An Emmy Award went to NEC's famous FS-12...and now this award-winning expertise has produced the FS-15!

And only the FS-15 combined with a Grass Valley Group 1600-Series switcher gives you the basis for a complete NTSC Digital Video Effects (DVE) system. One you can build a piece at a time with exactly matched components.

Exciting stop motion effects with the Freeze frame option for the FS-15 are a first modular step...at modest cost. Then add the NEC TBC and Velocity Corrector/Dropout Compensator to synchronize signals from your ENG cameras or helical scan video recorders. And later an NEC DVP-15 interfaced with your GVG Series-1600 switcher completes your DVE system...whenever you're ready for it. Production effects the equal of many expensive optical/film techniques are then at your fingertips in your own production or control room.

Your nearest Grass Valley Group field office can detail how our 1600-Series switchers, with the NEC FS-15 and its options, can enhance your productions.

The Week in Brief

LOSING END OF WINNER TAKE ALL □ The FCC is putting the final touches on an unprecedented action: a short-term license renewal for a network O&O, the result of CBS's wrongly promoted Heavyweight Championship of Tennis. PAGE 18.

HAWKS AND DOVES AFLUTTER □ NAB's delicately balanced position on the Communications Act of 1978 begins to tilt back and forth after the first in a series of briefings with broadcasters around the country. PAGE 19.

IT'S OFFICIAL □ Henry Geller, newly confirmed as head of NTIA, and his staff have their work cut out for them, starting with testimony at the upcoming rewrite hearings. Broadcasting, nevertheless, is not the Commerce unit's top priority; common carrier is. PAGE 20.

WHO'LL TOE THE LINE AT 51/9? □ CBS says it won't agree to NBC's plan to cut network nonprogram time to nine minutes per hour; ABC says it's still thinking it over, but it too is making negative noises. PAGE 22.

SOARING IN THE SECOND QUARTER □ Record-breaking financial results from CBS, RCA and Storer point to booming business for everybody. PAGE 22.

PUBLIC BROADCASTING FUNDS □ The three-year financing bill sails through the House. But it is heading for some problems on the other side of the Hill where Republican senators are considering restrictive amendments. There also are objections from opponents such as Public Broadcasting Service. PAGE 26.

WHO'S WATCHING THE STORE? □ CPB Chairman Wallis is but one of several departing from that organization and the Carter administration doesn't appear to be in a hurry to pick replacements. PAGE 26.

READYING FOR ELECTION TIME □ The FCC tightens its rules for political broadcasting. It sets a harder definition of a "candidate" and clarifies guidelines for assuring access. PAGE 28.

LEGAL FALLOUT □ In the wake of the Supreme Court ruling affirming the FCC's media crossownership rules, the appeals court in Washington asks for comments on the disposition of nine cases pending before that judicial body. PAGE 35.

INSPECTION OF DEFECTIONS □ A new TVB presentation, designed to stop the flow of ad dollars from television to magazines, charges there are some fallacies in the claims of the rival medium. And Rice offers statistics to prove that recent TV rate increases have not been out of line. PAGE 36.

TRYING IT FOR SIZE □ Arbitron plans to conduct a test in San Diego to see how messages about its radio diaries will affect the number and quality of responses it receives. PAGE 37.

MCA TV RESTRUCTURING □ Friedland moves into the chairmanship, while Menchel, Frank and Rush become presidents. Purpose is to broaden production activity for independents and lessen reliance on Universal. PAGE 38.

SUCCESS IN ACCESS □ A Katz Agency study of the May Arbitron finds Family Feud the leading first-run prime-time access program in the top-50 markets. Next is The Muppet Show, the former number one. PAGE 38.

THE REAL WORLD □ ABC publishes "Broadcast Standards Editing," a manual for editors of television programs. It is based on actual editing situations and the network hopes that the insights into real-life situations will make it a practical textbook. PAGE 38.

FRANK, PETER AND MAX □ ABC News launches its World News Tonight with Reynolds, Jennings and Robinson reigning over the three principal desks. PAGE 40.

DOUBLE DANGERS □ A CBS News documentary reports on the profitability of newspapers, but finds that situations exist in which there is too much or too little competition for the good of the readers. PAGE 41.

PAPERWORK PROBLEMS □ The cable industry is concerned about the new statement-of-accounts forms that must be filed with the U.S. Copyright Office. Cited are the complexity of the filings and inequities in the costs for preparation. PAGE 42.

ON STAGE AND BEHIND IT □ David Susskind has spent more than 20 years before the cameras as host of interview programs and more years than that behind the camera as producer of TV shows, a role he continues with Time-Life Films. PAGE 61.
First, we're happy to note that this active York County community was re-named some years ago to honor an ancestor of Leroy Strine, National Sales Manager of Channel 8. But even Roy admits that the station's special popularity is really the result of the excellent coverage WGAL-TV delivers not only to Strinestown but equally consistently to hundreds of other Pennsylvania towns and cities in this sales-responsive 9-county DMA with a population of more than 1,200,000.

Clutter
Time standards committee of National Association of Broadcasters TV code board is working with Frank N. Magid Associates, prominent broadcasting consulting firm, on potential research on TV "clutter" issue. Among other projects, Magid firm has been asked to see if it can devise pilot study that would come to grips with basic question of what viewers perceive as clutter.

Aim of this and other projects is to develop, to extent possible, what Michael Kievan of Cox Broadcasting, chairman of committee, calls "hard data rather than mother-in-law research."

Demands
American Federation of Television and Radio Artists' recent threat to call national strike if "inequities" in present contracts are not corrected (BROADCASTING, July 10) is not mere pre-negotiation "rhetoric," according to union. In upcoming negotiations with advertisers and agencies covering TV commercials, AFTRA will press for substantial increase in so-called "wild spot" rate, claiming performers now receive more for one network spot than "wild spot" carried repeatedly on many more stations.
Another "inequity" cited by union: Performers work as much as 10 to 14 hours per day on one-hour network daytime TV serial episode, and AFTRA wants this load reduced.

Sport afield
If present timetable holds, new six-team Inter-American Professional Baseball League will begin operations on April 15, 1979, with broadcasting revenues being looked to as glue holding enterprise together. Backers and organizers are Sandy Lankler, Washington attorney who counts Capital Cities Communications Corp. among his clients, and George Ohrstrom, New York and Middleburg, Va., financier. And serving as consultant is Richard Jencks, who took early retirement two years ago from post as CBS Washington vice president.

Teams are expected to be organized in Miami; Puerto Rico; Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic; Caracas and Maracaibo, Venezuela, and Panama City, Panama. Broadcasting company will be established to arrange for broadcasts — primarily radio, initially, but some television — and six clubs are to share equally in revenues up to agreed-on minimums, to assure viability of clubs in weaker markets. Messrs. Lankler and Ohrstrom are hoping to realize $1.2 million gross from broadcasting in first year ($1.8 million from gate). Even fonder dream is seeing broadcast operation develop into sports-oriented service for Spanish-speaking community in U.S. and Latin America. Formal announcement of plans is expected in September.

End-around
National Association of Broadcasters is putting out warnings of another storm approaching in Senate reminiscent of saccharin turmoil last year. Senator Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.), who lost fight to impose restrictions on advertising of products containing saccharin, is co-sponsor of another bill (S. 3115) that would require secretary of health, education and welfare to notify Federal Trade Commission when nutritional information proposed for food labels is deemed also to be needed in advertising.

Senate aides deny bill would force FTC to do anything, but NAB interprets bill as requiring inclusion of information not now in broadcast ads and is opposing it on ground that it discriminates against broadcasters who have limited commercial time (in contrast to newspapers' flexible space) and also infringes on advertisers' freedom of expression (if they had to give up part of commercial time for nutritional information, they might be forced to cut back broadcast advertising, feeling goes).

Back in action
Former Republican Senator Robert Taft Jr. of Ohio broadcasting family is becoming active in broadcast legislative matters in Washington. He put together meeting at National Association of Broadcasters headquarters last week that included representatives from Taft Broadcasting stations, as well as Meredith and Metromedia, reviewing status of performer royalty legislation pending in House.

After losing re-election bid in 1976, Mr. Taft now heads Washington office for Cincinnati law firm of Taft, Stettinius & Hollister, which represents Taft Broadcasting. When he was senator, his holdings in group were in blind trust; he has since taken back control.

Republican futures
Add another to possible Republican co-sponsors of Communications Act rewrite to replace Lou Frey, who is leaving Congress end of this session to run for governor of Florida. Besides Representative James Broyhill of North Carolina ("Closed Circuit," July 3), whose presence on subcommittee would please Chairman Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Calif.) no end, Representative Clarence Brown (Ohio) may become new subcommittee ranking Republican.

Mr. Brown, former member of subcommittee, considers returning to Communications as option for next year. He's currently ranking Republican on influential Energy and Power Subcommittee, role he would like to keep, but events next year may allow him to rejoin Communications as well. He's interested enough in rewrite to have assigned staff member to do summary for him, but has no position on it yet.

Noise abatement
Final text of FCC order on UHF noise figures is circulating among commissioners for final votes, and it apparently delights Commissioner James H. Quello, leading force on commission for tough noise-figure standards for set manufacturers. Included in rule is requirement that manufacturers meet 12 db standard by Oct. 1, 1982. Question as to whether 12 db standard would be hope or requirement was not fully resolved when commission took preliminary vote on May 19, following panel discussions on noise figures (BROADCASTING, May 22). Order also sets 14 db standard for new models after Oct. 1, 1979.

However, although 12 db is in rule, staff has hedged it with some qualifications to give commission possibility of changing its mind on event manufacturers can demonstrate standard is unrealistic.

Radio, a medium that deserves only the best

Remember when radio was king? When Hooper ratings determined whether a program lived or died, just as Nielsen ratings in television do today? When all America was glued to radio sets listening to First Nighter, Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Guy Lombardo, or faithfully following those marvelous serials—Myrt and Marge, The Gumps, Amos 'n' Andy?

Those were the halcyon days of radio, when products were made, overtaken and eclipsed in the intense competition to win a mass radio audience, when a product was identified with a specific show (Lux Radio Theater, Pepsodent Hour, etc).

Radio was the communications medium of the hour, and for the advertiser, radio commercials were the whole ball of wax. Whatever creativity an agency could muster was poured into its radio commercials. Top talent made radio commercials; network radio commercials were the best that agency creativity could muster.

Then came television. Overnight, the great radio shows died. Some of them made it for a while on television, much like the transition from silent movies to the talkies. Suddenly a voice became a face and if the visual image didn’t match the face—catastrophe. Radio as we knew it disappeared—like the dinosaur, it was suddenly gone.

But, unlike the dinosaur, radio refused to die. It hung in there with music. What a field day media buyers had purchasing time from a radio station that was desperately trying to survive. You could have purchased a radio station in those days for peanuts. Some smart guys did just that, and are living off the fat of the land now.

Today, radio is making a terrific comeback. It’s a renaissance in the full sense of the word, and it is assuming a direction and proportion that stagger the imagination. There are an average six radio sets in every American home, and it is estimated that 82 out of 100 Americans tune in for a portion of each day. Car radios are a boom medium delivering an affluent, captive audience of both men and women.

We haven’t quite gotten back to the programming variety and imagination of the 30’s and 40’s, but we are well on the way. There are over 67 different radio program formats out there now, and in five to 10 years there will be 200. Radio is no longer just wall-to-wall music: Drama is starting to return. Programs with specific formats have taken the medium by storm. Every segment of the American population can find the kind of music it wants to hear any time of the day. The listener can get fast-breaking, up-to-the-minute news, weather and traffic reports in just a flick of the dial.

Radio has become to broadcasting what magazines are to publishing—vertical in appeal and catering to specific segments of the population. The demise of Life, Look, and the Saturday Evening Post lessons in importance when we look at the rebirth and bustling health of the magazine industry today. Want to reach joggers? There’s a special magazine on the market. The unmarried woman 18 to 24? There’s a magazine just for her. Hunters? Sportsmen? Tennis players? You name it. There’s a magazine to deliver that precise vertical audience. Radio is heading in exactly the same direction.

The opportunity that exists today in radio and the greater opportunity that lies ahead are among the most significant developments of the past decade. I predict that in five to 10 years, you will be able to tune in to any kind of program you can dream of on radio. Sports? There will be an all-sports station in a dimension and depth that you couldn’t hope to get on television. Drama? You will find a variety of drama shows back on radio. This is where radio is heading and it has come a long way down this road.

What are the implications for advertisers and their agencies? First of all, media directors need to rethink their approach to radio. They need to look carefully at their target market and radio’s ability to deliver that target market efficiently—more efficiently, in some cases, than television, magazines or newspapers. Television time costs have skyrocketed, with the disadvantage that television carries a fair amount of dead weight—millions of non-target viewers are usually included in the package.

And, in this rethinking process, the “creatives” in our business will need to come to grips with the growing creative challenge in radio. If radio continues to be as selective of its audience, there is no excuse for the kind of commercials we hear all too often—commercials that are poorly produced, written by the neophytes in the shop, and too often skewed away from the station’s target market. For every sharp, creative radio commercial that makes full use of the medium—for every dashing episode starring Stiller, Meara and the little Blue Nun, or zany mishap of the bumbling but dedicated Time magazine maven—the airwaves still teem with ads consisting of warmed-over television soundtracks, bleak pages of straight copy and messages that completely miss their target mark.

A top-notch radio commercial should grab the ear of the listener, lure his senses and tap his imagination. Our own commercials for Stock vermouth and Chloraseptic took advantage of radio’s unique ability to stimulate the imagination. Listeners are able to “hear” the smooth taste of Stock vermouth with a sound track that gurgles, bubbles, soothes and excites. They can compare the painful sound of a sore throat—“ooh”—with the comforting “ahhh” of Chloraseptic relief. The time has come when agencies must tap their front-line creative people for radio campaigns. Radio delivers customers for the products advertised at a brilliantly efficient rate—if your creativity measures up.

Remember when radio ruled the roost? Well, it’s coming back in a different form. It’s not a mass medium any more, but it is a very precisely targeted medium that caters to specific market segments. And it delivers these markets at a cost of one thousand that puts television to shame.

Make no mistake about it—radio is enjoying a renaissance, and the fruits of this rebirth will go to those who meet the creative challenge with all the imagination and talent that go into the making of television commercials.

Cetec Sparta Showcase:

First-quality broadcast components joined in a first-quality studio system

That’s a Centurion II 12-mixer stereo console up front, the centerpiece of a custom Sparta grouping that’s handsome, functional, and compact.

Start with Centurion II — more than 200 stations have already. One great reason is that when AM stereo arrives, you’re ready right now. If 12 mixers and 36 inputs aren’t enough, you can add one or two extender panels of 6 mixers each — to a maximum of 24 mixers and 72 inputs! You can have either rotary or slide pot controls — or even some of each. And of course Centurion is solid state all the way.

Put it in its place — along with Sparta’s fine family of turntables, tape cart and remote control equipment — and complement it with sleek, low-profile furniture designed just for broadcast operations. And there you have it — a custom studio system at less than custom prices.

Of course, you can mix and match. That’s the beauty of the big Cetec Sparta line — multiple choices in equipment and studio layout.

Outstanding full-color Sparta catalogs are just off the press. Write for them today, or telephone Andy McClure (805) 684-7686.

Raised-eyebrow restraint

EDITOR: The decision handed down in the WBAI case (BROADCASTING, July 3) is frightening. Writing for the majority, Justice John Paul Stevens says "to say that one may avoid further offense by turning off the radio when he hears indecent language is like saying the remedy for an assault is to run away after the first blow!"

With due respect to Justice Stevens, I believe his analogy is perhaps extreme. To compare hearing an obscenity or an indecent statement with being physically attacked is in my opinion, ludicrous. To call the Carlin monologue indecent and to give the FCC the power to punish stations which play indecent recordings and at the same time for the court to deny that such an action constitutes prior restraint is like having a police force telling us that it will not try to stop us from murdering someone, but it will throw the book at us if we do it.—Bob Lepine, afternoon news editor, KXXX(AM) Tulsa, Okla.

Two are better than one

EDITOR: It is conceivable that "the average Joe" in some areas has no concern for improved broadcast technical quality ("Open Mike," July 3). However, it is certain that FM is gaining a majority of listeners in more markets with each ratings sweep. Apparently most listeners do perceive the difference.

AM stereo is a definite plus for many AM stations and formats. It will give a measure of parity to the AM-FM comparison, and it is worthy of the industry efforts on its behalf.—David Gleason, vice president and general manager, WQIK(AM)-WSSA(AM-FM) San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Diplomat

EDITOR: Your "profile" of Robert Rosencrans, chief executive and president of UA-Columbia Cablevision, is a well deserved tribute to a classy guy and one of the real statesmen in the cable business.

When his company recently announced plans for cable development and expansion in our affluent suburban New York county, Bob Rosencrans went out of his way to encourage and cooperate with established local broadcasters. And because of his generous and enlightened attitude, the traditional suspicion and rivalry did not develop between the local broadcaster and the cable entrepreneur.

We met the enemy. And like him,—William O'Shaughnessy, president, WVOX(AM)-WRTN(AM-FM) New Rochelle, N.Y.

Losing end of winner take all

FCC about to give CBS O&O, probably KNXT, short renewal for inaccurate tennis promotion

The FCC is on course toward handing CBS a short-term license renewal for one of its owned-and-operated television stations. The commission staff was heavily engaged last week in drafting the letter to be sent to CBS, and final commission action is expected this week. But in a closed meeting last Wednesday, the commission is reported to have voted 6 to 1 to impose the sanction that, for a network, would be unprecedented.

The action would be punishment for CBS's behavior in connection with the four Heavyweight Championship of Tennis matches in 1975 and 1976, principally the promotion of them as "winner take all" when in fact losers as well as Jimmy Connors, who won them all, were well compensated.

The station to take the punishment was not settled last week, although KNXT(TV) Los Angeles now seems the likeliest candidate. The licenses of KNXT and WCBS-TV New York have expired, and WCAU-TV Philadelphia's runs out on Aug. 1. However, CBS faces petitions to deny in each case.

At the meeting last week, the commission is understood to have selected WCBS-TV as the target. The symbolism of imposing the sanction upon the network's "flagship" station was said to have figured in that decision.

However, the wisdom of that selection apparently came into question when staff members assembled to begin working on the language to be used in the letter. If the commission wants to dispose of the matter as quickly as possible—and it evidently does—it would do better to fix on the first CBS television likely to clear itself of a petition to deny.

Late last week, some sources said KNXT is expected to win that race and that it would, therefore, be named in the letter.

With the commission's final word on this and other aspects of the case unresolved late last week, staff members described the situation as "still up in the air." But officials agree on one point: A CBS station will be handed a short-term renewal, of one year.

The commissioner opposing the sanction was James H. Quello. He is said to have argued that it would be improper as well as unprecedented to penalize an owned-and-operated station for a parent network's wrongdoing in which the station had played no part, and that not in any event the network had taken steps to prevent a recurrence of misleading promotions. Commissioner Margita White, who some vote-counters had thought would oppose a sanction, is said to have concurred in the decision.

The result—assuming it is affirmed this week—has to be counted a victory for the leadership of Chairman Charles D. Ferris and a sign that the commission is prepared to follow him in the pursuit of hard-nosed policy. Originally, the staff had recommended a letter of admonition, but Chairman Ferris rejected that idea. He urged consideration of a harsher penalty, and the commission began focusing on the possibility of short-term renewals ("Closed Circuit," March 3).

Last week the outcome was never much in doubt. The staff, as expected, recommended short-term renewals for KNXT and WCBS-TV ("Closed Circuit," July 10). However, the chairman, apparently anxious for the largest majority possible, did not push for action against the two stations. Commissioner Robert E. Lee is said to have offered the motion on which the vote was taken.

Thus, a massive effort made by CBS to head off sanctions failed. In March, the network issued elaborate guidelines to guard against further inaccurate promotions of sporting events. It made structural changes in the sports operation. And it publicly acknowledged its responsibility for the "false and misleading statements" made in connection with the Heavyweight Championship of Tennis. What's more, the acknowledgement came not only in written statements and in congressional testimony by network officials but in the unprecedented use of network facilities for a "mea culpa" statement by CBS President Gene F. Jankowski.

Some observers see the network's effort to make amends as going beyond those steps. They cite the departure from CBS of Robert Wussler, who had been vice president of CBS Sports at the time of the matches, and Barry Frank, who had been a top aide in the sports department. Mr. Wussler left the network to form his own production company with financial help from CBS, and Mr. Frank has returned to Trans World International Inc., with which he had been associated when it co-produced the first of the four matches.

CBS's actions evidently did not satisfy the commission. The purpose of a short-term renewal is to permit the commission to monitor a station that has gotten into trouble and to review its record without waiting for a full license period to expire.

However, the commission staff appeared to be having trouble articulating the rationale to be included in the letter to CBS. An announcement of the commission action was expected Wednesday afternoon or early Thursday. But staff meetings, beginning with the first of the late Wednesday and running until 8 p.m. that night and continuing in various offices through Thursday and Friday apparently failed to produce a draft that resolved all the questions staff members raised.

One question that had troubled several commissioners was whether a short-term renewal would, because of its implications as to the character of CBS, make the company vulnerable to petitions to deny or to competing applications. The staff is said to be attempting to draft language that would deal with that concern.

Another involves possible violations of the sponsorship identification rules, as a result of allegations that promoters of the matches promised the host hotels—Caesar's Palace, in Las Vegas, for the first three and the Cerromar hotel in Puerto Rico—that they would "receive tasteful and appropriate" on-air identification.

CBS has denied any wrongdoing in con-connection with what the promoters (who, CBS says, could not have delivered on such promises) said. And it seemed likely last week that, because of the conflicting testimony the commission would not base its action on the sponsorship identification issue.

However, it is known that some staff members, at least, were concerned about the possibility of some of those contradictory statements adding up to a misrepresentation to the commission. They referred to the way Mr. Frank talked to a while he was with Trans World at the time of the first match, he had received assurances from Mr. Wussler that Caesar's Palace would receive a substantial number of on-air mentions, and to Mr. Wussler's denial.

In other matters, the commission:
- [Indicated it was prepared to issue a notice and a rulemaking aimed at making sure that broadcasters, in ascertaining community needs, contact "significant" groups even if they are not represented in the 19 categories of community leaders listed in the ascertainment primer the commission issued two years ago. The matter came up in connection with a petition by the National Gay Task Force requesting that the list be expanded to include leaders of the homosexual community.]

The commissioners were not prepared to adopt that proposal. But they approved a staff recommendation that the commission propose amending the primer's reference to "other" categories to require stations to ascertain any "significant" group including homosexuals or, as the staff mentioned, the handicapped—not in the list of 19. At present, such contacts are optional.
- [Postponed for two weeks action on the proposed three-way transfer involving San Francisco FM stations. The commission wanted to get the views of Golden Gate. Had there been no commitment it has made to continue the big band format now heard on KMPX. Proposed abandonment of that format had led to establishment of the KMPX Listeners Guild to oppose the transfers. The guild, in a pleading filed with the commission a day before its meeting on Wednesday, said Golden Gate has offered "no guarantees (or even a statement of intent) that it would maintain the format any longer than a few days for at most few months) after the commission granted the assignment." Under the proposal before the commission, the KMPX facilities would be sold to Family Stations, which would sell its station, KEAR, to CBS. Golden Gate would wind up with CBS's present facilities.]
- [Denied a petition for waiver of the regional concentration of control of ownership rule requested by Golden East Broadasters. Golden East, which has substantial interests in WYMT(AM) Burlington and WSYB(AM) and WRTF(FM) Rutland, both Vermont, had sought to acquire WPGL(AM) and WFMF(FM) Fitchburg, Mass.]

CBS News sets succession: It's Bill Leonard

William A. Leonard, CBS Inc. Washington vice president, was designated last Friday to succeed Richard S. Salant as president of CBS News when Mr. Salant retires next April. Until then the 62-year-old Mr. Leonard, a longtime newsman, will serve as executive vice president and chief operating officer of CBS News, reporting to Mr. Salant. Mr. Leonard's successor in the Washington post, where he has been in effect CBS's chief lobbyist could be announced as early as this week. One report held that offer of Washington job had been made to Bill Small, now senior VP CBS News.

Mr. Leonard's appointment, announced by President Gene F. Jankowski of the CBS/Broadcast Group, ended months of speculation. The speculation usually included Mr. Leonard's name along with several others that varied from time to time. Mr. Salant had advocated for some time that a successor be chosen and announced, both to stop the speculation's unsettling effects within CBS News and to give the president-to-be time to work into the job.

Before he was named to the Washington vice presidency in November 1975, Mr. Leonard has been senior vice president and director of public affairs broadcasts for CBS News since 1971. He is credited with developing and in their early years supervising CBS News's 60 Minutes, the Magazine series and In the News. Fred W. Friendly, a former CBS News president, rated him "the best broadcast journalism executive" (Broadcasting, "Profile," Dec. 1, 1975).

Which rewrite tune to march to?

Confusion surfaces in the ranks as NBC's Kenney pushes more doxious position than he thinks is being promoted at broadcaster briefings being held around country by NAB

Does the National Association of Broadcasters oppose the Communications Act rewrite, or doesn't it? NBC's Washington vice president, Peter Kenney, thought broadcasters at a meeting in New York were told last week that NAB opposes it, and he backed off a telegram to NABC-owned stations to prevent such a notion from spreading.

Although not present at the Monday rewrite briefing of about 35 New York area broadcasters by NAB staff and board representatives, Mr. Kenney said he learned from conversations with five broadcasters present that the NAB board's rewrite position was being characterized as more hawkish than he understood it to be.

A member of the NAB board who participated in the unanimous decision on a rewrite position in Toronto just two weeks before (Broadcasting, July 3), Mr. Kenney wrote NBC-owned stations that "The NAB board did not feel it necessary at this time to take a firm stand on that point [whether to support or oppose the rewrite]" but seeks a "creative blending" of the good points in the old act and the new bill.

Mr. Kenney's letter focuses on a built-in ambiguity in NAB's position: Does a "creative blending" mean acceptance of the rewrite along with modifications of certain provisions to make them more palatable for broadcasters? Or does it mean only acceptance of the original 1934 Communications Act with amendments that incorporate, from broadcasters' viewpoint, some of the better points of the rewrite? The latter stance would indicate to Mr. Kenney that NAB is closing off "necessary dialogue" with the House Communications Subcommittee. It's important to continue that dialogue, he said, to clarify some of the rewrite's "fuzzy" provisions.

Mr. Kenney understood the stronger interpretation was expressed at the New York meeting—by whom, he would not say. But others connected with the meeting focused on ABC's Washington vice president, Gene Cowen, a member of the NAB board and head of the association's legislative liaison committee that is running the series of meetings with broadcasters in territories represented by members of the House Communications Subcommittee (meetings also were held last week in Los Angeles, Chicago, Nashville, Baltimore and at the Rocky Mountain Broadcasters Association meeting in Manor Vail, Colo.). On the question of whether to oppose the rewrite, Mr. Cowen is classed a hawk; Mr. Kenney (and CBS's Washington vice president, Bill Leonard), a dove.

But labels like those may indicate stronger differences than really exist. Mr. Cowen said, for instance, "We're in shadings here, very slight shadings." He denied there is any difference between his interpretation of the NAB position and Mr. Kenney's. Regarding Mr. Kenney's contention that the New York broadcasters were told NAB opposes the rewrite, "it's a misinterpretation of the meeting," he added. It is true, however, that said, the New York broadcasters "came down a little harder than the NAB board language."

William O'Shaughnessy (wvox(FM), WRTN(FM) New Rochelle, N.Y.), a member of the NAB radio board who presided at that meeting in New York, contented that "Mr. Kenney is completely misinformed if he thinks this was a runway for the hawks... There's been no strategy that I've heard of to torpedo the rewrite." In the same conversation, Mr. O'Shaughnessy appeared to cross over, however, saying that "amending the old act—that's really what we're talking about, isn't it?"

It is reported that the hard-line view of NAB's position was again expressed at a meeting of broadcasters in Los Angeles Wednesday. Appearing there from the NAB board were Forest Amsden of KOWTV Portland, Ore., and Mr. Cowen. NAB board members and staff sought to downplay the differences in interpretation last week, saying they didn’t want them blown out of proportion. Erwin Krasnow, NAB senior vice president and general counsel, who was present at the New York meeting, said: “I don’t see what the fuss is about. I was sort of surprised that a telegram was sent out on that.” Mr. O’Shaughnessy said that the association has to make sure that “nobody gets any headlines out of this that someone is breaking ranks.” They and others said it is important now and in the future that the industry have a unified approach to the rewrite.

The network representatives also emphasized that their actions in no way reflected their networks’ positions—which they say haven’t yet been worked out. Until now, they have only agreed in principle with the NAB’s position to seek a “creative blending.” By the time the Communications Subcommittee gets to the broadcast portion of the rewrite in its hearings in September, Mr. Cowen said, “it wouldn’t surprise me if we came out differently than the others.”

In Brief

National Association of Broadcasters Chairman Donald Thurston will tell California Association of Broadcasters tomorrow (July 18) that broadcasters “must not fail prey to the seductive portions of the proposed Communications Act rewrite and then realize we have wiped out 50 years of law, precedent and understanding and lost our supposedly regained freedoms through an undefined and unlimited spectrum tax proposal.” On same subject, he urges radio and TV to stick together in confronting bill, and suggests now is time to “seek common ground” with cable industry.

Four days of hearings this week on H.R. 13015, rewrite of Communications Act, will deal with FCC reorganization and National Telecommunications and Information Administration. Among witnesses:
- Tuesday—FCC Chairman Ferris, Commissioners Brown, Fogarty, Quello, Washburn, White; Wednesday—Justice Department’s Shenefield and former FCC Chairman Burch, Ford, Henry, Hyde, Minow, Wiley; Thursday—former FCC staffer Barry Cole, NCTA Chairman Robert Hughes; Friday—Geller of NTIA, Whitehead and Eger of old OTP.

Rewrite co-author Lionel Van Deerlin rebutted NAB stance on rewrite in own appearance before Rocky Mountain broadcasters Friday. “Don’t rely entirely on your national organization—or your attorneys—in looking closely at this bill;” he advised, suggesting both had vested interest in maintaining 1934 act. Estimated spectrum fee of $300 to $800 annually for radio station in medium to small markets he said was less than now paid for attorney fees. Speaking of cable reaction to rewrite, he said, “Now there’s some fair weather friends for you.” And referring to FCC’s line of WMMXW in Washington for commercial logging violations of Harden-Weaver comedy team, he said: “If this is the best we can get, then it’s time to cut the FCC and its regulatory functions down to size.”

Now that he’s official, Geller keeps going

Newly confirmed head of NTIA has a full plate before him, beginning with testimony at Van Deerlin rewrite hearings; most of his agency’s work will deal with common carrier rather than broadcasting

The Commerce Department’s new National Telecommunications and Information Administration, the successor to the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy and Commerce’s Office of Telecommunications, is in place and working to meet deadlines for a heavy load of work assigned by the President and Congress.

Senate action on June 29 confirming Henry Geller as assistant secretary of commerce for communications and information to head NTIA (Broadcasting, July 3) was welcomed by him and the organization; he had been running it as a consultant since November. But while the confirmation and his subsequent swearing-in eased some procedural inconveniences, they didn’t affect any real changes.

Mr. Geller already had in place his staff of senior aides, and NTIA is operating with a force of some 100. Personnel are distributed among offices in Washington, where most activities are located in space once occupied by OTP, in Annapolis, Md., where some spectrum management functions are conducted, and in Boulder, Colo., where the Institute for Telecommunications Sciences, a research facility, is located.

Mr. Geller, the former FCC general counsel who serves as the principal adviser to the secretary of commerce and the President on telecommunications matters and as the administration’s chief spokesman on them, last week ran through some of the projects facing him and NTIA.

He will testify this week, and over a period of weeks to come, before the House Communications Subcommittee on the proposed rewrite of the Communications Act. The proposed reorganization of the FCC and NTIA are on the subcommittee’s agenda this week; common carrier and international communications matters come up in August, broadcasting in September.

(And although he is the administration’s adviser and spokesman on telecommunications, he is part of a bureaucratic operation that imposes its own constraints. Positions drafted at NTIA have to be cleared not only through Commerce but the executive branch—a process that takes...)

About 550 homes took part in town meeting via two-way television in Upper Arlington, Ohio, last Wednesday, staged by Warner Cable on fragment of 20,000-subscriber Qube system in Columbus. Estimated 2,000-2,500 viewers were given chance to participate in discussion and polls on issues involved in controversial planning report for city. They were asked frequently opinions on questions such as that above, concerning exterior appearance of homes in community. Results appeared on screen in seconds. In between polls, viewers could also use their response buttons at home to notify studio they wanted to talk (studio would then call them and put them on) or to indicate they wanted to move on to other subjects if discussion was dragging. Instant poll of those still tuned in at finish of meeting showed 86% think Qube is good or excellent forum for public debate, 96% want to do it again.

Cloyd C. Dodson, director of administration; Forrest P. Johnson, associate administrator for policy analysis and development; Donald M. Jansky, associate administrator for federal systems and spectrum management, and Douglass D. Crombie, associate administrator for telecommunications sciences.

Beyond the rewrite, NTIA is developing administration policy on privacy, helping to draft the U.S. position at the World Administrative Radio Conference in Geneva next year and preparing comments in FCC proceedings involving the fairness doctrine and rules the commission is considering to govern ex parte contacts. Mr. Geller last week said, as he has before, that NTIA's principal effort will be in common carrier rather than broadcasting matters. He mentions electronic mail, the commission's inquiry into data communications and the matter of competition in the common carrier field.

Federal Trade Commission is expected to rule today on disqualification of Chairman Michael Pertschuk from agency's inquiry into children's advertising. Pertschuk said last week he would continue to participate in inquiry despite industry claims he was prejudiced and biased, but that he had asked other four commissioners to make ruling.

FCC Commissioner Tyrone Brown has reservations about rewrite of Communications Act and particularly what he says is elimination of public trustee concept as it applies to radio and, eventually, to television. He spoke informally on Thursday before D.C. Media Task Force, said license fee, which is called for in rewrite, should not be considered "quid pro quo" for surrendering government regulation of broadcasting. He said rewrite does nothing for blacks, notes it would remove FCC's authority over equal employment matters, as well as over programming. He said he is not sanguine about marketplace competition assuring that such groups as women, children and minorities are served by broadcasting. Commissioner Brown called Supreme Court's Bakke decision victory for backers of equal employment opportunity, as it supports affirmative action.

National Association of Broadcasters is urging WARC position that calls for reserving all UHF frequencies exclusively for television. NAB comments filed last week in eighth notice of inquiry of WARC say that, to ensure television growth "is not forever stilled," land mobile sharing of UHF channels 14-20 and 70-83, as now permitted, should not be included in U.S. position. NAB also says that proposed satellite operation in 620-790 mhz UHF-TV band would "create catastrophic interference" and that commission proposal to permit land-mobile sharing of UHF bands 470-608 and 614-890 within 200 miles of Mexican and Canadian borders should be dropped on ground it would have "unsettling" effect.

Sale of WDAS-AM-FM Philadelphia by Max M. Leon Inc. to Sonderling Broadcasting Corp. for more than $4 million has been terminated.

National Association of Broadcasters warns that FCC proposal to disallow AT&T practice of assigning institutional advertising expenses to costs chargeable to rate-payers "would encumber and possibly preclude" those advertising practices. NAB, in comments filed in connection with all-day oral argument commission is to hold on subject on Wednesday, also says that, in attempting to distinguish among types of advertising for rate-making purposes, commission would take on role of "chancellor of advertising content." American Advertising Association filed comments attacking proposal as "unworthy, unconstitutional and repugnant to our democratic principles." FCC proposal would require costs to be borne by stockholders.

FCC has initiated rulemaking aimed at permitting TV companies seeking international service to purchase service directly from Comsat instead of through one of four international carriers now authorized to serve them on rotational basis. Commission acted on petition of Spanish International Service.

Station Representatives Association has reorganized structure to set up radio, television and joint boards. Joint board will be made up of radio board and television board, each of which has seven members, plus president (Adam Young, Young Television), VP (Sam Brownstein, PRO/Meecker Radio) and treasurer (Frank Barron, Storer Television Sales). Heading radio board will be SRA VP Charles Colombo, Eastman; television board will be led by SRA VP Jay Walters, Harrington, Righter & Parsons.

E. Hal Hough, VP-program services, CBS Entertainment, New York, named VP-programs, CBS Television Stations division, succeeding Lee Currin, who is joining NBC-TV as VP-broadcast planning (Broadcasting, July 10).

Larry F. Darby, head of economics division of FCC's Common Carrier Bureau, named acting chief of bureau, pending replacement for Walter Hinchman, who resigned effective Aug. 31. Mr. Darby joined FCC in March from Office of Telecommunications Policy, where he was senior economist.

Milton Mitler, on White House staff during Ford administration, joins U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Washington, as manager of new marketing division. Col. Mitler, who owns Maplewood Fall River, Mass., had been with Fraser Associates, Washington agency. New assignment includes broadcast promotion along with marketing of monthly Nation's Business.

No united front on 51/9 proposal

ABC, CBS won't rush to follow NBC's plan to standardize at 51 minutes of programing, nine minutes of nonprogram material in prime-time hours

A confrontation appeared to be developing last week over NBC-TV's proposal to curtail prime-time "clutter" by reducing allowable nonprogram time, under the National Association of Broadcasters' TV code, to nine minutes per hour from the present nine and a half minutes (Broadcasting, June 26, et seq.).

CBS officials said they do not support the NBC proposal, and ABC officials, although emphasizing that they had reached no decision, seemed clearly to question its merits.

The chairman of the CBS-TV and ABC-TV affiliates boards, on the other hand, went on record as being personally in favor of a cutback in clutter generally and of the NBC proposal specifically. Both emphasized, however, that they had not conferred with their respective affiliates board members but said they expected to do so shortly.

Support by the CBS and ABC affiliates boards—and of the TV code board as a whole—was urged by Ancil H. Payne of King Broadcasting Co., Seattle, chairman of the NBC-TV affiliates board, in letters made public last week. Mr. Payne praised NBC for "bold and forceful" action but said the NBC affiliates "recognize the necessity for uniformity in this highly competitive area" and that uniformity "is obtainable only through the NAB Code Authority."

"We therefore strongly urge the Code Authority's adoption of a clean, rigid 51/9 [51 minutes of program material, nine minutes of nonprogram material] rule," Mr. Payne wrote in a letter sent to Robert Rich of KTVU-DU in Minot, chairman of the TV code board, with copies to the chairmen of the ABC and CBS affiliates.

Robert M. Bennett of WCVB-TV Boston, chairman of the ABC affiliates, and Charles M. McAbee of KCMO-TV Kansas City, Mo., the CBS affiliates chairman, said late last week they personally endorse the proposal and hoped to discuss it with their respective board members in telephone calls within the next two days.

Gene Mater, vice president and assistant to the president of the CBS/Broadcast Group, said meanwhile that "at this time, we will not support" the NBC plan. He called it "a cosmetic approach" that would be hardly noticeable, if at all, to most viewers.

In addition, he noted, NBC's proposal was "not an endorsement of a resolution currently pending before the code board, and this resolution, Mr. Mater said, involved changes not only in prime time but in other dayparts as well. The issue, he said, should be considered in this broader context."

Neither Mr. Mater nor code or other officials would give full details of the pending resolution, which some said is very complex. Among other things it reportedly involves redefinition of when program promotional announcements will be counted as program material and when as nonprogram material. It was introduced by Michael Kieven of Cox Broadcasting, chairman of a special code board committee currently reviewing the TV time standards.

Mr. Kieven's committee is expected to hold its next meeting in late August.

While ABC sources said they had taken no position on the NBC proposal, they also indicated a belief that, as one put it, "the question is not 30 seconds or more, but what you count." Their reasoning was that nonprogram time limits could be cut to, say, eight minutes without really affecting actual limits if definitions of nonprogram material coincided. In any case, one ABC executive said he didn't expect ABC "to do anything [about taking a position] very quickly."

Setting records in second quarter

Initial financial reports, from CBS, RCA and Storer, reflect new highs in revenues and profits

The first reports on the financial performance of broadcast-related companies in the first half of calendar 1978 came out of the chute last week, and all showed earnings at all-time peaks.

The reports—reported by CBS, RCA and Storer Broadcasting—mark the continuation of a long-term trend among broadcasters and companies in related fields. Others are expected to follow in the next few weeks as the season for midyear reports unfolds.

CBS reported record sales, earnings and earnings per share for both the second quarter and first half. RCA also reached record highs in both sales and earnings for both the quarter and the half. Storer reported record second-quarter and first-half earnings, with earnings per share up 45% for the quarter and 35% for the half and with a "particular encouragement" 39% rise in second-quarter operating profits of its TV and radio stations and a 70% rise in cable-TV operating profits for the quarter.

Highlights of the three reports:

- RCA Corp.'s net income in second quarter 1977 reached the highest level of any quarter in the company's 59-year history.

Edgar H. Griffiths, president and chief executive officer, reported that net income rose to $78.3 million ($1.02 per share), as compared with $70.1 million (92 cents per share) a year ago. Sales for the quarter rose to a new high of $1.6 billion, as against $1.43 billion a year ago.

Net income for the first half advanced to $133.2 million ($1.74 per share), up from $118.6 million ($1.55 per share) in the comparable 1977 period. Sales for the first half amounted to a record $3.2 billion, an 11% increase over 1977.

Mr. Griffiths said all RCA business segments except broadcasting participated in the earnings gain in the second quarter. NBC, he added, continued to lag in profit behind the same period a year ago.

- CBS Inc. achieved record levels in estimated revenues, earnings and earnings per share in both the second quarter and the first half of 1978.

William S. Paley, chairman, and John D. Backe, president, said all four CBS operating groups increased revenues in the second quarter. They noted that the company's earnings growth in the quarter was paced by the CBS/Broadcast and CBS/Publishing groups.

In the second quarter, net income topped $39.3 million ($2.14 per share), up from $54.9 million ($1.95 per share) in the 1977 period. Revenues rose by 13% to $751.8 million from $665.5 million last year.

First half net income rose by 6% to $93.1 million ($3.36 per share) from $87.9 million ($3.11 per share) in the comparable period last year. Revenues rose to $1.5 billion, up 14% from $1.31 billion in the first half of 1977.

CBS/Broadcast Group revenues increased by 12% over the 1977 first quarter, with "good growth in all three operating areas—television network, television stations and radio. Revenues at the CBS/Records Group climbed by 15%; at the CBS/Columbia Group by 26%, and at the CBS/Publishing Group by 2%.

- Storer Broadcasting Co. turned in record second-quarter and first-half earnings, with strong performances by both broadcast stations and cable TV systems.

Net income for the second quarter amounted to $5,523,000, equal to $1.02 per share, on revenues of $40,032,000, up from $1,987,000, or 71 cents per share on revenues of $32,114,000. For the first half, net income increased to $7,856,000 ($1.46 per share) on revenues of $69,797,000, from $5,789,000 ($1.09 per share) on revenues of $58,090,000.

Storer said broadcast stations contributed $55,500,000 of net revenues in the first half, up from $47,522,000 last year, while cable revenues were $12,035,000 as against $8,662,000 in the 1977 period. Profits from broadcast station operations in the first six months climbed to $15,241,000 from $11,655,000 last year, while operating income from cable rose to $2,934,000 from $1,987,000 in the comparable 1977 period.

Bill Michaels, board chairman of Storer, said the second quarter improvement in broadcast station profits was "particularly encouraging." He noted there was a 39% profit from operations against an increase in revenues of 22%, reflecting the results of cost-watching efforts.

Another hurdle cleared by public broadcasting bill

Three-year funding legislation is approved by House; CPB's Loomis calls for its support and says differences can be worked out during conference

The House version of public broadcasting's three-year financing bill sailed through that chamber with momentum its backers believe bodes well for the remainder of its journey through Congress. But lying in wait are public broadcasting opponents of portions of the bill and Republicans in the Senate who are considering restrictive amendments when the measure is taken up in that body.

And with the atmosphere surrounding the legislation still tense, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting's president, Henry Loomis, wrote a letter to all public broadcasting licensees, expressing support for both the Senate and House versions of the bill (they "came closer than any" to CPB's policy positions), warning against efforts to kill or amend it on the Senate floor, and calling for cooperation among the members of the public broadcasting community. Changes can be made in the Senate-House conference he said.

The House bill (H.R. 12605) has received unanimous approval of the House Communications Subcommittee and the parent Commerce Committee. And on Monday, it was taken up by the House and approved under a procedure barring amendments but requiring a two-thirds vote for passage. What's more, the Carter administration is vigorously supporting both the House and Senate versions, which it feels reflect with reasonable fidelity the proposal it sent to Capitol Hill in October (Broadcasting, Oct. 10, 1977).

The most vocal objections to the bill have come from the Public Broadcasting Service, whose members see in it provisions that impinge on their independence as broadcasters, particularly in the programming area (Broadcasting, July 3). However, like CPB, PBS is focusing its effort on securing changes in conference.

Mr. Loomis's concern appears to be that the tougher approach PBS members had been taking, toward the House bill particularly, would result in a serious legislative setback for public broadcasting. Ralph Rogers, who stepped down last month as PBS chairman, had urged seeking the bill's recommittal; he had said no bill would be preferable.

The PBS board under its new chairman, Newton N. Minow, has decided to work for changes in the conference report. And Mr. Loomis said he is glad that the PBS board supports passage of both bills. He noted this is also the position of National Public Radio.

But he said CPB is concerned that those in public broadcasting "who are still attempting to kill the bill or open it up for amendment do not fully comprehend the gravity of the situation." He said either tactic would aid those in Congress "who have long been opposed philosophically to any federal money for public broadcasting. Now, more than ever," he added, "we need to cooperate among ourselves, support these bills and work out our differences in conference."

Mr. Loomis's concerns were not eased by reports that Senate Republicans had put a hold on the Senate bill while they pondered offering amendments to the Commerce Committee bill on the floor.

Senator Robert Griffin (R-Mich.) is considering offering an amendment that would reduce by one year the three-year authorization now provided for in the bill. Senator James McClure (R-Idaho), chairman of the Republican Steering Committee, a group of 15 conservative Republicans, is considering an amendment that would reduce the authorization by two years. ("Closed Circuit," July 10). Other members of the group are said to be considering amendments to put a limit on salaries of CPB, PBS and NPR officers, as in the House bill, and to hold the matching ratio of nonfederal to federal money at $2.50 to $1. The Senate bill would lower that ratio to $2.25 to $1 and the House bill would reduce it even further, to $2 to $1.

The House bill would authorize $180 million for CPB in 1981, $200 million in 1982 and $220 million in 1983. The Senate bill is the same, except it would authorize only $200 million in the third year. Both bills would require the distribution of at least 50% of the funds to radio and television stations, and would authorize $40 million of the board's work is done. Another board member noted that "We spent two days in committee for every three hours on the board. . . . Allen was just not able to participate as much as he should have."

Had Mr. Walls been a more evident chairman, his resignation might have had more impact on a 15-member board that has six lame ducks and a president who has said he will retire as soon as his successor can be found.

However, several board members have said they felt Mr. Walls could not have been reappointed at the September annual meeting. Besides, the committees and four or five board members have taken up most of the slack caused by the chairman's absences from working sessions. The board, one of them said, may be better off now than it was six or 12 months ago because members have worked together more, found more common ground and burned out their "fuds." Two members said much support has come from Cordland Anderson, executive vice president, and James B. Cardwell, vice president of finance and administration and treasurer.

Leading candidates to succeed Mr. Walls are Lucius P. Gregg Jr., a Chicago banker, and Lillie E. Herndon, Columbia, S.C., past president of the National Congress of Parent Teachers Association. The choice will be made at the September annual meeting in Washington.

An immediate effect of the Wallis resignation is to add still another to the number of appointments needed to fill out the board. The Carter administration and several before it have been, a staffer said, "wilfully negligent" in making CPB appointments.

The retiring president, Henry Loomis, says that administrations all the way back to that of Lyndon Johnson have not considered CPB as "high in the priority," therefore it tends to go to the bottom of the pile."

Testifying to a Senate committee in May, he said: "I ask the committee to put itself in the position of a distinguished board member who is told to stick to his non-paying job (to which he will probably not be reappointed) for as long as two-and-a-half years after his term has expired while the President attends to other matters. This is not exactly the best way to help public broadcasting or to make other distinguished Americans relish the opportunity to serve as director of CPB."

He said board members are difficult to select because qualifications are so general, leaving appointments vulnerable to political patronage. Many times, he said, he million in each of the years 1979 through 1981 for building and improving educational telecommunications facilities. The House bill would require that 25% of the money be spent on radio—a provision NPR considers a boon; it now receives far less than that percentage.

PBS’s principal concerns with the House bill appear to be proposed new criteria for determining the community service grants CPB will make to stations—"innovative approaches" to new audiences, "community responsiveness" and "cost efficiencies" in program production, among them.

PBS, in a "talking paper" distributed to members for use in contacting their representatives in Congress, describes those criteria as "subjective" and says they would "cast CPB in the wholly inappropriate role of second-guessing local programing decisions."

Mr. Loomis, in his letter, said there is no basis for suggesting CPB would use the criteria to impose its judgments on public broadcasting stations. He said "it is not only common sense" but a requirement of present law and the current bills that CPB consult with the stations in establishing community service grant policies and practices. But he also said the criteria section in the House bill "contains some potentially problematic items that the corporation would like to see changed or clarified"—presumably in conference.

The PBS talking paper also restates objections to other provisions in the House and Senate bills. It expresses concern about provisions in the House bill that:

- Mandate the establishment of "representative" community advisory boards by all public broadcasting boards. (How can a station be sure its board is "representative"? the paper asks).
- Limit salaries paid officers of CPB, PBS and NPR to the amount paid cabinet officers—$66,000. Since those are private, nonprofit corporations, PBS feels, it is not appropriate for Congress to fix salaries.
- Require open meetings of governing boards and committees (the paper objects to opening committee meetings, which are "often emergency in nature").
- Apply enforcement of equal employment opportunity rules to the composition of station governing and advisory boards. The paper raises no objection to the provision as it deals with employees, but says stations have no control over the composition of many of the boards, some of which are elected and some appointed by state or local officials.
- In most cases, PBS favors the Senate bill as does CPB. But one provision in the Senate bill PBS finds unacceptable authorizes the General Accounting Office to develop accounting principles applicable to all public broadcasting stations. The talking paper says the language is so "sweeping" it could be read as authorizing GAO inspection "of scripts, outtakes, and tapes of programs never broadcast." PBS prefers the accountability provision in the House bill.

Public broadcasting's criticism of the House bill and word of possible efforts by Senate Republicans to amend the Senate Commerce Committee bill on the floor did not disturb House Communications Subcommittee staff members in the wake of the House action last week. Given the support the bill has received thus far, one said, House members would be "derelict" in their duty not to give the measure strong support in the House-Senate conference.

In the debate preceding the House vote, Representative Lionel Van Deerlin (Calif.), chairman of the House Communications Subcommittee, and Representative W. Hensont Moore (R-La.), a member of that panel, made up charges PBS members have been leveling.

"I would point out to the bill's critics that public support carries with it public responsibilities," Representative Van Deerlin said. "After lengthy study, the subcommittee decided that provisions relating to equal employment opportunity, financial accountability and public participation were necessary, since the system's record in these areas was far from adequate."

He also said that, as a former broadcast journalist—his background includes service at XETV(TV) Tijuana, Mexico (San Diego), and the then KFSD-AM-TV San Diego—"I am most sensitive to any measures that might lead to government interference in programing decisions, and I can assure you that H.R. 12605 contains no such measures." Representative Van Deerlin offered the same assurance in colloquies with members who posed questions reflecting many of the concerns expressed by PBS members. Representative Moore added the comment that if public broadcasting does not want to accept the guidelines imposed by the bill on the use of federal funds, "then it should no longer seek federal funds."

Going, going, gone, gone. Wallis, Loomis, Gherardi and Greene.

has heard from one source or another that appointments are on the way, but they rarely arrive. The latest report is that five appointments will come from the administration this week (BROADCASTING, March 20).

Board members serve until they are replaced (the term of one sitting member, Virginia B. Duncan, expired in 1976) and the "lame duck" members have been operating as though their terms had not run out. "If they were less dedicated people," a director said, "they'd just stop coming. But they care enough about public broadcasting that we have never had any quorum problems." Several of them chair or serve on various committees, including the one searching for a new president.

That committee has been the object of some speculation too. Mr. Loomis said last December that he would retire as soon as a successor was named. The search committee has gone through some 700 names, meeting almost every week, and may not as yet have settled on one. Mr. Loomis will no doubt leave in September and committee members have said they hope to have a candidate then. But they are not promising.

Meanwhile, resignations have come from Thomas G. Gherardi, vice president, general counsel and secretary, and Adele S. Greene, vice president in charge of public affairs. These two positions are likely to remain open for this year, and surely until a new president is elected.

What affects CPB also affects the Public Broadcasting Service and National Public Radio. Larry Grossman, president of PBS, said he looked forward "to the time when CPB will have a predictable future so the chairman and management can join us in long range planning. ... It is obviously unseemly to any organization not to know where its leadership is going or coming from."

Frank Mankiewicz, NPR president, felt much the same way. "It is hard to make long-range plans and feel confident about the future until you know whom you are dealing with," he said. There is, he said, "a faint little air of uncertainty about everything, and when you add to that, you play it cautious." Mr. Grossman and Mr. Mankiewicz both said what others at CPB said—Mr. Wallis and Mr. Loomis will serve until September, and all the board members are serving until they are replaced. So, CPB hasn't really lost anybody. It is functioning, but it is functioning in that "little air of uncertainty."
FCC political broadcasting rules are tightened up

It sets harder definition of 'candidate' and clarifies guidelines for assuring access to the airwaves

With election time coming on, the FCC last week took a couple of actions dealing with political broadcasting. It revised its definition of a "legally qualified political candidate" and set policy guidelines designed to assure federal candidates "reasonable access" to radio and TV airtime.

The changes in the definition of legally qualified candidate have the effect of making it more difficult for a person to trigger the equal-time or reasonable-access provisions of the Communications Act.

The present definition defines a legally qualified candidate as one who has announced his candidacy and is eligible to hold the office, provided he has qualified for a place on the ballot or publicly committed himself to seek election as a write-in candidate.

One change adds the requirement that candidates seeking nomination by convention or any means other than a primary election make a "substantial showing" of bona fide candidacy. The showing would eliminate from the "legally qualified" category those who merely state they are candidates.

Another change would deal with the problem comedian Pat Paulsen ran into in 1972 after he qualified as a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in New Hampshire. He lost network assignments after the commission held that even his nonpolitical appearance on television could trigger equal time demands. Under the new definition, a person would not be considered a candidate for a presidential or vice presidential nomination nationwide unless he qualified for the nomination in 10 states.

The commission's new definition also sets a time frame for announcing candidates. It said no one seeking nomination to any office—except that of President or Vice President—would be considered a legally qualified candidate more than 90 days in advance of the convention, caucus or similar procedure in which the nomination is being sought.

Charges for political advertising also figure in the definition. The commission said stations cannot charge a candidate more for time than they would an advertiser attempting to reach the same area as that encompassed by the office being sought. And all discount privileges available to a commercial advertiser must be offered on equal terms to all political candidates.

The commission said it was adopting guidelines to make sure that federal candidates obtain the "reasonable access" to radio and television time mandated by law—Section 312(a)(7) of the Communications Act—after concluding that no formal rule would cover all of the situations that could crop up in a political campaign. A station can lose its license for repeated failure to grant reasonable access to candidates for federal office.

The policies, designed to aid broadcasters in reaching "good faith judgments," provide that:

- Reasonable access must be provided through the gift or sale of time.
- Broadcasters must provide prime time, unless prevented by unusual circumstances.
- Licensees may not have a policy banning federal candidates from access to the types, lengths and classes of time they sell advertisers.
- Reasonable access must be provided at least during the 45 days preceding a primary and the 60 days before a general election.

Several of the policies attempt to deal with the kind of problem created when former Senator William Buckley (C-R-N.Y.) two years ago demanded and obtained time on noncommercial stations for airing political commercials.

One policy says that noncommercial stations generally need not provide federal candidates with lengths of program time that are not a normal component of the station's schedule. But another says that, in view of the no-censorship provision of Section 315(a), noncommercial broadcasters may not reject a candidate's material simply because it was prepared originally for broadcast on a commercial station.

A third says that although commercial and noncommercial stations may suggest a format to a candidate, the candidate need not accept it, and does not lose "equal opportunities" if he declines to appear on a program designed by the broadcasters.

The commission, while noting that Congress had offered it little guidance on interpreting the reasonable access provision, added that it is clear Congress wanted broadcasters to afford federal candidates a special right of access to their facilities available to no other groups.

Commissioner Joseph Fogarty, who was a Senate Commerce Committee staff aide when the law was passed in 1972, called it "a selfish piece of legislation" on the part of Congress. Chairman Charles D. Ferris, who was an aide to the Senate Democratic leadership at the time, concurred.

In another matter dealing with broadcasters' political broadcasting responsibilities, the commission discussed a draft primer on "The Law of Broadcasting and Cablecasting."

The primer is written in layman's language and is designed to help broadcasters, candidates and the general public in understanding the rules and laws dealing with political broadcasting. The commission is expected to authorize its release after reviewing it again this week.

Running up costs of government. In an official dissenting statement last week, FCC Commissioner Robert E. Lee amplified his feeling (Broadcasting, July 3) that the timing "is atrocious" in issuing a notice of inquiry on reimbursement of expenses for participation in commission proceedings. Mr. Lee, joined by Commissioner James H. Quello, said inflation, excessive government spending and taxpayers revolting against "frivolous government programs" make this "hardly the time to propose a new spending program which may ultimately benefit only the lawyers." He said that Congress should be the one to propose reimbursement. He also noted there would be delays in proceedings if the FCC has to determine who gets how much money, and that the commission would need extra staff.

Other station sales announced last week include: WAPR(AM) Avon Park, Fla.; WSG-AM-FM Greenwood, Miss.; WRBC(AM) Jackson, Miss., and KSCR(FM) Hobbs, N.M. (see page 47).

At SFM we've put together some of the brightest events of the last several TV seasons. Now we're going to do something for every season—and for the most festive times within those seasons. It's called the SFM Holiday Network. An exciting group of family films from major studios like MGM and Filmation that will air shortly before each of the major holidays.

This type of family entertainment has practically disappeared from regular television. But now, it's available from the SFM Holiday Network. So whether it's Halloween, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Valentine's Day, Easter or Labor Day, we've got just what you need to put your viewers in the holiday spirit.

For Halloween 1978... The Phantom Tollbooth from MGM, based on the book by Norton Juster. A sparkling animated film about a little boy who enters a fascinating world where words and numbers take strange shapes, and mind-boggling twists of logic prevail.

For Thanksgiving 1978... Lili from MGM, based on a story by Paul Gallico. The captivating story of a French waif (Leslie Caron) who meets a sad-eyed puppeteer (Mel Ferrer), and in one of the most charming fantasy sequences ever filmed discovers that he is her own true love. This is part of an SFM double feature with Gypsy Colt from MGM, a delightful film based on a story by Eric Knight about a young girl and her loyal horse who can't be kept apart.

For Christmas 1978... Journey Back to Oz from Filmation, based on the books by L. Frank Baum. An animated feature hosted by Bill Cosby, with a spectacular cast of voices—Ethel Merman, Milton Berle, Paul Lynde, Mickey Rooney, Danny Thomas, Margaret Hamilton. Highlighted by Liza Minnelli as the voice of Dorothy, the role that catapulted her mother, Judy Garland, to stardom.

And here are just some of the family films planned for subsequent holidays:

Sir Walter Scott's Ivanhoe, Captain Nemo and the Underwater City, Around the World Under the Sea and Rudyard Kipling's Kim.

For all the holidays to come, give your viewers fairy tales, fantasy and fun. Give them the SFM Holiday Network!

Legal fallout from decision on crossownership

Appeals court asks parties to file comments on how to dispose of nine special cases in light of last month's Supreme Court ruling

When the Supreme Court last month issued its decision affirming the FCC's media crossownership rule, it in effect signaled a resumption of activity in nine cases pending before the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington.

The high court's decision has implications of one kind or another for all of them. And the appeals court has asked the parties involved—beginning with the FCC—to file pleadings indicating what the course of the proceedings should be, including dismissal.

One case involves the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting's appeal of a rule dealing with television-cable television crossownership that tracks the commission's newspaper-crossownership rule—it bans the creation of new cable-TV crossownerships in the same city, grandfathering most existing ones but requires the breakup of some cases to constitute "egregious" media monopolies.

The commission is expected to urge summary dismissal of that appeal.

Several of the other appeals were filed by citizen groups or by the Department of Justice, protesting the renewal of stations under common ownership with newspapers on the ground they involve concentrations of control.

A key question to be dealt with in responding to the court's order involves allegations of abuse on the part of media owners. The Supreme Court, while affirming the commission rule grandfathering most crossownership situations, said license-renewal hearings were not foreclosed where there were allegations that the owners had abused their control of broadcasting and newspaper properties.

And we have been the FCC's general counsel's office last week to request that the commission not act on a pending item dealing with a citizen group's petition for reconsideration of the renewals granted Pulitzer's KSD-AM-TV and Newhouse's KTXV-TV, both St. Louis.

Daniel M. Armstrong, who heads the litigation division, said the general counsel's office wanted an opportunity to "make suggestions" to the staff members who prepared the item, to make sure the language is consistent with that to be used in the response to the court.

Three of the pending court cases involve Newhouse Broadcasting. Citizen groups are appealing the 1972 and 1975 renewals of WSYR-TV Syracuse N.Y.; and 1976 the renewal of WAPI-TV Birmingham, Ala. Others involve Stauffer Communications Inc.'s WIBW-AM-FM-TV Topeka, Kan., and WHIS-AM-WHAI-FM WHIS-TV Bluefield, W. Va.

Word to the wise. Thomas Brennan (second from l), chairman of the Copyright Royalty Tribunal, had but one message for broadcasters last week as he addressed a meeting of their lawyers at the National Association of Broadcasters building in Washington. If they want to share in the copyright payments of cable operators, they must file preliminary claims by the end of July or be barred for the next six months. It doesn't much matter what form the claim takes, he advised. It need only specify the claimant's legal name, its address, a general statement of the nature of the copyrighted works and identification of at least one program carried by one cable system beyond the station's normal service area.

Mr. Brennan said that copyright payments filtering to station owners are not expected to be large—the entire pool is anticipated to be $9 million in the first year—but the requirement for filing "will at least identify the players," he said. The statements of account required to be filed by cable systems with the copyright office (see page 42) are designed to identify works that have actually been picked up under the compulsory licensing procedures of the new copyright law. Broadcasters may file amended claims next July based on those more specific records. Among Mr. Brennan's auditors last week (1 to r): Wayne Coy Jr. of WETA-TV Washington, John Sturm of NBC, Erwin Krasnow and James Popham of the NAB legal department.

Fighting back against the magazines

New TVB presentation is designed to stop flow of ad dollars from periodicals by stressing TV's greater reach and frequency

The Television Bureau of Advertising takes aim at magazines in a new presentation put together as a forceful reminder to television's top-100 advertisers.

The presentation was developed to blunt a trend in which magazines, lately the fastest-growing national advertising medium, increased their take from TV's top-100 customers by more than $175 million in 1977 ("Closed Circuit," July 3). A total of 74 of the top 100 boosted their magazine outlays by percentages that ranged from 2% (Block Drug) to 220% (JC Penney) and averaged 38%.

Showings to advertisers have already been started and will be stepped up, aimed at retrieving diverted dollars from advertisers who have expanded in magazines and at preventing defections among those that have not.

The presentation explains at the outset that the dollars involved have been comparatively small. Advertisers of soaps and cleansers, for example, increased their 1977 magazine spending by 35% while boosting their TV outlays only 3%, but still put 92% of their TV-and-magazines dollars into TV.

"We are more worried about the causes than about the figures themselves," TVB President Roger D. Rice said in a run-through of the presentation.

Since TV prices have been a key advertiser-agency complaint and a major magazine talking point, the presentation notes that the consumer price index has risen by about 80% since 1970. It acknowledges that network TV costs-per-thousand have risen about 91% in the same period, but emphasizes that network "is still the most efficient medium to reach a national audience." And spot TV's costs, it adds, have risen less than 20%.

The presentation also quotes some advice offered by William H. Lynn, now senior vice president in charge of media and programming for Ketchum, MacLeod & Grove, at a financial management workshop of the Association of National Advertisers.

"Considering the price rises in the cost of living and such basics as coffee, housing, gas and food, and in media prices in general," Mr. Lynn said, "the TV 91% increase doesn't look out of line."

"Magazines and radio instead of TV may seem to be a good way of keeping costs down and still delivering the required advertising impressions," Mr. Lynn continued. "But be very careful of the so-called 'economies' because indiscriminately applied, they can seriously undermine the product-sales vitality of your business."

"What is the impact of the combination of sight, sound and motion in achieving your final aim—moving your product?"

From that point, the presentation begins to get competitive.

Only two magazines, TV Guide and Reader's Digest, it says, have more than 15 million circulation—a figure reached by "five to 10 television shows per night." A national TV program with an audience the size of a magazine's "would be called a failure," Mr. Rice said.

An advertiser trying to reach women, the presentation continues, could use the nine largest magazines for women—and still reach only a little more than half of all adult women.

Looking at other specialty magazines and their claims, the presentation says that 82% of Golf magazine's readers may play golf, but that 91% of the nation's golfers don't read Golf. While 67% of Ski magazine's readers may ski, it continues, 88% of skiers don't read Ski. And for another example, 45% of Hustler magazine's readers may drink Budweiser beer, but 92% of Budweiser drinkers don't read Hustler.

The presentation takes a look at the Magazine Publishers Association's "Media Imperatives" campaign—which purports to compare TV and magazines in their ability to carry messages.
terms of “heavy,” “medium” and “light” viewers and readers—and dismisses it as “a hoax.”

Applying “time-spend” figures to the heavy, medium and light categories, the presentation asserts that even the “light” TV viewer spends almost two and a half hours as many minutes per week with TV (400) as the “heavy” magazine reader. The “light” magazine reader spends with magazines (180). Comparing heavy viewers with heavy magazine readers, the presentation finds TV’s advantage at 10 to 1 (1,800 minutes per week versus 180 minutes a week).

Moreover, the presentation asserts, viewers in the lightest-viewing quintile are disproportionately old and disproportionately young—and also tend to be light magazine readers.

Beyond that, the presentation continues, only one magazine (TV Guide) in the top 10 is a weekly, adding “limited frequency” to “limited reach” and “slow audience delivery” as magazine drawbacks. In all, the presentation concludes, “magazines can be an effective supplement to television, but they cannot be a substitute for television.”

San Diego radio study

Arbitron is conducting test to see if messages aired by stations there will affect number and quality of diaries it receives.

Arbitron Radio officials said last week they would conduct tests later this month and in August to see whether broadcast announcements, urging Arbitron diary keepers to cooperate in the surveys, will in fact affect diarists’ cooperation and listening levels.

The tests will be conducted in San Diego, where the majority of radio stations launched a similar test on their own last spring but stopped it abruptly after protests by Arbitron and a local advertising agency (“Closed Circuit,” April 17).

Arbitron officials said they worked out details of the new test after conversations with a number of broadcasters, members of the National Association of Broadcasters, the Broadcast Rating Council and the Arbitron Radio Advisory Council.

There will be two two-week surveys in San Diego. During the first, July 27-Aug. 9, no announcements will be broadcast. During the second, Aug. 17-30, and for three days before it starts, Arbitron said, all San Diego radio stations will broadcast identical worded announcements every three hours. The announcement, which Arbitron said was prepared by the San Diego Broadcasters Association, reads:

“Many people in San Diego will soon be receiving a small diary and asked to keep close track of their radio listening habits for a one-week period. The San Diego Broadcasters Association would like to urge you to accept such a diary, follow the directions and fill in day by day, and page by page, any time you listen to your radio. Then, be sure you return the diary to the company that asks you to keep it.”

Friedland becomes MCA TV chairman; Menchel, Franklin and Rush presidents

Company's reorganization will broaden production activity for independent producers, lessen reliance on Universal

MCA Inc. has restructured its television distribution arm, pushing three MCA TV executives farther up the corporate ladder and bringing Al Rush, former NBC-TV executive vice president (in charge of sports, features, talent and program negotiation), back into the fold as president of a newly created MCA TV Program Enterprises division.

"The bottom line," according to Lou Friedland, the former MCA TV president, who remains the top distribution man as MCA TV chairman, "is much more program initiation."

Aside from the Friedland and Rush moves, Don Menchel, executive vice president of MCA TV, became president of MCA TV, domestic distribution, and Ralph Franklin, executive vice president of MCA TV International, stepped up to a presidency in that activity.

The move for Mr. Friedland is meant to relieve him of day-to-day responsibilities to concentrate on program planning and station relations.

The Program Enterprises division led by Mr. Rush (years ago a program negotiator for MCA TV) is said to be charged with "seeking associations with independent producers of live, tape and filmed programs" for release both nationally and internationally. Until now, most of MCA TV's product has come from the production resources of parent MCA Inc.'s filming subsidiary, Universal.

The objective, Mr. Friedland explained, is to "add a tremendous hunk of programing" available to independent stations and network affiliates. (MCA TV Universal already does that with its Operation Prime Time projects, which will account for three two-part novels for television this season.) Mr. Friedland was hesitant to commit himself on specifics. However, he did mention the likes of talk/varietv and sports (in which Mr. Rush has a strong background) and extending what was done with OPT.

As for an earlier plan, first talked about at this year's National Association of Television Program Executives conference (BROADCASTING, March 13), involving five first-run half-hour strip series for 26 weeks for fall 1979 at an estimated cost of $40 million, Mr. Friedland said elements might change but he's still interested in such things and at MCA TV. "Today everybody is terribly eager," he said.

How they finished in the access race

'Family Feud' comes in first in Katz study in terms of shares while 'S$100,000 Name That Tune' has the largest clearance

Family Feud has unseated The Muppet Show as the leading first-run prime-time access show in the top-50 markets, averaging a 30 share at the 29 stations over which it airs, according to a study of the May Ar-biton sweeps by the programming department of the Katz Agency.

Family Feud—which also took top honors in the top 10 (BROADCASTING, July 10)—rose from an average 28 share in the February rankings. The Muppet Show, going from 29 to 28, dropped to second place.

Following Family Feud (distributed by Viacom) and ITC Entertainment's The Muppet Show came Sandy Frank's The $100,000 Name That Tune and Viacom's The Price Is Right (tied at a 27 share); Rhodes Productions' Hollywood Squares and Jim Victory TV's Match Game P.M. (tied at 26); Firestone's New Candid Camera, Lexington Broadcast's Sha Na Na, Bozell & Jacobs' Wild Kingdom and Viacom's The $25,000 Pyramid (all at 24).

After the top-10 shows were Firestone's The Gong Show and Tattleteles, and Time-Life TV's Wild, Wild World of Animals (23); Viacom's The $128,000 Question (22); Bristol-Myers's In Search of ... (21); 20th-Century Fox's That's Hollywood (20); Viacom's All-Star Anything Goes (19); SFM Media Service's Between the Wars/When Havoie Struck (16), and Metromedia's The New Truth or Consequences (14).

There were considerable changes in the rankings of several of the shows. In February, for example, The $128,000 Question was tied for second place with Family Feud; in May it was 14th. On the other hand, The $100,000 Name That Tune rose from a tie for seventh place in February to a tie for third in May.

In terms of market clearances, The $100,000 Name That Tune led the pack with 43 of the top 50.

The real world of standards and practices

ABC distributes publication based on actual editing situations, hopes it might become textbook

A manual for editors of television programing, "Broadcast Standards Editing," has been published by ABC and is being given wide distribution in the hope that it will provide new insights into the evaluation of televised violence and TV's effects on children, and is being sent to schools and universities in the hope that it will become used as a textbook.

The 102-page book, said to be the first of its kind, was written by Dr. Melvin S. Heller, clinical professor of psychiatry and director of the Institute of Law and the Health Sciences at Temple University, who for several years has been a consultant to ABC and who earlier was a consultant to the National Association of Broadcasters Code Authority. It is based on work by Dr. Heller and his former colleague, the late Dr. Samuel Polsky, also of Temple, and on numerous workshops they held over the years with ABC's broadcast standards editors on the West Coast, plus research done by others.

The manual uses specific problems that arose during the creation of specific programs to make its points, in many cases giving verbatim accounts of the consultants' and editors' discussions delineating the problems and suggesting how they should be handled. In some it ranges from the qualifications an editor needs to discussions of various forms of violence, conditions that may intensify or alleviate them and schemes for evaluating violence.

One of its eight chapters is devoted to "Television and the Child." This points out and discusses among other considerations, special potential dangers where programming for children is concerned: "Iden-ification, the risk of antisocial modeling and imitation, the temptation to emulate dangerous acts or stunts, biased and stereotyped portrayals, confusing and frightening materials, cruelty, sexually unacceptable themes, inappropriate humor, off-color innuendoes and adult controversial themes for which children lack adequate experience, background and perspective."

Dr. Heller, writing of the book's origins, says that Alfred R. Schneider, ABC Inc. vice president and head of broadcast standards and practices, had stressed the need for "a set of working guidelines and the begining of a dynamic theory in editing approaches to actual program materials."

Dr. Heller also credits the former and present heads of the NAB Code Authority, Stockton Helfrich and Jerry Lannier, who he said "struggled with our early guidelines," and a group of psychiatrists and behavioral scientists "who conducted independent research projects shared with us during the past five years."

The manual, Dr. Heller writes, is not "a cookbook for censors," but rather an attempt to provide "an introduction to understanding some theoretical and practical bases for rational standards in television broadcasting"; not "a book of do's and don'ts, but one which assists the editor to focus on potential problem areas." Nor, he says, are the views "either final theories or the only theories," but ones nevertheless that have "proved to be useful for the broadcast standards editors and other personnel with whom the author has been privileged to work."

ABC officials said the manual is being used by ABC's broadcast standards editors and distributed to, among others, all ABC-TV affiliates, members of Congress and the libraries of many schools and colleges. The cover price is $7.95.

Rights question solved

The controversy over who really has the right to sell The Police Tapes, a documentary bought for an Aug. 13 airing by ABC News, ended—once WNET(TV) Newark, N.J. (New York) reread its original contract.

The public station, which made the deal to produce the program with independents Alan and Susan Raymond and originally aired it in January 1977, had protested the sale to ABC News earlier this month (Broadcasting, July 10). It claimed it had exclusive broadcast rights and was obligated to protect the other public stations to which WNET already had sold The Police Tapes.

But, "to our embarrassment and confusion," said WNET President Jay Iselin, the assumption that this contract was like others the station has had was wrong and all it gave WNET were noncommercial broadcast rights. The station is now offering to refund money to those public stations that no longer want it in light of the upcoming wider commercial network exposure.

Meanwhile the Raymonds still are at work at WNET on another documentary, Bad Boys, on juvenile crime. How much did they receive from ABC News for The Police Tapes? "Five figures," said Mr. Raymond, who called it "a tremendous breakthrough" to get an independent documentary on a commercial network.

Programing Briefs

Kudo for Klein. Paul Klein, NBC-TV's executive vice president, programs, was recipient of the Brith Solomon Communication Media Award for "fulfilling the highest standards of responsibility to the public through the TV drama Holocaust." Also honored in July 9 presentation were Gerald Green, author of Holocaust, director Marvin Chomsky and producers Herbert Brodkin and Robert (Buzz) Berger.

Stepping forward. Worldvision Enterprises reports more than 80 markets for The Next Step Beyond, half-hour barter vehicle it's distributing for Procter & Gamble.

Older demographics. One-hour Senior Olympics program is being produced for syndication for fall start on TV stations. Program will focus on persons, 40 to 80, who have competed in various events (pole vaulting, cycling, ice hockey, power lifting) in California during 1978. Special show is being produced by Joe Landis Productions, Los Angeles, and distributed by Hal Golden Productions, Los Angeles and New York.

'Soup' is on again

NBC-TV and the New York State Education Department have resurrected their children's series on race relations, Vegetable Soup.

Presented in a magazine format and produced by the education department, Vegetable Soup II will consist of 39 half-hour episodes, to be offered weekly to the network's affiliates beginning Sunday, Sept. 3 (8-8:30 p.m. NYT). Vegetable Soup I first went on the air in November 1975. It also ran for 39 episodes, and was carried in 117 NBC stations and 100 Public Broadcasting System stations. Some stations in major markets are still running the show, according to NBC.

The series is "designed to count the negative effects of racial prejudice," and is aimed at children 6 to 12 years old. Among its goals are "acceptance of individual and group differences and positive attitudes toward one's own ethnic group, appreciation of different lifestyles and values and cooperation among different ethnic and sex groups." Almost half of each program is to be dramatic, with the remaining time devoted to "action elements," featuring such characters from the original series as the puppet Martin and his pet boa constrictor, and Long John Spoonsport and Woody the Spoon.

Pride of OPT. Citing Nielsen figures, MCA TV/Universal last week said that the opening two-hour telecast of Operation Prime Time's The Bastard had averaged a 23 rating across the country, third only to ABC-TV's Three's Company and Laverne & Shirley for the two-week period ended May 28. Furthermore, it said that, in demographic terms, The Bastard delivered "more 18-49's than any of television's top programs," with 999 such viewers per 1,000 households. The Bastard was carried by 66 network affiliates and 25 independents. The next OPT mini-series is set to begin on most stations the week of Aug. 14. It's Irwin Shaw's Evening in Byzantium.

Broadcast Journalism

ABC's new news makes its debut

Three 'principal reporters' report from Chicago, Washington, London in revamped format that also features Smith and Walters

With newsroom-type anchor desks in Washington, London and Chicago, ABC News last Monday launched World News Tonight, a restructuring of what had been the ABC Evening News.

Gone was Harry Reasoner, Evening News co-anchor, who July 31 crosses networks to become co-editor of CBS Reports documentaries. Remaining was his on-air partner, Barbara Walters, now heading a rousing "special coverage desk," based in New York.

Opening the first newscast was Frank Reynolds from the "national desk" in Washington. He has been described by News and Sports President Roone Arledge as "the main anchorman" (Broadcasting, April 24).

After welcoming viewers to the program, Mr. Reynolds presented a charge: "Speaking for all the men and women of ABC News, I promise you an accurate, responsible and meaningful report on events at home and abroad. We are aware of our responsibility to you and we intend to meet it."

Switches were made to the "foreign desk" in London, anchored by Peter Jennings, and the "domestic desk" in Chicago, anchored by Max Robinson, former co-anchor at WTOP-TV (now WDMV-TV) Washington, with correspondents' reports in between. Barbara Walters was on assignment in Washington on the program's main news story: the trial of two Soviet disidents and its implications for U.S.-Russia relations. Howard K. Smith, who will be offering commentary three times a week, also appeared on the first program.

Aside from new graphics and theme music, ABC News made regular use of its Quantel 5000 equipment, allowing "windows" to be cut into the screen. Cameras also showed the main ABC News control center and newsrooms behind the anchors, whom ABC News last April said it preferred to call "principal reporters."

Other elements, although not featured on the first program, are "Follow-Up," in which Barbara Walters will spend about two and a half minutes updating three or four previously covered stories, and "Backgrounder," an explanatory piece—the first planned last week with Dan Cordtz, economics editor, going into what was expected at the economic summit with President Carter in Bonn.

Key to the new format is that the anchors will not be tied to their desks. Mr. Robinson, for example, also was in Cleveland last week. By the second broadcast, Peter Jennings was also outside his CBS News finds double danger in newspaper market

Program finds medium profitable, to producers' surprise, but also says there are situations in which too much or too little competition exists for the good of readers

In the introduction to CBS News' documentary, The Business of Newspapers, last Friday (July 14), narrator Hughes Rudd noted that before he started to "prowl around" the story, he had assumed newspapers were in deep financial trouble and that the "primary culprit" was television.

By the hour's end, it was clear an entirely different conclusion had been reached: Newspapers are more profitable than ever before, and that, or the repercussions of that, is the problem.

CBS found danger both in too much competition and in too little. Cited as an example of the former was the Boston Herald-American, which has taken on a more featurish look to counter the serious approach of the Boston Globe. As one researcher interviewed put it, "Newspapers are a commodity too [like toothpaste]. And if they're going to build circulation, they've got to give people what they want.

But newspaper monopoly, particularly by national chains, was seen as the overriding danger. Mr. Rudd chatted with Allen Neuharth, president of Gannett, who was shown in the private plane in which he "jets around the country enticing newspaper owners to sell." As Mr. Rudd described it, Mr. Neuharth was asked if he thought monopoly ownership could undermine journalistic integrity. "I think the potential is there, short-term," Mr. Neuharth said. "But again, I don't think the public would let us get away with it, long-term."

In fact, Mr. Rudd and producers and writer-producer Irina Posner made a point of demonstrating that the public is in some cases already concerned—and that there may not be ready solutions to the problem.

Mr. Rudd reviewed the widely publicized incident in which the Panax chain fired the editor of one of its member papers, the Daily Press of Escanaba, Mich., because he refused to print two stories sent down by the head office. Mr. Rudd then talked to some of the town's residents, who seemed concerned indeed. They told him they had tried for a year, with little success, to regain some autonomy for their paper. "We're like'd fly in a soup bowl," said one, "and the soup bowl is Panax. So just how much voice do we have in it?"

Otis Chandler, president of Times Mirror and publisher of the Los Angeles Times agreed. "What bothers me," he said, "is the loss of editorial independence in all those communities that become part of the chain. They can't any longer go to the editor and the publisher... and say, 'I want to talk to you about our town and it's always been our newspaper and our town.' I think we've lost that and I think we've lost it forever and I decry it."

"Most of the newspapers in this country are monopolies," Mr. Rudd concluded, "and among them some very good papers. But as press critic A.J. Liebling once observed, a city with one newspaper is like a man with one eye, and often that eye is glass."

But did he ask for time and charges? It began when talk show host Stan Major of WWSTAM Miami asked his audience who they would rather see as President, Richard Nixon or Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.). Ninety phone calls later the vote was 70-20 in favor of Mr. Nixon, who once had a home in Miami. Mr. Major thought he'd relay that good word to Casa Pacifica, the Nixon estate at San Clemente, so he picked up the phone and placed a call. Mr. Nixon answered himself, and the talk show host got a surprise six-minute interview.

The former President said he did not plan to participate in "any partisan political activity, but, when I think it can be helpful, I will continue to make statements both publicly and privately about policies I think the United States should follow..." About his book: "It's selling better than press accounts suggest. About his "old sparring mate" Hubert Humphrey, Mr. Nixon said, "We both came from rather humble backgrounds. I was the son of a gricer; he was the son of a durgist. And both of us might have been called sons of something else."

Requests for the interview poured into WWSTAM from networks, publications and news agencies—including Radio Moscow and Radio Tokyo.

cable operators

There are three types, depending on system size, but CATA says it will cost even small CATV's more to fill it out than fee itself.

The cable industry has looked over the new statement of account forms that have to be filed semianually with the U.S. Copyright Office, and it appears concerned, annoyed and maybe even awed.

The forms are everything the industry thought they'd be, and more.

"We knew it was coming," said Stuart Feldstein, general counsel of the National Cable Television Association. "There might have been a simpler way to do it."

There are three forms. One for systems that have "gross receipts" less than $41,500 semianually; one for systems between $41,500 and $160,000, and one for systems with $160,000 and more. The first filing is due no later than Aug. 29, to cover a six-month period beginning Jan. 1, and the second filing is due no later than Feb. 28, for the six-month period beginning July 1. Like Internal Revenue Service forms, the bigger ones are the more complicated. But that doesn't mean the smallest one is not.

"It's going to cost my members more to fill out the form than it does to pay the [copyright] fee," said Stephen Effros, executive director of the Community Antenna Television Association. Systems using the short form—those having gross receipts less than $41,500 semianually—pay a flat fee of $15, regardless of programs carried. Systems in the two other categories pay according to a schedule of fees—more for the larger ones, less for the smaller.

No one is exempt from filing. All forms have this notice: "Remember: Every cable system in the United States is subject to the compulsory licensing requirements and must file the necessary notices, statements of account, and royalty fees. There are no exceptions. A cable system must file and pay regardless of its size, regardless of whether or not it made a profit, and regardless of whether it carried anything other than local stations."

The forms will represent the most complete compilation of information now required from cable owners. The short form requires basic identification and community information; category of service, number of subscribers and rate; information on television and radio stations carried; a log of substitute programs, number of cable system channels, gross receipts, and more.

Mr. Effros said his members were upset enough at all that, but were "very upset, very upset" over having to pay their $15 (most CATA members have under 1,000 subscribers and will fill out the short form) with a "certified check, cashier's check or money order." They can pay all their bills and taxes with company checks, he said, but now they are "insulted" to find those checks are no good. "It's just one more trip somewhere to do something for the federal government, and it riles them," he said.

NCTA seems to be taking it with a sigh.

"It's a big old horse pill to swallow," Mr. Feldstein said, "but we knew we were going to get it. . . . We knew somehow or another they were going to have to get it out of us."

The forms will be used not only to determine how much cable systems pay, but also how much copyright owners will get paid (one reason the short forms have to be filed out completely, though the fee is a flat $15). Owners file forms to pay and copyright owners file forms to get paid. It is, Mr. Feldstein said, "another piece of the federal layer of form-filling-out."

There were no surprises, he said, because the new copyright law required that the information be compiled and it was just a matter of how it would be compiled.

Both Mr. Feldstein and Mr. Effros said the forms were complicated, possibly overwhelmingly so.

Meanwhile, the cable business is just as new to the copyright office as the account forms are to the cable business. Because no one is sure how the copyright money is going to be distributed, the forms include much information that might not be necessary once a system proves workable.

That means, a copyright office spokesman said, the 12-, 16- and 20-page forms might be simplified after an initial adjustment period.

Disney fare to cable

After offering pay-per-viewing films on Warner Cable's Qube system in Columbus, Ohio, and American Subscription Television's over-the-air operation in Los Angeles, Walt Disney Productions now has made available 10 of its films to the general pay-cable programmers.

They're all live-action, however; Disney has yet to provide access to its animated movies. Already a taker is Home Box Office, which would not say how many films it's bought the rights to or for how much, claiming only a "multimillion-dollar deal." But midweek, Hollywood Home Theater, which programs American Subscription Television, had an agreement in principle beyond pay-per-view, and Showtime, according to Disney, was in advanced discussions.

Cable Briefs

Cox gets Fort Wayne. Cox Cable Communications, Atlanta, announced last week that Citizens Cable of Fort Wayne Inc. has been awarded franchise for CATV system in Fort Wayne, Ind. Citizen Cable is 80%-owned subsidiary of Cox. Citizen Cable's application proposed 550-mile system with 35 channels to pass 62,500 homes.

Joining up, Chattanooga Cable TV Co. has affiliated with Home Box Office pay-TV service. System currently serves 8,800 subscribers, is expected to pass 100,000 homes when construction is completed.
Bolting ballad. Chris Rea, a new artist from England, makes an impressive debut at 38 this week with his single, Fool If You Think It's Over (United Artists). "It's going to be a big record, top 10," says Tom McKay of KING 5 Seattle. "It has broad appeal, but appeals more to the older demographics, 25 plus." Bob Moody of WAKY in Louisville, Ky., says the song is "reminiscent of Garry Rafferty ... an MOR ballad type of thing that's compatible with top 40 or MOR." More movie music. Movie soundtracks have been marking the top of the charts over the last six months and it appears the new "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" soundtrack will not put a halt to the trend: The Got to Get You Into My Life (RSO) cut performed by Earth, Wind and Fire enters "Playlist" at 47 this week. "It has the same basic melody line [as the Beatles version] but the arrangement is more R & B or disco, more in the vein of the current black sound. It's very good," says King's Mr. McKay. As for the "Grease" soundtrack, stations across the country continue to add new cuts, among them Summer Nights (RSO), another John Travolta-Olivia Newton-John duel. Neil Newman of WAFB (United Artists) Reading, Pa., says it "should do well; she really carries the song." Return from Exile. Kiss You All Over (Warner Bros.) by Exile, as the title may suggest; is "a sensuous song," says Don Nordine of KHJ in Great Falls, Mont., "but in good taste." Adam Smasher of WGFJ Evansville, Ind., says "it's almost a funky sound, even a country sound. It's different, there's nothing like it out now ... it's going to be a hit. This will be their first hit [although] they've been together since 1965 or '66."

On stage and behind it: David Susskind

David Susskind has the best of both programming worlds.

He's been in front of the cameras, first with Open End and now with the David Susskind Show, for 20 consecutive years, picking the brains of a variety of personalities ranging from a high-school illiterate to Bertrand Russell. And he's been behind the cameras for longer, producing and packaging programming.

In the first role—which, he says, is "the TV part of my life"—there are the ego rewards of matching wits with the famous, infamous and not-so-famous and the tangible rewards of the fame that comes from that: The booked-solid restaurant suddenly produces a table when the maître d' knows it's Mr. Susskind calling for a reservation, the plumber who comes immediately to the call from the man on the television. And however secondary this role, it is one he expects to continue, he says, "until I keel over."

The greater satisfaction, he insists, comes from his off-camera role. First and foremost, he considers himself a producer. A resume of some of his better known efforts in that regard backup his contention. He has collected 26 Emmys—among them one for Death of a Salesman, one for Ages of Man another for Harry S. Truman: Plain Speaking, three for The Price and 14 for Eleanor and Franklin—and he was associated with such vintage and prestige TV programming as Philco Goodyear Playhouse, Armstrong Circle Theater and Play of the Week. And his producer's credits have appeared with such theatrical movies as Raisin in the Sun, "Requiem for a Heavyweight" and "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore."

Mr. Susskind admits to being less "freewheeling" these days, however. Since Time-Life Films absorbed Talent Associates last year in a stock transaction worth a $3 million, he has had to follow through on "the assumption . . . that I would become a company man." He says he's made the transition more quickly than he expected.

In terms of creativity, he says, nothing has been lost but much has been gained through corporate resources. He says he can "live easily" with the fact that the David Susskind/Talent Associates stamp may be "submerged" under Time-Life credits.

"I'm kind of fed up with the notion of the one-man juggernaut. It never was true," he explains from Time-Life's New York headquarters, adding, "I have a surfeit of personal publicity and attention."

The mark that Mr. Susskind hopes to make on network television for Time-Life this season involves the half-hour magazine show, People. It will run on CBS-TV, where Time-Life, via Mr. Susskind, has the half-hour sitcom On Our Own (an average 29 share last season wasn't enough to sustain it, however). Other upcoming Time-Life Television productions: two TV miniseries, The Life and Times of Robert F. Kennedy and John Dean's Blind Ambition, and the TV movie, Orchard Children, Circle of Children.

Now that Time-Life offices have been opened in Los Angeles, Mr. Susskind expects his time to be divided between the two coasts. Mr. Susskind, the ardent defender of New York, plans to continue to make Manhattan his home ("certainly far more invigorating a mental climate than California") but in production terms, he admits, "it's over" for New York.

The New York-versus-Los Angeles debate is more than a native New Yorker's pride for Mr. Susskind. It led him to his "avocation" as a talk-show host. As a New York producer in the late fifties, he took that city's side on the old Tex and Jinx show, debating the Los Angeles representative, movie producer Otto Preminger, about which city was the true cultural capital.

The late Ted Cott, vice president of programming for the then-commercial channel 13 (now WNET-TV New York) saw the making of a talk-show host, and after some prodding, Mr. Susskind recalls, he saw it too.

Open End, was launched in September 1958 in a format that enabled Mr. Susskind and his guests to continue talking until he felt his audience had had enough. It was scheduled at 10 p.m. Sunday nights, the "Spangled Banner" and benediction followed.

The longest show featured Sidney Poitier, Harry Belafonte, Shelley Winters and Anthony Franciosa: four hours, 10 minutes. Probably the most famous program had a single guest, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, in December 1960—"not my shining hour," Mr. Susskind says, recalling the pickets and threats he faced.

By the time Open End appeared (it was to last in the untimed format for a half-dozen years), Mr. Susskind had been in the TV business about a decade. Raised in Boston, Harvard-educated and a Navy veteran, he had worked as a publicist for Warner Bros. and Universal, as a talent agent for Century Artists Ltd. and a package agent for MCA.

Talent Associates was formed in 1952 by Mr. Susskind and Alfred Levy, and it was that company with Mr. Susskind as president that came into the Time-Life fold last year.

It was his early days as a television producer that Mr. Susskind looks back on as his best of times creatively. The times when he got Dame Judith Anderson on a channel 13 Play of the Week, "Medea," worked with the writers and directors who, Mr. Susskind says, were a "who's who of the golden age of television" and had his hand at the same time in "six to eight shows, 20-30 specials."

There's another world where Mr. Susskind feels himself fortunate (and for this knock on wood after mentioning it), his family. Five daughters, the youngest from his second marriage still at home, his son, Andrew, who is an assistant producer with Time-Life and will be its London liaison in the fall, and his wife of 12 years, Joyce Davidson Susskind, a talk show host herself, in Canada.

Underneath his public veneer, Mr. Susskind considers himself "a very private man," not a golfer or tennis player and one who is likely to "decline 10 parties for every one I accept," reads a lot, and goes on "movie binges" with his wife—hitting two or three theaters on a Saturday or Sunday and probably having no trouble getting in.

Heavy handed

In the overheated competition among the television networks, the participants loudly trumpet almost any particularity, however small, that falls their way. But CBS-TV last week achieved a first that it would just as soon have seen claimed by another, if it had to be claimed at all. CBS-TV became the first television network, convicted of an FCC infraction, to be penalized by a short-term renewal of an owned-station license.

The penalty was severe, but it cannot be said to have been administered in haste or transitory passion. The tennis matches that CBS-TV falsely labeled "winner take all" were broadcast three years ago. The mislabeling was reported in this magazine and in Sports Illustrated after the event. Government interest was aroused only when the House Communications Subcommittee, during a general inquiry into televised sports, ran across the faded history of the tennis promotion.

CBS can take little pride in the managerial lapses that permitted the false promotion to take place or in the somewhat fuzzy explanations that company officials presented in the early stages of the House questioning. After the incident had turned into a full-blown FCC investigation, the higher levels of CBS management interested themselves in the case, and last April Gene F. Jankowski, president of the CBS/Broadcast Group, went on the television network to make a corporate apology to the public.

As noted on this page at the time, the apology came a little late and not until the FCC had issued a preliminary notice of censure and threat of harsher penalties to come. Still, it was more than a casual act of contrition for the president of the company's broadcast division to ask forgiveness before a nationwide audience.

That, it seemed to us then and so seems now, was enough to settle the matter.

With the lesser punishment of fine or censure, the FCC could have as strongly made its point that truthfulness must prevail in broadcast advertising, promotion and programming, no matter how intense the competition gets.

Numbers game

The inherent absurdity of the FCC's attempts to measure radio station service by fixed standards was demonstrated in its recent assessment of a $5,000 fine against WMAL(AM) Washington for failure to log total commercial time on the station's morning drive-time show. Even the commission had to gulp when it applied its logging rule in this case. Indeed it told the staff to "review the rule from the standpoint of its current usefulness in protecting the public against overcommercialization," as the instructions were described by Commissioner Abbott Washburn, who voted with the majority.

The alleged violation occurred in the Harden and Weaver Show, a sort of Washington monument in radio. For years Frank Harden and Jackson Weaver have dominated drive time with a free-wheeling mixture of gags, satire, recorded music and commercials, many of them ad libbed by the performers themselves. Keeping a stopwatch on a Harden and Weaver dialogue is like trying to skewer butterflies in flight.

Somewhere in the FCC, however, stolid bureaucrats with tape recorders monitored the Messrs. Harden and Weaver for two weeks in the kind of governmental exercise that explains the taxpayers' revolt. The monitors found commercials to be within the limit of 18 minutes per hour that the FCC borrowed from the National Association of Broadcasters radio code. But they counted more commercial time than the station logged. Aha, a violation.

As stated by Commissioners Washburn and Joseph Fogarty in explanation of their embarrassed votes to fine WMAL, the FCC had little choice but to impose a sanction for the transgression that its literal-minded staff had brought to its attention. As long as the logging rule is on the books, the commission must apply it even-handedly.

In the WMAL case, however, the rule itself has attracted the ridicule that it deserves. This just may prod the FCC into the reconsideration that Mr. Washburn promised.

NAB President Vincent T. Wasilewski last week used the fine as a reason to revive the association's petition of last April for the FCC to abandon the total practice of reviewing commercial volume at license renewal time (Broadcasting, April 10). Mr. Wasilewski asserted that "each radio station has its own set of problems, most of which are unique to the community they serve." And he added: "Those factors make it impossible for the federal government to establish a set of standards which provide equality under the law."

Well, of course, Mr. Wasilewski is right. In fairness, however, it should be explained that if it is wrong for the government to insist on a standard of 18 minutes an hour for every radio station with its own set of "unique" commercial problems, it is equally wrong for the NAB to prescribe the same standard for every station subscribing to its code.

As reported here a week ago, WMAL has received hundreds of communications from listeners objecting to the fine. One wrote: "What's the country coming to?"

Good question.

Then and now

A figure from the past arose briefly from retirement the other day to remind broadcasters of old troubles. James C. Petillo, now 87, put in an appearance at the annual convention of the American Federation of Musicians which he ruled during the heyday of live music in radio and early television. There are veteran broadcasters who bear scars from negotiations with the man who was then the Caesar of music.

At the same AFM convention, there were also notices of trouble ahead. Victor W. Fuentealba, the incumbent president of the union, rallied members to support legislation to create a copyright royalty for performers and manufacturers of recorded music. Mr. Fuentealba's speech was a reminder that although the performer royalty bill is unlikely to see action in this Congress, forces are mustering to revive it next year. And those forces are formidable.

The National Association of Broadcasters is prudent to keep this bill at the top of its preventive priorities.

"When you said you wanted a career in television, I didn't think you meant watching it."
It begins with an end. A requiem mass for four firemen whose lives went up in flames.

It's the opening scene of "We're No Heroes." "One of the best and most honest portrayals of the work of a fire fighter that we have ever seen," raved the president of the I.A.F.F.

It's the kind of film that mists your eyes and puts a lump in your throat. It's the kind of film that wins awards: a Cine Gold Eagle, a Gold Waffle, the IAFF Competition First Prize, the White House News Photographers Association Award.

But most important, it's the kind of film that creates change.

The pressure to close firehouses in the District of Columbia was fierce. The reasons cited were budgetary, but the community was incensed. So the WJLA-TV 7 team that produced this film lived for a month with the men of Platoon 2, Truck 3, Engine 16. Then followed them into the hell on earth that they call their job. The firehouses stayed open.

"I've never seen a better documentary on the fire service," said Fire Department Sergeant Dan Wetsel. "I smiled through my tears and then I cried through my smile..." said someone like you.

Television should be more than soap operas and situation comedies.
