sure they will hold firm to prices.”

Understandably enough, Mr. Sefert is opposed to network encroachment into station time, whether for extended time, extended news or any other type of programming.

“The networks are pretty well sold out in most time periods and they can’t keep on raising prices,” he says. “The only way they can make more money is to have more time to sell.”

Mr. Sefert is living temporally in the fashionable Olympic Towers office building-apartment complex in mid-Manhattan, where PGW’s offices also are located. For relaxation, he likes to golf, hunt, paint in water colors and read. He enjoys all types of fiction and books centering on economics, particularly those dealing with theories of business management.
Debates in 1980?

The presidential debates of 1976 have ended on a note of blandness, with the candidates exercising caution at the expense of enlightenment. The question now is whether there will be debates again.

President Ford is on record as favoring debates as "an institution" of presidential campaigns (Broadcasting, Oct. 18). He can make that endorsement without personal involvement. If he wins tomorrow, he will be ineligible for re-election in 1980, having served more than half of the unexpired Nixon term.

Jimmy Carter's attitude toward a repetition of debates is unknown. After the last debate he brushed aside a reporter's question as to whether, if elected, he would be willing to debate four years from now. The guess here is that Mr. Carter may have decided that whatever happens at the polls tomorrow he has faced his last opponent in a presidential debate.

The circumstances that created the debates of 1976 were unusual. An incumbent President, running far behind his adversary in public-opinion polls, gambled that debates would show him to advantage. It was a challenge that the adversary could not refuse. Another guess here is that incumbents up for re-election in the future will be as reluctant to debate as all incumbents preceding Mr. Ford have been.

Implicit in all this is a danger that Congress will begin tampering with Section 315, the political broadcasting law, in a way to restore its serviceability as an excuse for candidates to avoid debates. Until the FCC, reversing an earlier interpretation, decided that debates staged by organizations unallied with broadcasting were news events entitled to exemption from the equal-time law, there was an automatic bar to debates between principal candidates. The latest interpretation of the news exemptions inserted in Section 315 by the 1959 amendment enabled the broadcasters to cover the Ford-Carter appearances arranged by the League of Women Voters without having to give all other presidential candidates equal time. The interpretation also has been criticized by senators and congressmen who think the FCC was wrong.

It can be counted a political certainty that bills will be introduced in Congress to narrow the exemptions from equal-time requirements. Broadcasters must prepare to support another legislative course: repeal of Section 315.

Stations win one

NBC's decision to abandon the idea of lengthening its evening newscasts (Broadcasting, Oct. 25) is welcome news to virtually all affiliates, whatever their network, for they have resisted any such expansion with unusual vigor and solidarity. By giving affiliates of the other networks this precedent to use in their own defense, it just may be that NBC has decided the issue not only for itself but for ABC and CBS as well.

Whether that will prove to be the case remains to be seen, of course. But by its own deference to the "almost universal opposition of the stations we serve," NBC has obviously made it harder for the other networks to show indifference to their own. More than that, NBC officials say their decision is less equivocal than it first appeared, because they intend to stand by it even if one or both of the other networks go to a longer form. The prospect of a united front among the networks is thus ruled out, adding counterprogramming to the equation if any network succeeds in extending its news.

But that is only part of it. While NBC was announcing its withdrawal from the expanded-newscast sweepstakes, CBS was announcing plans—apart from the issue of longer news—for a new one-hour weekly news magazine to be carried in network prime time on some weekend, beginning early next year. Given the prime-time success of 60 Minutes on Sunday, its obvious inspiration, the new series must be said to have promise. But it also raises a question that is particularly pertinent in terms of the debate over expanded newscasts: How extensively will affiliates clear for it, especially if its ratings are not up to those of its entertainment opposition?

False pretenses

A number of employees and admirers of public broadcasting have written to protest comments appearing on this page two weeks ago about promotional excesses and commercialism in what was founded as a noncommercial, educational broadcasting system.

Samples of the correspondence appear in this week's "Open Mike." Plainly the commercialization of the noncommercial system strikes nerves.

But the process goes on unabated. Last week readers of such major newspapers as the New York Times and Washington Post were exposed to double trucks bought by Exxon to promote this season's Wednesday-night Great Performances on the Public Broadcasting System. "See How Great TV Can Be," cried the Exxon headline.

Sometimes the commercial opportunities offered by the non-commercial system are unabashedly described, as in the copy of an advertisement placed in the Atlanta Journal and Constitution by noncommercial WTVT (TV) there Oct. 18-19. The headline: "Channel 30 Broadcasts Wall Street Week and Your Company Gets the Credit!" The body copy read: "Channel 30 seeks corporate underwriting for our programming. We believe a company is known by the company it keeps. One of television's most highly acclaimed programs needs your support. Let us say: 'Wall Street Week is brought to you by a special grant from (your company)." Call the development office at Channel 30—404/873-4471 for details. It costs less than you think."

"Corporate underwriting" and "development office" are euphemisms for corporate advertising and television sales. Exxon's newspaper promotion and PBS program sponsorship are parts of an image-building campaign, just as WTVT's newspaper advertisement is part of a selling effort. No matter what linguistic evasions are invoked, public broadcasting is now competing with commercial broadcasting for both audience and advertising—while using frequency assignments that were explicitly reserved for noncommercial use.
When you think stars, you think Hollywood or New York. Today, there is a new city of stars... Pittsburgh, and it's served by WIIC-TV, Channel 11. Terry Bradshaw of the Super Bowl Champion Pittsburgh Steelers... Evonne Goolagong of the Pittsburgh Triangles Tennis Team... Pierre LaRouche of the Pittsburgh Penguins are among the national heroes Pittsburgh boosters cheer because of the exclusive coverage provided by WIIC-TV.

The Channel 11 star list is continually growing, with program appearances by Willie Stargell of the Pittsburgh Pirates; Bill Hill, president of the Fraternal Association of Steel Haulers; JoAnne Gardner, former president of the National Organization of Women; Richard Thornburg, assistant U.S. attorney general; Cardinal John Wright, former Bishop of Pittsburgh; I.W. Abel, president of United Steelworkers of America, and André Previn, new conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony. And, as you see, all the star excitement is not in sports.

On Channel 11, Pittsburgh viewers are at home with the stars of many fields. And that's another reason why they see WIIC-TV as a star in a center of celebrities.

Lost ...and found

Recent KOLN-TV newscasts helped two lost people return to their homes. The first was a 3 1/2-year-old boy found in downtown Lincoln, who couldn’t give the police his name or address. The 10 p.m. news ran a Polaroid picture of the lost boy and his mother promptly came to pick him up at Police Headquarters.

About a week later, the second incident involved an 86-year-old lady who walked away from the Tabitha Home for the elderly. Upon hearing her name and description on the news, the people who had taken her into their home called the police. The next day, the police called KOLN-TV to say, "You did it again!"

Helping the lost get home is all part of the tradition of total community involvement.
